President Vetoes Bill For Parity Farm Prices

Message Warns Of 'Inflationary Tornado;' Congress Rebellion Started

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

With the warning that a general increase in either prices or wages might set off "an inflationary tornado," President Roosevelt yesterday vetoed the Bankhead bill, immediately starting a congressional rebellion that even Administration stalwarts concede may result in an overriding of his rejection.

Senator Bankhead (Democrat) of Alabama gained permission to have the measure brought up Tuesday, and declared a determined effort would be made to have the desires of Congress sustained. Majority Leader Barkley (Democrat) of Kentucky was pessimistic that the veto would hold in the Senate—but said perhaps the House might vote with the President. The "city" vote is much larger in the House, he remarked, and urban consumers would feel effects of the bill most.

In his 2500-word veto message to the Senate, the President declared no group should expect to improve its living standards during the war. The Bankhead bill, which would make mandatory the pircing of parity price ceilings on farm product without consideration of Government payments to farmers, would give the farmer an "unwarranted bonus at the expense of the consumer," he said.

Would Send Costs Up

While figures vary as to effect of the bill on the cost of living, the Chief Executive asserted it would deprive the Government of power to prevent increases that might send food costs up 5 per cent and add "several hundred million dollars to the cost of feeding the armed forces and of supplying our allies."

He declared the War Labor Board is "resolutely adhering" to the Little Steel formula for holding wage rates in line—but said it would be impossible to hold this line if the cost of living is further increased "by action of the Congress in departing from its declared policy to stabilize all prices and wages."

Although supporters of the measure have contended the Bankhead bill reaffirms the intention of Congress when the Price Control Act was passed, the President declared it departs from the declared and plain intention of the act.

Thomas Against Subsidies

Granting that some points of the argument are controversial and that some Congressmen are sincere in their interpretation that framers of the Control Act never intended Government payments should be counted into the parity price formula, the President said: "It cannot be denied that the Bankhead bill takes from the Government the power to prevent very substantial increases in food prices. That is its only purpose."

Senator Thomas (Democrat) of Oklahoma, who said he would vote to override the veto, last night declared the President's message "presupposes that this Congress is going to vote additional subsidies to the farmers this year."

"Personally, I am not going to vote for these subsidies. I do not believe farmers have gotten their prices up to the place where they are in a fair relationship to wages.

"The purpose of the Price Control Act is to keep prices within reason, and that is being done, but it is not reasonable to expect the Congress to vote to take additional money out of the Treasury for farmers at a time like this, and I don't believe Congress is going to do it," he said, expressing belief the Administration wants to continue the subsidy payments "so as to have a hold on the farmers for election purposes."

The Department of Agriculture has asked for the farmers for next year 400 million dollars for soil conservation payments and 159 million dollars in AAA parity pay

Points May Be Cut

Heavy Sales of Meat Expected Here Today as Stocks Pile Up

By Linton Burkett
Post Staff Writer

Ice boxes and showcases were bulging with a wide variety of all kinds of fresh meats in Washington butcher shops yesterday as the first week of rationing drew to a close.

While there was some improvement yesterday in business, dealers at the O Street and the Eastern Markets said they still were heavily stocked and indications were that meat would be sold widely late today either at reduced value or points would be ignored.

Already, according to reports, some butchers in the city have sold meat at low point value, or without demanding any points, to prevent the food from spoiling.

Under OPA regulations this is permitted if the dealer notifies OPA within 24 hours of his action. The OPA will then permit him to recover stamps sacrificed up to 2 per cent of his entire allotment.

It was understood reliably the weekly rationing is preliminary, and that officials plan to put the rationing on a monthly basis eventually. Current OPA announcements on weekly point values cover the five weeks ending May 1, but whether OPA plans to make rationing a monthly matter starting May 2 has not been announced.

In the meantime Washington was preparing to dig deeper in its pocket to pay more for milk as the tentative agreement of the Department of Agriculture permitting a boost in prices to producers of 43 cents a hundredweight was sent to Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes for approval.

As soon as he gives the price increase the green light the OPA will establish the local milk price ceiling which will be at least 1 cent higher than at present, it was explained.

Meat dealers said the increased business yesterday was due largely to the fact that the average householder had eaten all the roasts and fresh hams he had been able to buy before rationing went into effect.

Expect Increase Today

The optimistic ones expected a still larger increase today when the housewives will go out with all the family ration books to buy the Sunday dinner.

Julius B. Gay, wholesale poultry dealer, said no shipments of dressed poultry yet were received from the West and as a result his business had been cut 60 per cent.

"If this situation continues for the next 10 days, we are going to be forced out of business," he said.

He said his firm could sell easily 3000 chickens daily at the present time and is able to secure, from nearby chicken farmers, about 1200

Kennedy Quits WLB In Coal Case

Resignation Reported As Clash With Lewis On Mine Workers' Pay Demands Threatens

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, was reported yesterday to have resigned his post as labor member of the War Labor Board in a surprise move linked to demands of Mine Leader John L. Lewis for a $2-a-day wage increase for 600,000 coal miners.

Meanwhile, indications of a rapidly approaching tangle between the War Labor Board and Lewis increased as WLB gave consideration to the advisability of assuming jurisdiction over the mine wage dispute.

The board was said to have discussed the question out of concern that Lewis and the coal operators might arrive at an agreement through negotiation which WLB would be forced to outlaw on stabilization grounds.

Hopeful of Agreement

The concern was said to have developed as a result of comments by Dr. John R. Steelman, director of the United States Conciliation Service, that he was hopeful of persuading the operators and Lewis to sign an agreement. WLB members were said to have assumed that Lewis was not prepared to sign any agreement involving a substantial retreat from his original demands.

Kennedy's resignation from the board was said to have been sent to President Roosevelt with the explanation that he could no longer continue in the post in view of stabilization policies followed by WLB, particularly its use of the "Little Steel" wage yardstick.

If applied to the mine case, the "Little Steel" formula would work to deny the requested boost.

WLB officials stated they had not been advised of Kennedy's reported resignation, and efforts to secure confirmation at the White House late last night were fruitless.

Out of Deliberations

It was believed that Lewis had asked Kennedy to take the action so that he could be free to charge that the board has been prejudiced against him in this case. Kennedy has refrained from taking part in board deliberations since it held a public hearing on the outlaw strike in the anthracite coal region in January.

Kennedy was appointed to the board when it was set up in January of last year as one of four labor members to the 12-man tripartite body. Appointed originally to represent the C. I. O., he continued to sit on the board after Lewis took his miners out of the C. I. O. in the fall of last year.

It was considered likely that Kennedy took the opportunity presented by his letter of resignation to inform the President of the U. M. W.'s objections to present stabilization policies. Lewis has contended that application of the "arbitrary" wage formula would in effect deny the mine workers a "judicial" hearing on his wage demands.

Similar Move Recalled

At a recent hearing of the Truman Committee, Lewis asserted that the labor-management no-strike pact was "not necessarily binding" since WLB adopted the "Little Steel" formula.

Reports of Kennedy's withdrawal recalled a somewhat similar move made by Lewis with respect to the now-defunct National Defense Me-

265 Italians Persuade 5 Yanks to Seize Them

By Michael Chinigo
By International News Service

With American Forces Advancing on the Gafsa-Gabes Highway, April 1 (Delayed).—Today I saw five American doughboys who were bringing in 265 Italian prisoners. And these five Yanks had been prisoners of the Italians yesterday afternoon.

The American quintet, the crew of a tank, included Corpl. Werner Lefebre of Cincinnati, Corpl. Joseph Blossom of St. Paul, Minn., and Pvts. Arbie Daniels of Napfor, Ky.; Joe Philippe of Pontiac, Mich., and Henry Ecklof of Brookline, Mass.

The story of their capture and capturing was a strange one Daniels told it:

"Our tank, under the command of Lefebre, went through the minefield unscathed, but overturned in a narrow wadi. Blossom's wrist was hurt and Ecklof's nose was cut.

"We climbed out, to be confronted by the Italians. They offered to surrender. We declined, because in our dazed condition we didn't know exactly where we were.

"One of the Italian officers then decided to take us prisoners, 'for an hour or so, until you can take us in.'"

Blossom took up the story:

"We were taken up a hill to a dugout. The Italians left us our personal belongings, but cleaned out everything from our tank. We spent the night with them, warm and comfortable."

Ecklof, pointing to his nose, said: "The Italians' medico poulticed my cuts and an officer fed us anisette, wine, salmon and dry bread." He explained they had no water because the Germans had taken all their vehicles, leaving them no means of going after water."

Philippe said that the main American forces moved up at 11:30 this morning.

"All the intervening time," he said, "the Italians kept asking when we would take them prisoner so they could be shipped to the United States.

"'The hell with Mussolini,' they said.

"The leader kept calling me 'bambino,'" said Daniels, "and kept insisting on drawing straws to see who would play prisoner and who would play captor.

"Our artillery was landing darned close, making things rather uncomfortable. The officer explained that they had had to put up with our sharpshooting for days, and said it was taking a heavy toll.

"We were allowed to handle their arms and grenades. By morning the Germans had disappeared. The Italian officer explained, 'That's the usual practice—leave the Italians behind.'"

When the American quintet at last relented and agreed to take the Italians prisoner, they brought them to a tank destroyer unit.

Moving Up

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, April 2.—British First Army troops in the north fought their way toward the Axis strongholds of Tunis and Bizerte today while Gen. Bernard L. Montgomery's Eighth Army gathered force in the south for more smashing blows coupled with the continuing massive air assaults on Marshal Erwin Rommel's divisions retreating up the Tunisian east coast.

(American forces scored a seven-mile advance in a sudden thrust east of Maknassy in Tunisia, the London Daily Mail reported in a dispatch.

(The Yanks now are locked in combat with the last large nest of enemy resistance at a point in front of the coastal plain, the Mail added. The dispatch said that a second American prong threatening the Axis flank in southern Tunisia also was engaged in heavy fighting.)

Axis forces in the north were reported offering little resistance and having rich booty behind as the British pushed through El Aouana Station, 6 miles east of Sedjenane, and moved on to occupy strategic heights between there and Mateur.

(The Algiers radio said British and French forces in the north had "left Sedjenane well behind" and were slashing at the retreating Germans "in the vicinity of Mateur," which is only about 18 miles south of Bizerte. They thus would have regained almost all the ground lost when Col. Gen Jurgen von Arnim's Axis forces sprang an offensive a month ago.)

Lull in Ground Strife

An Allied communique described the Tunisian ground fighting as "generally quieter than yesterday," but told of terrific punishment being dealt the Axis from the air. In one raid on El Maou Air Field at Sfax on the coast 100 light and medium Allied bombers plastered the strategic base with a shower of bombs that must have destroyed or damaged virtually everything within the target area.

As in the Wednesday raid by nearly 100 American Flying Fortresses on the Sardinian port of Cagliari, not a single Allied bomber or escort was lost in the damaging assault. The Axis was unable even to get a fighter plane in the air to defend the Sfax Airbase.

Montgomery's forces were be-

D.C. Pay Raise Bill Approved By President

Police, Firemen, Teachers' Benefit Under New Law

The President has signed the District pay raise bill, the White House announced yesterday, removing the last barrier between $300 annual "cost of living" wage boosts and the pay checks of several thousand municipal employes.

The new law will provide increases for all groups of local workers whose wages were not adjusted by the Federal overtime bill, but the chief beneficiaries will be policemen, firemen and school teachers. These three groups—plus the White House and Park Police forces and a scattering of other unclassified District of Columbia employes—will all get the $300 raise.

The total of raise plus salary, however, cannot exceed $5000.

Provision also was made for a 10 per cent base pay hike for per diem workers whose wages are fixed by law, but who have received no raise.

Moreover, those who get the $300 raise have $100 already coming to them as back pay, inasmuch as the new law is retroactive to December 1. It runs till June 30, 1944.

Affixing of the Chief Executive's signature to the bill marked the end of legislative and executive maneuvering over local pay adjustment that has lasted more than a year. The measure was launched in the Seventy-seventh Congress as a raise for police and firemen only, and during its Capitol career has been subjected to one presidential veto and more than half a dozen complete rewritings by Congress.

Signing of the measure was held up last week when the White House found that a pair of allegedly important commas had been left out of the official print of the bill, and hasty congressional action had to be taken to correct the error.

House Votes Drastic Curbs On Saboteurs

Bill Provides Death Penalty for Willful Acts Hostile to U. S.

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

A powerful legislative weapon against enemy saboteurs which would empower courts to invoke the death penalty against persons convicted of willfully committing hostile acts against wartime America yesterday passed the House on a voice vote.

Recommended by Attorney General Biddle as a means of remedying deficiencies in existing statutes covering acts of sabotage and espionage, but attacked by many legislators as a "snooper" or "gestapo" bill, the measure went to the Senate where Chairman Van Nuys of the Judiciary Committee promised early attention.

The House acted after three days of debate and amid scenes of controversy and confusion that clearly manifested widespread bipartisan misgivings that the measure seriously threatened curtailment of civil liberties.

Safeguards Inserted

In recognition of this fear House Judiciary Committee Chairman Sumners (Democrat) of Texas, gave his support to safeguarding amendments which were approved.

These were not enough to satisfy outspoken New Deal critics, who gained acceptance of an amendment, proposed by Representative Fish (Republican) of New York, to prevent use of the measure to throttle attacks on the "domestic or foreign policies of the Administration."

Representative Short (Republican) of Missouri, attempted at the last minute to send the bill back to the committee. His motion to recommit lost, 133-to-90.

As finally approved, 129-to-95, the Fish amendment, backed by anti-New Dealers in Republican and Democratic ranks, was drafted in the following language:

"Nothing in this act shall be construed to prevent any citizen or any newspaper or other publication at any time from freely discussing or openly criticizing the domestic or foreign policies of the Administration or the Federal Government, or of any public official, or from discussing or criticizing any existing or proposed law, regulation, directive or executive order."

Vigorous floor argument centered on two provisions of the bill. The first of these would subject to maximum penalty of 10 years

Alexandrian Buys $16,000 In Bonds for Look at Jap Sub

A neat little Japanese gadget that didn't do so well for the Japs rolled into Alexandria, Va., yesterday from Japan by way of Pearl Harbor and sold $1,061,650 worth of war bonds during the day. In the first 20 minutes $40,000 worth were auctioned off.

Mounted on a special truck, the two-man submarine captured December 7, 1941, intact with its crew, underwent a whilwind reception in front of the Alexandria Postoffice. Last night, after it had been inspected for four hours by a steady stream of bond and stamp buyers, it left Alexandria for Washington, where it will go on display today. First Alexandrian to have a look at the midget sub was George W. Herring, lumberman, who paid $16,000 in bonds for the privilege. During the bidding which occupied the first 20 minutes after the sub went on display, five competitors pledged themselves to buy bonds totalling $40,000. Herring's bid was only $1000 over the $15,000 offered by Taylor Burke.

Despite a harsh wind which chilled spectators, bond buyers, auctioneers and officials alike, a crowd of several thousand gathered to see the submarine and the parade which escorted it to its post of honor in front of the Postoffice.

The parade was headed by the band of the Thirty-first Engineers of Fort Belvoir and included half-track scout cars, an engineer bat-

General Ramey Missing in South Pacific

Officer and Crew Fail To Return From Bombing Mission

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in Australia (Saturday), April 3.—Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced today that Brig. Gen. Howard K. Ramey, commander of the Fifth Bomber Command of the Fifth United States Airforce, failed to return from a recent mission.

"He and his crew therefore are missing in action," the announcement stated.

General Ramey is the sixth United States general to be killed, listed as missing, or wounded in the war.

He succeeded Brig. Gen. Kenneth M. Walker of Washington, D. C., who was lost on a bombing mission over Rabaul, New Britain, last January.

General Ramey was 47 and his home town was Fresno, Calif.

He served in the Signal Corps, aviation branch, in the first World War and was recognized as one of the outstanding heavy bombardment officers of the United States Air Corps.

Mother and Sister Of Ramey Live Here

General Ramey's mother, Mrs. John Allen Ramey, and his sister, Miss Elizabeth Ramey, live at 2000 Sixteenth Street Northwest. Miss Ramey is private secretary to Commissioner John Russell Young and has been employed in that capacity since she came here from Waynesboro, Miss. in 1936.

The general, who was at one time stationed at Bolling Field, married Miss Martha Moore of Sandy Spring, Md., who is now living in Fresno, Calif. They have two daughters, Miss Margaret Ramey, 18, and Miss Elizabeth Ramey, 16, of San Francisco.

Greatest U. S. Aerial Force Hits Rommel

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Most of the combat planes of the Ninth and Twelfth United States Army Air Force—forming the greatest concentration of American air power ever to go into action over a land front—have been attacking the retreating Axis troops in Tunisia, Army air officials disclosed yesterday.

In one day alone—Tuesday—American fighter and medium bomber planes flew 1399 sorties against Rommel's fleeing troops, the War Department said. (A sortie is an attack by a single plane.)

Despite hazardous flying weather, B-25 Mitchell medium bombers, P-38 Lightning, P-39 Airacobras, P-40 Warhawks, American fighters, and British Spitfires flown by United States pilots harassed enemy troop columns, supply concentrations, air fields and transports.

Low Level Attacks

Low-hanging clouds of sand prevented high altitude attacks by our four-engined heavy bombers, but the smaller planes dived through the wind-driven sand, and delivered their attacks from very low levels, the department said.

One flight of American fighters discovered a jam of Axis vehicles in strafing the forces retreating from the Mareth Line. They destroyed or damaged 250 vehicles and inflicted many casualties in this single attack.

The day-long continuous assault was made possbile by simultaneous use of the Twelfth Air Force, based in North Africa, and the Ninth Air Force, based in the Western Desert, on the same target, thus illustrating the flexibility of air power. Some of the craft shuttled back and forth from their base, many making more than one sortie.

Nine Axis Planes Downed

Besides the damage done to enemy ground forces, the American planes successfully met Axis air interception. Curtiss Warhawks, it war said, shot down nine enemy planes, damaged three and scored five "probables," with a loss of only one United States aircraft.

Meanwhile, dispatches from abroad credited the Ninth United States Air Force with dropping 1,500,000 pounds of bombs on Axis objectives during March. The Associated Press in London quoted a Reuters report from Cairo as also saying that American fighters of the Ninth Air Force destroyed 10 Axis

850,000 Nazis Died in Winter Drive, Reds Say

343,525 Captured During Push West, Soviet Asserts

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), April 3.—Germany suffered 1,193,525 casualties—850,000 dead and 343,525 captured—in the great Red Army winter offensive which swept back the Germans to the west as much as 435 miles and freed 185,328 square miles of Soviet territory, Russia announced early today in a special communique.

At Stalingrad on the Volga where the Russian offensive began last November, the Russians "inflicted on the German Fascist troops the biggest defeat in the history of wars," said the bulletin recorded by the Soviet monitor.

In addition to these powerful blows to Adolf Hitler's military manpower, the Russians announced this toll of German equipment in the period between last November 10 and March 31:

	Captured	Destroyed	Total
Planes	1490	3600	5090
Tanks	4670	4520	9190
Guns	15,860	4500	20,360

Other booty reported captured included 30,705 machine guns, 9835 mortars, over one-half million rifles, 17 million shells, 128 million cartridges, 123,000 trucks, 890 locomotives, 22,000 railway carriages, 1825 dumps of various kinds of war materiel, as well as many radio transmitters, motorcycles, and other military equipment."

The regular midnight communique disclosed that a Czecho-Slovakian military unit formed in Russia under the command of Colonel Svoboda now is in action against the Germans on the northern Donets River front in the Ukraine and during yesterday's operations the

Gen. Patton Weeps for Officer Killed in Trench by Nazi Bomb

By Harold V. Boyle
Associated Press Staff Writer

With American Forces East of El Guetar, Tunisia, April 1 (Delayed).—Capt. Richard Jenson, 27-year-old Pasadena, Calif., officer, was killed in action today, and that hardened old campaigner, Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton jr., wept.

Jenson had been an aide for almost three years to General Patton, the American ground commander in Tunisia, and was one of the most popular officers at American headquarters.

He was killed when a heavy Stuka bomb struck within an arm's length of a slit trench in which he sought shelter during a raid near a front-line command.

Patton, known affectionately by the soldiers as "Old Blood and Guts" and regarded as one of the toughest men in the army, attended funeral services in the Gafsa military cemetery in the afternoon. Afterward in his office his voice broke and his eyes dimmed with tears as he paid tribute to his young friend and aide.

"He was one of a family which had been friends of my family for three generations, and he was my first aide when I became general," Patton said. "He had been with me ever since."

Invasion Defenses Rushed by Germans

They're Tough

Jeeps Can't Match Mules In Tunisia

By Harold V. Boyle
Associated Press Staff Writer

With United States forces east of El Guetar, Tunisia, April 1 (Delayed).—In hills where even jeeps can't navigate, a mule pack train is being used to supply an advanced United States Infantry group along the Gabes road.

"Our boys spent three years practicing amphibious landings, but we learned how to be mountaineers in less than three weeks," said one officer of the First Division.

"These boys are so far in the hills and the terrain is so rough we can not follow them with anything on wheels. So we are packing them in supplies, rations, water and ammunition by mule back.

Hiding in Caves

"We already have cleaned out most of the heights bordering the Gabes road, but there still are some groups of infantry and observers hiding in caves and ravines and reporting our movements by radio, thus tipping our hand to the enemy's armor and artillery. Our boys are wiping them out as quickly as they find them, but it is almost a needle in the haystack job to comb them from mountains as rugged as these."

Also slowing the drive in the valley zone were the wadis—dry river beds—which offered perfect entrenchment for German artillery and armored forces. The battle toward the sea now rages from wadi to wadi with the enemy backing up only when forced out by concentrated artillery shelling against which the German mobile 88-millimeter guns duel all the way.

"Each enemy position we take we find has been well wired and dug in—in some cases they excavated full-size underground chambers to give them more protection," said an infantry officer.

"We are sending in our infantry to move them out and keep down casualties among our armor from artillery fire."

Nazis Bombed Gafsa

For three successive nights the Germans also bombed Gafsa and an advanced American position in a "round-the-clock effort to stop the Stars and Stripes" tide of victory.

Their flares burned many minutes, and combined with antiaircraft fire the sight made a weird pattern of flowery flames into which one Junkers-88 flew and then fell to earth like a singed moth. The bombs caused small damage, however.

American Fliers Bag 13 Nazi Planes In African Battles

At An Advanced United States Air Base in Southern Tunisia, April 1 (Delayed) (AP).—Led by the blazing guns of their 28-year-old commander, Col. William W. Momyer, of Seattle, Wash., who knocked down four German Stukas, a group of P-40 pilots bagged 13 Nazi planes in fighter sweeps yesterday and today, raising their victory string to 34 since March 25.

Colonel Momyer increased his record to eight.

Americans flying P-40's, P-39's and Spitfires in their sector of the Tunisian battlefront have smashed down 55 Nazi aircraft since March 21 in an unrelenting campaign to destroy Axis airports and wipe all enemy planes from the skies.

Tied with Col. Momyer for first honors in the race for supremacy in the southern Tunisia "Nazi clay pigeon league" is Maj. Levi R. Chase, 25, of Cortland, N. Y., one of his squadron commanders, who destroyed two Messerschmitt 109's in today's fighting.

11 British Planes Tackle Big Jap Force in India

New Delhi, April 2 (INS).—Outnumbered more than three-to-one, 11 British Hurricanes yesterday intercepted a strong force of Japanese fighters escorting 30 bombers in a raid on the Indian town of Feni, in southeastern Bengal Province.

Five of the raiders were shot down, three were probably destroyed and several others were damaged by the British airmen, who lost only one Hurricane, a communique announced today.

Other British fighters attacked the Jap-held airfield at Magwe, Burma, setting fire to buildings and machine-gunning supply sampans in the Chindwin River.

South of France Beaches Guarded With Barbed Wire

By Blake Sullivan
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, April 2.—Keeping one eye on the progress of the Allied armies in Tunisia, the Germans and Italians are reported continually strengthening the coastal defenses of Europe, particularly those of what Prime Minister Churchill calls the "underbelly" in Italy and southern France, in preparation to meet invasion.

Dispatches to London newspapers today reported that persons living along the coasts have been warned to move inland. The fashionable Riviera resorts have been converted into fortresses or razed to clear the way for guns.

The Germans have put thousands of French workers on the job of constructing blockhouses and gun emplacements with commandeered French materials.

Swiss correspondents have cabled reports that barbed wire has been strung hastily along Mediterranean beaches.

Nazis Collect Boats

Other information reaching London from Toulon and Marseille by way of Switzerland confirmed previous reports that German inspectors are making a survey of boats, including even motor launches, all of which are being made seaworthy—apparently for the use of Marshal Erwin Rommel should he attempt a "Dunkerque" from Tunisia.

An Italian national councilor, Umberto Guglielmotto in a Rome broadcast said that Italian measures for the "militarization" of every citizen "are necessary at this moment which is decisive for the history of Italy."

Italians must adapt themselves to the climate of war, he warned ominously.

Heads Italian Navy

Later the Rome radio broadcast an announcement that Admiral Carlo Bergamini had been appointed commander in chief of Italian naval battle forces and that Admiral Eduardo Somigli had been named commander in chief of naval forces protecting merchant traffic.

Such a development was considered significant, since the status of the Italian fleet has become an important issue with the Allies pressing toward victory in Tunisia.

In a dispatch from Zurich, Switzerland, Reuters reported that German Labor Commissioner Fritz Sauckel had demanded that France supply the Reich with 150,000 more workers.

The dispatch said 50,000 of the workers would be sent to Sicily and the remainder employed on French Mediterranean coastal fortifications.

The Berlin radio announced that more than 500,000 Frenchmen were transferred to German armament factories in 1942.

The London Daily Sketch declared that German civilians are "flooding out of Spain" and added that "diplomatic observers regard this as a good sign." The newspaper pointed out in its column, "Inside Information," that "Germany would not be withdrawing these men, it is argued, if she still had designs on Spain and intended to demand right of way through the peninsula to North Africa."

While the recent 100-Fortress raid on Sardinia was interpreted here as defining the possible route of an Axis escape attempt in Tunisia, unofficial observers believed it more likely that the Nazis in Africa would fight to the last man in order to allow more time to build up the defenses of the continent.

Swiss dispatches indicated that Hitler may have ordered Rommel's Africa Corps to fight to the death, but suggested that Rommel himself would be spared. If the Field Marshal escaped from Africa, these dispatches indicated, he would be named commander in chief of the entire southern European coast.

Special Train Dedicates New Chicago Subway

Chicago, April 2 (AP).—A newly-painted, specially decorated eight-car train made a dedication trip through the first unit of Chicago's 64 million dollar subway today with a lot of fanfare but no cash fare straphangers.

Mayor Edward J. Kelly headed the 400 officials free riders. They traveled from the North Side ramp connection with the elevated system under the Chicago River and State Street to the Jackson Boulevard subway station in the loop.

Subway engineers said the subway would go into public service "soon," although its connection with the South Side "El" at Sixteenth Street isn't finished.

U. S. Planes Hit Rommel Hard

planes, probably destroyed 7 and damaged at least 11. Heavy bombers shot down 3 more enemy planes.

The International News Service quoted the same source as crediting the Ninth Air Force with sinking 43 Axis ships and destroying 101 enemy planes since it began operations in the Middle East last June. Dropping 3,500,000 pounds of bombs, the American planes also probably sank 20 other Axis ships and damaged 27, and probably destroyed 47 enemy planes and damaged 63, it was said.

Patton's Armor Advances

lieved ready to resume their battering of Rommel's rear guard in the new positions taken up by the Germans and Italians about 24 miles north of Gabes. A report from the Eighth Army said "winkling out" was proceeding, which was translated here freely to indicate that remaining enemy pockets of resistance north and west of Oudref, itself 12 miles north of Gabes, were being wiped out and the British were preparing to continue their hounding of Rommel's stubbornly withdrawing troops.

Union Achieved, Nazis Say

(The German radio said Rommel's present defense line was 15 miles north of Gabes and said it represented "the achievement of final union between Rommel's forces and those of Von Arnim—the original aim of a long-prepared plan of operation." The suggestion was that Von Arnim's troops now were in position to assist Rommel's fighting retreat.)

The Germans threw their armor into a counterattack today against Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr.'s, American forces near a point where the Gabes-Gafsa road joins another road running south to Kebili, which the French captured two days ago. The road junction had been in American hands several days.

(A Reuters dispatch to London said "Friday morning's German tank attack near Kebili Road was completely abortive.")

It was authoritatively denied here that Patton's column advancing east of El Guetar had made a junction with the British Eighth Army as announced by the Algiers radio.

(The Algiers station later revised its reports that the Americans and British were in joint pursuit of Rommel to say that "American elements advancing 25 kilometers southeast of El Guetar are trying to contact General Montgomery's left wing," adding that "the road is not very practicable and the advance is slow.")

Strong patrol activity by Americans and French in the Ousseltia Valley region in north central Tunisia was reported to have forced the enemy to fall back gradually to the hills to the east.

As Lieut. Gen. K. A. N. Anderson's First Army moved on Bizerte, the Allied air force continued to pound the great fortified naval base in an effort to destroy its usefulness as a potential escape port for the estimated 200,000 Axis troops being squeezed into northern Tunisia.

British four-motored Wellington bombers shook the base with two-ton explosives and showers of incendiaries last night.

More Bases Bombed

Other Allied bombers escorted by Spitfires bombed La Fauconnerie air field, 35 miles northwest of Sfax, and the air base of El Djem, midway between Sfax and Sousse, leaving many fires burning. Five Messerschmitts were just taking off when the bombers roared over La Fauconnerie. Two were hit and damaged on the ground and two other were damaged in a subsequent dogfight with Spitfighters. Nine enemy aircraft were reported shot down during the day, against an Allied loss of four.

As reports from the ground fighting said the American had launched a new attack in the area of Maknassy, 34 miles from the coast at a point well above where Rommel's men now are making a stand, observers here stressed the aid being given the Eighth Army by General Patton's columns. They pointed out that the Americans constituted a constant menace to Rommel's flanks and forced him to divert important quantities of armor to hold them in check while Montgomery rolls him up from the south.

Those familiar with the terrain along the eastern Tunisian coast said Rommel would strike no good defensive positions in his retreat until he reached a series of ridges some 60 miles north of Gabes.

Newsmen Visit Plant Making Deadly Gas

By the Associated Press

Denver, April 2.—American troops may not have to resort to gas warfare to win final victory—it all depends upon the Axis—but the United States is ready if it should develop.

Johnny Doughboy's clothing is impregnated with a secret material to prevent injurious burns from a sudden gas attack, and he is equipped with a topnotch mask should a desperate enemy employ "lung-irritant" gases.

In the "dishing-it-out" department, the Chemical Warfare Service is backing up United States troops with the latest gases and means of delivering them to the enemy.

This was disclosed during a visit of newspapermen to the Rocky Mountain Arsenal, north of Denver. It was the first public disclosure of exactly what has been going on at the massive plant sprawled over 20,000 acres.

The lifting of censorship revealed these facts: The plant is employing the latest methods in the production of vast quantities of mustard gas, lewisite and chlorine gas. The plant soon will enter mass production of incendiary bombs. These and other gases are being produced at other arsenals.

Col. W. J. Ungethuem, commanding officer of the arsenal, expressed belief that "the Japs and the Germans have been manufacturing gas, but whether they will in desperation use it is anybody's guess. But the United States is ready for that eventuality, should it develop."

Products of the plant are "bottled" and shipped in trainload lots to various parts of the country for storage. Military police protect the shipments and are ready to act as a decontamination squad in the event an accident should spill some of the gas.

Police Prepare Report on Pool Where Boys Died

A report on the drowning last Wednesday of two Negro boys in an abandoned swimming pool on District property at Fiftieth and Hayes Streets Northeast was being prepared by police yesterday for submisison to the District Commissioners.

Meanwhile, police of the Eleventh Precinct continued to stand guard over the pool to prevent repetition of the tragedy. The pool was drained immediately after the drownings.

At the same time, the District Commissioners were drafting a related survey which will attempt to clarify the question of jurisdiction over the area by one or more branches of the District Government, and to ascertain whether similar hazards exist elsewhere on District property. The information was requested by Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat) of Maryland, chairman of the Public Health Subcommittee of the House District Committee.

Navy's Floating Docks Solve Repair Woes

One of the greatest problems facing the Navy—that of keeping its fleets and task forces at full strength while operating thousands of miles from established naval bases—is well on its way to solution, officials disclosed yesterday.

Development of a new and radical type floating drydock, it was stated, will permit battle-damaged warships to be repaired at advance bases in combat areas. The highly mobile docks can follow the fleet to any theater of operations.

Most novel and valuable of the new floating drydocks is a sectional affair made up of ten separate boats, which when linked broadside can handle the biggest battleships or aircraft carriers.

Each of the 10 sections—which the Navy calls "ship-shaped hulls"—are individual boats, complete with crew quarters, antiaircraft batteries, repair tools, etc. They would be towed separately, or self-propelled to an advance base and there linked together.

The walls of each section fold down on the deck on hinges while in transport and are easily raised to a perpendicular position upon arrival. The wall sections and boats are then fastened together to form a giant dry dock 870 feet long and capable of lifting 100,000 tons.

Should some of the sections not arrive, the remainder can serve to handle lighter and shorter warships, or even big ones by lifting one end at a time.

The entire dock is submerged when taking aboard a ship for repairs or maintenance. When the vessel is in position over it, the water is pumped out of the dock and it rises, raising the ship with it.

Three of these huge floating drydocks—30 sections—are being built. Several section have been launched and one or more docks will be in operation within three months.

Five similar-type floating drydocks are being built to handle cruisers. They will be in seven sections, each capable of lifting 7000 tons.

Models Displayed

In addition, a considerable number of smaller floating drydocks built along conventional designs, are in service or under construction. They range from a small one-piece dock capable of handling escort craft up to 1000 tons, to three-piece docks able to handle destroyer leaders, submarines or other craft up to 3000 tons.

Five of the latter ARD-type are now in service and 30 are building.

These facts were disclosed by Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox and Rear Admiral Ben Moreell, chief of the Navy Bureau of Yards and Docks, at a press conference late yesterday. Models of the various types were displayed to reporters.

Navy Pilot Missing In Plunge Into Bay

Norfolk, Va., April 2 (AP).—The Fifth Naval District announced today that a Navy land plane crashed in Chesapeake Bay March 28 and that its pilot, Ensign Edward Jilberto Rohner, 21, U. S. N. R., of Iowa City, Iowa, is missing.

Naval authorities have notified the flier's mother, Mrs. Frank J. Rohner of Iowa City.

Army Bags 384 Jap Warplanes, Loses Only 54

By the Associated Press

The Army Air Forces shot down 384 Japanese planes during the last three months, the War Department announced yesterday, while losing 54 of their own planes.

The tabulation of enemy aircraft was confined to those known to be destroyed, the department said, but the American losses included all planes listed as missing as well as those known to have been destroyed in combat.

"The tabulation does not include enemy aircraft probably destroyed, those damaged in combat and which may or may not have been able to return to base, those which were shot down by antiaircraft fire, or those which may have been lost because of mechanical failure," said the announcement.

The figure of 384, the department added, also omitted the Japanese planes which probably were shot down by some of the 54 aircraft lost by the air forces, since these were unable to report on their activities.

Air War Flares in Solomons

A violent upsurge of aerial warfare in the Solomons, with American bombers attacking five Japanese destroyers and United States fighter planes shooting down 16 Zeros, was reported yesterday by the Navy.

Both actions occurred within a few hours on Thursday and spread over a wide area from Guadalcanal to Kolombangara Island, 190 miles to the northwest.

It was southwest of Kolombangara that a lone Catalina bomber sighted and attacked an enemy force of five destroyers and a cargo ship. A flight of Army Liberator bombers winged into the same attack. They flew at low altitude, dumping bomb after bomb on the enemy surface force but were unable to observe results of their assault.

Only a few hours later, 30 to 40 Zero fighters roared into the vicinity of Guadalcanal. American fighters—Wildcats, Corsairs and Lightnings—sped to the attack and sent 16 of the Japanese planes twisting into the sea. Six United States planes were shot down but two of the pilots were saved.

That aerial battle was the first reported from the Solomons since early in March, when a flight of Japanese bombers and fighter planes was driven off after one bomber and three fighter escorts had been shot down.

"The attack on the enemy surface force by American bombers was the first report of battle with enemy warships in the Solomons in recent weeks. Presumably the Japanese force was intent upon reinforcing or providing supplies for one of the many enemy bases scattered through the area. The direction in which the force was moving when attacked indicated it might have been bound for Munda on New Georgia Island, a Japanese air base which has been struck more than 100 times by American bombing raids.

In the North Pacific, attacks on the base at Kiska in the Aleutians continued. Bombers have hit there 34 times in recent weeks. Two of those attacks were reported in today's communique, which said they were made Tuesday. In one raid fighter planes attacked the Japanese camp area without observed results. But in the other, bombers flew at an altitude of only 50 feet, strafing and bombing the Japanese and causing heavy explosions and large fires.

'Justice' Asked For North Ireland

Belfast, Northern Ireland, April 2 (AP).—Northern Ireland Nationalist members of Parliament sent a telegram to Archbishop Francis J. Spellman of New York today, declaring that the partition of Ireland was "the greatest crime ever perpetrated on our people."

The telegram asked that, when the war was ended in victory for the United Nations, that the justice proposed for other small nations "also be metcd out to us and Ireland returned to her original dignity as a self-governing unit."

Two District Fliers Decorated For Exploits in Aleutians

Two Washington fliers have been decorated for their heroism in fighting the Japs in the Aleutian Islands, it was revealed here yesterday.

They are Lieut. William N. Thies, United States Navy, 26, of 2803 Q Street Northwest, and Lieut Robert N. Baker, United States Army, 24, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Baker, live at 5463 Nebraska Avenue Northwest.

LIEUT. THIES

Lieutenant Thies has been awarded the Navy Cross and Lieutenant Baker the Air Medal, and cited for the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Thies, the citation said, as a flier in the Aleutians "sought out and engaged the enemy, inspiring other members of his squadron to supreme efforts by his example of aggressiveness."

He was said to have participated in numerous patrols and once scored a hit on a Jap transport in Kiska Harbor. He is the father of a daughter, Linda Layton Thies, who was born January 28, 1942, in Seattle, Wash.

Lieutenant Baker wrote his father that he has been given the Air Medal and cited for the D. F. C.

"I never dreamed I would be worthy enough to wear a medal of my Government," he wrote, "and I am certainly still far from my conception of a hero. But, so it goes."

LIEUT. BAKER

Lieutenant Baker is an honor graduate of Penn State College. Upon his graduation in June, 1941, he was given a commission in the Army and transferred to the Army Air Forces in January, 1942. He won his wings August 5, 1942. He graduated from Woodrow Wilson High School in 1937.

His wife, Mrs. Eleanor Baker, is now living with her parents at Ornbridge, Pa. It has been over a year since his father has seen him.

Lieut. Thies is a native of Washington and a graduate of the University of Maryland. Upon leaving college in 1938 he entered the Navy and received his training at Pensacola. In 1940 he was married to Miss Vivian Thompson, also of Washington.

Lieut. Thies also is credited with having sunk a Jap submarine with one of his bombs. He was firing so close to the ship when his bomb exploded that the blast knocked a hole in his plane, with the consequence that his fuel lines were punctured by flying fragments and a motor caught fire.

'Lost' Ship Travels 700 Miles to Port

Skeleton Crew Mans Torpedoed Vessel, Once Abandoned

By the Associated Press

Given up as lost after a torpedo attack, a "ghost ship" manned by a skeleton crew sailed 700 miles to an Allied port, the Navy reported yesterday.

Three survivors of the medium-sized Dutch merchantman reached Boston recently and told of leaving their vessel obviously sinking—its bow deep in the sea, its stern, with propellers showing, flung high.

She was listed as lost.

But, "the vessel herself had decided to refute their judgment," said the Navy.

It told of the captain and 12 men remaining near the sinking ship in a lifeboat. Hours later the vessel began to right itself. The captain and his men boarded her again and found two officers who never had left. That tiny crew managed to sail the vessel to port.

"It was a night late in February when the vessel, in the Atlantic, was struck by a single torpedo near the bow," said the Navy's account. "The ship listed sharply, her bow sank quickly beneath the surface, and her stern rose high, propellers thrashing.

Adrift for 16 Days

The abondon-ship order was given, and, according to the three survivors at Boston, their lifeboat was swamped when a rope caught in lowering. They baled the boat with their hands and drifted until mid-morning the following day. Their ship had disappeared, but they sighted nearby a raft with 19 men from a previous sinking, who promptly tumbled into the more seaworthy lifeboat.

Sixteen days later the lifeboat was sighted by a United States naval vessel and its occupants were taken to Boston.

"Of the four lifeboats launched from the torpedoed ship, only one—the one containing the captain and 12 men — had remained close enough to the scene of attack to discover the next morning that the ship had refused to sink. The captain determined to board his vessel again, and discovered upon doing so that two of the ship's officers had never left her decks.

"Together, the 15 men set about examining the wrecked ship, and they agreed that there was a chance to save her. During the night the sand ballast in the forward part had poured out through the gaping hole, and the bow had come up a little.

Even Keel Restored

"For the next 24 hours, the courageous skeleton crew labored to unload another 150 tons of ballast from the bow. Then they flooded sections of the stern, and gradually the vessel was restored to a fairly even keel. The engines were in good working order, and there was plenty of fuel.

"And so, with a prayer that the bulkheads would hold, the ship was got under way. Going at slow speed, paradoxically, proved hazardous, as it caused thet ship to twist and buck against the hole in the bow. Three-quarters speed seemed to be the answer, as the water was pushed in the hole with sufficient force to make it act as a wall against oncoming waves. One whole day was spent in a fruitless search for the other lifeboats.

"It was difficult to keep the clumsy vessel on a straight course, but they continued to make progress. For five days and nights the voyage continued before they finally reached port."

Brazilian Fliers Sink Sub

Rio de Janeiro, April 2 (AP).—The sinking of an Axis submarine in February by the Brazilian air force was announced officially today.

Air Minister Joaquim Pedro Salgado Filho made the announcement, saying it was fatally bombed after a British oil tanker en route to Bahia, Brazil, advised a Brazilian air force base that it had been threatened by the submarine.

Brazilian aviators now are credited with sinking six Axis submarines. Rear Admiral Jonas H. Ingram, commander of the United States Fleet in the South Atlantic, has announced the sinking of five others by hs United States forces.

War Sidelights

3 Incendiary Balloons Fall On Zurich

Bern, Switzerland, April 2 (AP).—Three incendiary balloons blown by the wind over Switzerland dropped today at Zurich, 15 miles south of the German frontier, and two others fell farther south in the canton of Schwyz. Resulting fires caused little damage.

A Swiss communique said one examined was of English make and contained a phosphorous liquid. Citizens were warned to notify police if they found other balloons and not to attempt to handle them themselves.

Prisoners Get Watches

London, April 2 (AP).—In a letter written to his home here from a prison camp, Lieut. S. P. Haighton of the Royal Navy told today how 20 British naval officers captured at St. Nazaire a year ago had been given wrist watches by a Swiss company on their word of honor to pay for them after the war.

The prisoners wrote the company, saying they needed watches but could only promise postwar payment. Weeks later, watches valued at a total of $800 arrived.

Want Press Units Cut

London, April 2 (AP).—The committee on national expenditure said today competition for publicity among Britain's three fighting services was "wasteful and harmful" and recommended pruning of press departments in which a total of 1166 persons are employed.

The sixty-fifth report of the committee said press representatives were paid a total $1,840,000 a year, listing 90 in the admiralty, 285 in the air ministry and 791 in the war office.

2 Executions Plotted Here, Browder Says

By the Associated Press

New York, April 2.—Earl Browder, general secretary of the Communist Party, says that the execution in the Soviet Union of Henryk Ehrlich and Victor Alter, Polish Socialist leaders, was a result of a conspiracy of American citizens, organized on American soil, to overthrow the Soviet government.

Speaking in Brooklyn yesterday, Browder asserted the two Socialists had been appointed the agents in Russia of "this group of American conspirators." He said they were "heavily financed through the channels of the Polish government-in-exile, which are most extremely anti-Soviet and anti-Semitic."

Browder added that the United States Government "has closed its eyes to this conspiracy, has tolerated its continued operations and now permits a mass campaign in this country in defense of the conspiratorial agents who were apprehended and executed in the Soviet Union."

Among the members of "the anti-Soviet conspiracy in the United States, Browder said, were representatives of "the Social-Democratic organizations of emigree Germans, Austrians and Russians as well as Americans, all long associated with every effort to overthrow the Soviet government."

He criticized Mayor LaGuardia, United States Senator Mead (Democrat) of New York, and several labor leaders who participated in a mass meeting in Mecca Temple Tuesday in protest against the executions last December.

"Of course, none of these men knew Ehrlich and Alter as anything but names," Browder said. "None of them speaks for American trade unions in expressing hostility to the Soviet Union."

Driver of Tipping Auto Seizes Boy, Saves His Life

Los Angeles, April 2 (AP).—In the seconds while his careening automobile was falling on its side, a 20-year-old aircraft worker snatched a 3-year-old boy from danger and pulled him into the car.

Officers said Mitchell Meyer swerved his car to avoid striking a youth on a bicycle. It went out of control around a corner on two wheels, and turned over against a curb.

Meyer reached from the window with his left hand, seized the boy, who was standing on the sidewalk, and tossed him to the seat. Immediately the car fell on the spot where the boy had been standing, pinning Meyer's left arm beneath it.

World Police Essential To Peace, Butler Says

New York, April 2 (AP).—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, who is 81 years old today, says that the general outline of world peace must be given attention now, but that unless an international organization with police powers is formed after the war, there will be "war after war until civilization is entirely wiped out."

Czechs destroyed 22 Nazi tanks and killed more than 400 Germans.

The Red army at Stalingrad inflicted on the German Fascist troops the biggest defeat in the history of wars," said the special bulletin.

The 4 months and 20 days of the Red army offensive also topped the Rzhev-Gzhatsk-Vyazma triangle on the Central Front, and raised the siege of Leningrad.

In some sectors the advance to the west was as far as 373 to 435 miles, the communique said.

Rail Lines Recaptured

Important waterways and railway lines have again been recaptured by the Red armies, it was pointed out. Among these is the vital Volga artery connecting southern and central Russia. The Germans in their assault which reached Stalingrad had hoped to break the back of the Russian military by controlling that waterway.

The midnight war bulletin praised the Czech unit for "successful operations" and declared that its members commanded by Colonel Svoboda and fighting during a whole day and night with "self-sacrifice," repelled attacks launched by 60 enemy tanks and a force of automatic riflemen.

In yesterday's fighting, one Russian unit battering against the outer defenses of Smolensk was reported to have dislodged the Germans from "an important strong point," destroying two artillery and three mortar batteries, and wiping out two companies of infantry.

Shells Scatter Nazis

South of Bely, Soviet troops "dispersed and partly destroyed an enemy infantry column numbering about 300 men by well-aimed shelling," the communique said.

The Germans attacked with infantry and tanks in one sector on the northern Donets, the communique said, but the assault was repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy.

The communique made no mention of land fighting in the Kuban area of the northern Caucasus where the Russians Wednesday claimed the capture of three more villages in their drive on Novorossick.

The German radio last night admitted a Nazi withdrawal in the Kuban area to make "the German positions stronger."

Russian warships in the Barents Sea sank two enemy transports with a total displacement of 15,000 tons, the communique said, and Soviet airmen sank a 10,000-ton transport.

Prisoners of War

3 More Men From D. C. Held by Japs

Three Washington soldiers are among 563 Army personnel held as prisoners of the Japanese, whose names were announced by the War Department yesterday. They are:

DRUMMOND

Lieut. Col. W. Hinton Drummond, whose wife lives at the Army Medical Center; Maj. Eugene C. Jacobs, whose wife lives at 2000 Connecticut Avenue, and Pvt. Leo Hofmeister, whose parents' address is given as Washington, D. C.

One soldier from Maryland and 1 from Virginia are also listed.

Colonel Drummond, a member of the Army Medical Corps, was born in Spirit Lake, Iowa, and graduated from the University of Iowa. In the Army since 1929, he served at Walter Reed Hospital between 1936 and 1940. Before that, he was stationed for 5 years in Hawaii. From Walter Reed Colonel Drummond was sent to the Philippines. He is a member of the Military Surgeons and of the American College of Surgeons. Mrs. Drummond is active in Red Cross work.

Major Jacobs also is a member of the Army Medical Corps. He is a native of New York and a graduate of the University of Michigan Medical School. He served on the staff of Walter Reed Hospital from 1934 to 1937. In June 1940, he went to the Philippines. His wife, Mrs. Julia R. Jacobs, who was evacuated from Manila in 1941, is now working as a teacher. Major Jacob's parents live in Illinois.

From Maryland is Pvt. James O. Carroll, Denton.

From Virginia are:

Private First Class A. Barnes and Pvt. Oliver C. Brannon, Norfolk; Private First Class Allison J. Carrington, Roseville; Pvt. James C. Collier, Norton; Pvt. William H. Goodwin, Portsmouth; Private First Class Robert C. Jones, Ringgold; Private First Class Ralph J. Turner, Buffalo Ridge; Pvt. Charles S. Mendel and Pvt. Patrick Whitaker, Richmond; Pvt. William J. Jenkins, and Pvt. Lafayette C. Wichard, Petersburg.

Poland Decorates American Flying for Land He Never Saw

At a Base Hospital in England, April 2.—Bronislaw Bruno Godlewski of Chicago, never saw Poland—but after the Germans fell upon the land of his ancestors, he left school to join the Polish air force.

In the hospital here today with both his hands gone, the 19-year-old Godlewski received the Virtuti Militari, Poland's highest military decoration. He is the first American to win the honor.

It was pinned on his crisp, red-striped pajamas for his feat in putting up a gallant, one-man defense against German night fighters which jumped his Polish-flown Wellington bomber from the rear as it was returning from the successful raid March 5 on Essen, Germany.

Shot through both arms and his chest, Godlewski, a sergeant rear gunner, fought his guns and gave the pilot directions for evasive action until he fell unconscious.

He had made no mention of his wounds and not until the plane landed did his fellow crewmen learn his condition.

At the hospital ceremony, Air Vice Marshal Stanislaw Ujeski, commander of the United Nations immediately gave rise to speculation on the possibility of other conferences on peace planning.

Following talks with British Foreign Minister Anthony Eden, President Roosevelt indicated that there would be an early Russian-American conference on current and postwar issues but avoided disclosing any specific details concerning such a meeting. However, he made it very clear that the talks with Eden had created the pattern for additional huddles among the various members of the United Nations.

No Members of Congress

Within the past few days Congress has flatly voiced a desire to be represented at the inter-Allied meeting, but Secretary Hull today intimated that he considered the idea impracticable.

Hull pointed out that the conference is intended to be primarily a meeting of technical experts on the subject of world food production and distribution and the commercial and financial angles of such a program.

The choice of Hot Springs, Va., for the meeting, which formally opens on April 27, was made after considering a number of other outlying places in line with the Chief Executive's desire to hold the conference as quietly and as far away from the hubbub of Washington as possible.

A great deal was accomplished at the Casablanca conference, the President stated, because it was held off the beaten track and interruptions were few.

United Nations Parley to Open April 27 at Hot Springs, Va.

Russia and eight other of the United Nations have already accepted President Roosevelt's invitation to the first great conference on postwar plans the end of this month, Secretary of State Cordell Hull disclosed yesterday.

The 10-day meeting, called to discuss a world-wide food production and distribution program for after the war, will probably be held a the famous Southern spa of Hot Spring, Va., it was learned last night.

Underscoring the extreme importance of this first meeting of all the United Nations to lay groundwork for effective and mutually satisfactory peace plans, President Roosevelt is expected to address the opening session.

The other nations which have so far accepted, in addition to Russia, are China, Australia, New Zealand, the United Kingdom, Belgium, Panama, Paraguay and Uruguay. All 38 of the United Nations have been invited to send representatives.

Pleased at Russian Attitude

Secretary Hull said he was particularly glad to note the promptness with which the Soviet government accepted the invitation. Considerable importance is attached to Russia's speedy acceptance, as it represents the first definite move by the Soviets to join the United Nations in a general discussion of postwar problems and plans.

Russia's favorable reaction to this first round-table deliberation of the United Nations immediately gave rise to speculation on the diation Board, WLB's peacetime predecessor.

Refused a closed shop in the "captive" mines, Lewis secured the withdrawal of NDMB'S two C. I. O. members—Philip Murray, who succeeded Lewis as president of the C. I. O., and Kennedy. The C. I. O. withdrawal resulted in the death of the board since the C. I. O. then refused to take any cases to it.

Then, it was recalled, the case was finally reviewed by a three-man panel headed by Steelman, which reversed the NDMB and gave Lewis his coveted closed shop on the eve of Pearl Harbor.

Leaves Lewis Free to Protest

Removal of Kennedy this time was not seen as a move to smash WLB, but rather as an important part of Lewis' strategy in pushing his wage demands. With Kennedy off the board, Lewis' was said to be free to "holler louder" against board wage policies.

It was regarded as possible that Lewis might attempt to challenge the board's jurisdiction or charge that he lacked proper representation. With Kennedy off the board, he could follow either course—particularly since Kennedy was appointed originally to represent the C. I. O., not the U. M. W.

Kennedy, a life-long Democrat and loyal supporter of President Roosevelt, was elected lieutenant-governor of Pennsylvania in the early days of the New Deal and was an unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governer in 1938.

President Vetoes Farm Price Measure

ments. Senator Thomas and other farm bloc leaders contend this appropriation should not be granted under present conditions but that the farmer should be permitted to throw off this "subsidy" by getting parity prices in the markets.

Senate Vote 78 to 2

Since the original Senate vote on the bill was 78 to 2, Senator Thomas declared he could not see how the President could count on his veto sticking, "although there will be a lot of work going on over the week-end." The House passed the measure in an unrecorded voice vote, but the Oklahoman said he believed the House majority in overriding the veto would be surprisingly large.

Labor leaders were quick to issue statements approving the veto. In a joint press release last night, President Murray of the C.I.O. and President William Green of the A.F.L. appealed to Congress "to uphold the President's veto in order to safeguard our domestic economy against the ravages of inflation."

R. J. Thomas, international president of U. A. W.-C. I. O., termed the veto a courageous "forward step toward fulfillment of the stabilization program enunciated in April 1942," and declared the President's action "must be upheld."

On the other hand, Albert S. Goss, master of the National Grange, said he could "not agree with the President's reasoning or conclusions.

"The President cites the possibility of raising corn almost 10 per cent and bread 8 per cent, while he completely ignores his recent 48-hour executive order which increased the whole base rate of industrial wages 8 1/3 per cent," Goss said.

Might Divert Labor

Since most farm products are selling above parity, only a few basic crops—such as corn, wheat, and cotton—would be immediately affected.

The price ceilings on corn have been set since the Senate passed the Bankhead bill and would need to be raised about 6 cents a bushel should the measure finally triumph. In anticipation of the raise, farmers are holding their corn supply from the market and the Commodity Credit Corp. has released 100 million bushels of wheat to relieve the resulting livestock feed crisis.

Text of President's Message Explaining Bankhead Bill Veto

To the Senate:

I am returning S. 660, generally known as the Bankhead bill, unsigned. It is a bill to exclude in the determination of parity price any deduction for any subsidy payment, parity payment, incentive payment or other payments made with respect to any agricultural commodity.

I am compelled to this action by the deep conviction that this measure is inflationary in character. It breaks down the barriers we have erected and which we must maintain in order to avoid all the disasters of inflation. It is wholly inconsistent with our stabilization program, therefore dangerous alike to our constructive farm policy and to our whole war effort.

In my message of September 7, 1942, I advised the Congress that "our entire effort to hold the cost of living at its present level is now being sapped and undermined by further increases in farm prices and in wages and by an ever-continuing pressure on prices resulting from the rising purchasing power of our people." I requested the Congress "to pass legislation under which the President would be specifically authorized to stabilize the cost of living, including the price of all farm commodities."

I further stated: "The purpose should be to hold farm prices at parity, or levels of a recent date, whichever is higher. . . . And in determining whether a commodity has reached parity, we should include all the benefits received by the farmer from his Government under the A. A. A. program, allocable to the particular commodity. For it is unfair to give the farmer a parity price and in addition give him far more than parity."

Why He Holds View

To this view I still hold.

My suggestion regarding the calculation of parity was not novel. It had received the previous approval of the Congress. Under an amendment to the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 (Public Law No. 74, 77th Congress) the Commodity Credit Corporation was directed to make loans on certain 1941 crops at the rate of 85 per cent of the parity price for the commodity as of the beginning of the marketing year. In approving that act on May 26, 1941, I stated:

"I have taken up the construction of the law with certain legislative leaders chiefly responsible for it and have received from them letters stating that for the 1941 crops the broad intention is that parity payments should, if necessary, be so curtailed as to avoid a price above parity if added to the loan and the soil conservation payments. I am, therefore, confident that in the pending appropriation bill this clear interpretation and intent will be carried out." That interpretation and intent were expressly embodied in the then pending Agricultural Appropriation Act, (87 Cong. Rec. p. 5903.)

When the Congress had under consideration the bill making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for this fiscal year, the Senate approved an amendment providing that in computing parity payments, deductions should be made for the payments made to producers by the Government during this fiscal year under the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act. There was considerable disagreement between the House and Senate with respect to the amendment, but the Senate amendment was finally incorporated in the appropriation bill (Public Law 74, Seventy-seventh Congress). Therefore, under the law enacted by the Congress last July in computing parity, benefits must be included.

"Parity" Discussed

Under the original Emergency Price Control Act the administrator was forbidden to establish maximum prices which would reflect less than 110 per cent of parity to producers. Under the Stabilization Act of October 2, 1942, the Congress authorized the administrator to establish prices which will reflect to producers of agricultural commodities the parity price for such commodity or the highest price received by such producers for such commodity between January 1, 1942, and September 15, 1942, whichever is the higher. "Parity," one would assume, bears the same meaning in both acts.

The meaning of "parity" under the original Emergency Price Control Act had been established by administrative interpretation. Furthermore, the price administrator's construction had been upheld by the Attorney General prior to the introduction of the act of October 2, 1942. This administrative ruling authorized the price administrator to include parity, allotment and soil conservation payments received by the producers of agricultural products in determining whether prices reflected 110 per cent of parity to the producers. The Congress was advised of this interpretation before it passed the act of October 2, 1942 (see P. 37, hearings before Senate Banking and Currency Committee, S. J., Res. 161, 77th Cong., 2d sess.).

When the act of October 2, 1942, was under consideration in the House of Representatives, an amendment was offered similar to the bill which is now submited to me which would have excluded any deduction for parity or soil conservation payments in computing parity. This amendment was rejected (88th Cong. Rec. P. 7622).

It cannot, therefore, be fairly said that I ignored either the law or the legislative intent of the Congress when I directed, in my Executive Order No. 9250 of October 3, 1942, that appropriate deductions for Government payments should be made in computing parity prices.

I have referred to the legislative history only because of some of the criticisms of my action. I know that some members of the Congress differ with my interpretation of the law. I credit them with sincerity. I ask that they credit me with equal sincerity.

Proposal Considered

Let us consider the merits of the proposal.

The act of October 2, 1942, directs the President to issue a general order stabilizing prices, wages and salaries, which affect the cost of living; and, except as otherwise provided in this act, this stabilization shall be on the basis of the levels which existed on September 15, 1942. It is impossible to control the cost of living unless all of its vital elements are stabilized.

The time has come when all of us—farmers, workers, managers and investors—must realize that we cannot improve our living standards in a period of total war. On the contrary, we must all cut our standards of living for the duration. We must adopt simple wartime standards. If we do, none of us need want for the real necessities of life. We can all have enough if we do not try to get too much. We can only make sure that the present balance does not change materially for the worse; and that those on the lower rungs of the economic ladder are not ground down below the margin of existence. Further we cannot go during the war. After the war our objective will be not only to restore, but to raise our standards of living.

In the past no one has fought harder than I to help the farmers get parity prices for their crops. With pride I recall that the parity idea was first put into law during my Administration. And by the act of October 2, 1942, the farmers were guaranteed 90 per cent of parity prices for all basic crops, not only during the war, but for at least two years from the first day of January following the declaration of the termination of the war.

But it must be recognized that parity prices are only means to get parity income for the farmers. That income goal has been attained for the cooperating producers of all basic crops. This bill would go beyond the goal of parity income and give to these producers an unwarranted bonus at the expense of the consumer.

Prices Above Parity

A few crops have not reached parity price in the open market, but farm prices generally are above parity. Between August, 1939, and January, 1943, the prices that farmers received for the crops they sold, rose nearly 107 per cent, while the prices that farmers paid for the things they bought increased only 26 per cent.

Farm prices which were 30 per cent below parity at the beginning of the war in August, 1939, rose to 15 per cent above parity in January, 1943. Farm prices, which at the beginning of World War I were only 1 per cent below parity, soared 111 per cent between 1914 and 1919, but the prices the farmers paid also soared 96 per cent, so that the farmers never got more than 107 per cent of parity for their crops during the last war contrasted with the 115 per cent of parity they are now receiving.

Thus the farmer, far from being worse off than he was in the last war, is substantially better off. But he will not remain better off if we set loose an inflationary tornado.

The American farmer, I am convinced, does not want inflation. He knows that deflation inevitably follows inflation. The farmer wants neither; he prefers stabilization. He recalls all too bitterly the deflation in the value of his land, the debts, the anxieties, the foreclosures, the evictions and the heartaches which followed in the wake of the inflation after the last World War.

Parity price is only part of the picture. Other factors have contributed to bring about a striking increase in farm income. Between 1939 and 1943 farm production increased 20 per cent, and during this period unit costs rose only one-fourth as much as unit prices. As a result farm income in terms of purchasing power is higher than in 1919, higher than 1929, higher that it has ever been in our history. Stabilization will protect that purchasing power. Inflation will destroy it.

Farm income has risen faster than nonfarm income, though both have risen substantially. Since 1939, the average income of the farmer has risen approximately 45 per cent more than the average income of the nonfarm population. This is particularly significant in view of the very substantial increases which have occurred in the income and purchasing power of the nonfarm groups during the same period. The dollar income, the purchasing power, and the parity income of the farmer, are all far higher than they were at their peak during the last war. Let us protect the farmer's present favorable position rather than to commence tampering with it.

Progress of Farmer

I realize, of course, that during much of the last two decades farm prices and farm incomes were inequitably low. No one should begrudge the farmer the progress which the figures I have cited reveal. Nor do these figures prove that every farm and every acre is free of price problems. But, as in the case of substandard industrial wages or industrial production involving abnormally high costs, we must deal with these situations specially on their merits and not imperil our stabilization program by general price or wage increases. The figures I have cited do reflect a favorable situation extending to every farm region and virtually every crop.

It is true that farmers generally are encountering increasing difficulty in securing necessary farm labor, farm equipment and fertilizer. Higher prices cannot, when steel is scarce, create new machinery; higher prices cannot, when manpower is short, create additional workers. In fact, higher prices for crops like wheat and corn might actually divert labor and machinery away from the production of other essential crops, such as soybeans, flax, grain sorghum, beans and potatoes.

Furthermore, the present prices for wheat and corn are satisfactory from a production standpoint. Our farmers have already indicated their patriotic intention to plant a substantially increased acreage to these crops. The Government is determined to do everything within its power to see that the farmers have the labor and machinery necessary to harvest those crops.

The present relative favorable position of the farmers can be held only if our general stabilization program succeeds. The general stabilization program can succeed only if all groups except those on the very margin of subsistence are willing to recognize that for the duration they not only cannot expect to improve their living standards, but must indeed be willing to bear their fair share of the cost of stabilization.

Food Cost Control

There has been an increase in the cost of living since May, 1942. This increase is due mainly to our failure to bring food costs under control. But the War Labor Board is resolutely adhering to the Little Steel formula which compensates labor, in its wage rates, for the increase in the cost of living which occurred between January 1, 1941, and May 1, 1942.

The board believes that if the formula is broken now it will start an inevitable inflationary spiral that would ultimately cancel out whatever gains labor has made, and place an intolerable burden on widows and old folks with fixed incomes, and on teachers and unorganized workers in low-paid occupations.

It will become impossible to hold this line if the cost of living is still further increased—not from imperative war needs, but by the action of the Congress in departing from its declared policy to stabilize all prices and wages.

The Bankhead bill departs from the declared policy of the act of October 2, 1942. It departs from the only practical basis on which any sound stabilization program can proceed. That basis is faithful adherence to the present balanced relationships between wages and price. To change the present delicately balanced price relationships would not merely change, but would jeopardize, the entire stabilization program.

It is difficult to forecast the actual price increase which would result under the Bankhead bill, and the estimates I have received differ widely. They all agree, however, that they will be substantial, although there is some difference of opinion as to the time when they will occur. It cannot be denied, however, that the Bankhead bill takes from the Government the power to prevent very substantial increases in food prices. That is its only purpose.

Under the Bankhead bill the price of sugar could rise a cent and a half a pound, the price of bread might go up a cent a loaf and the price of flour proportionately. The price of corn could rise almost 10 per cent, which might not necessitate, but would certainly call forth a demand for higher prices for hogs, and livestock, poultry, eggs, milk, and other dairy products. That demand would be particularly insistent in the case of poultry, eggs, milk, and other dairy products where customary feed cost ratios would be substantially reduced.

The Bankhead bill would certainly deprive the Government of the power to prevent these price increases—increases which might swell the cost of living more than 5 per cent, add more than a billion dollars to the consumers' food budget and several hundred million dollars to the cost of feeding the armed forces and of supplying our Allies.

All Costs Would Rise

If by this bill you force an increase in the cost of the basic foodstuffs, and as a result the national War Labor Board increases wages, no one can tell where increases will start or what those increased wages will ultimately cost the farmers and all people of the Nation. If the price of food goes up, if wages rise, it will necessarily result in increasing the cost of our armaments, ships and planes. We should have to borrow even greater sums to meet the increased cost of the war, and after the war an excessive burden of debt would have to be borne by all the people, including those now in uniform.

We are only beginning to feel the cruel effects of total war. Men happy with their families must give up good and well paid jobs to become soldiers for $600 a year with only modest allowances for their dependent wives and their children. We who remain in civilian life to produce the food and supplies for them, and an irreducible minimum for ourselves, must not quarrel among ourselves in a vain effort to better or even hold our position at the expense of the other fellow. We must adhere loyally to our stabilization program and sanction no exceptions save in the case of genuine hardship and distress.

I appeal to the considered judgment of the Congress to reject the Bankhead bill which I am returning unsigned. It will not help the farmer with his immediate war difficulties. It will make it infinitely harder for the farmer to protect himself from wartime inflation and postwar chaos. It will add to the burdens of those most heavily burdened. It will make the winning of the war more difficult and gravely imperil our chances of winning the peace.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

90 Italians Surrender to Two British Orderlies

On the Northern Tunisian Front, April 1 (Delayed) (AP).—Sent out to bring in wounded at the height of the Allied push from Djebel Abiod to Sedjenane, two British medical orderlies not only accomplished that task but brought back more than 90 Italian prisoners.

The orderlies, Pvt. Joe King of Petersborough, Lincolnshire, and Robert Spencer of Birmingham told today how they were starting back to their lines with several wounded Goumiers (native troops) and two wounded Italians, accompanied by 12 prisoners sent along as stretcher bearers, when they saw a column of Italian troops moving toward them.

Ordering the stretcher bearers to take cover, the orderlies were surprised when a white flag suddenly appeared at the head of the Italian column. Advancing the Italians included a major and several other officers.

"When you get to Italy tell my wife I'm well," one prisoner said to King.

Farm Army To Be Formed This Summer

By Vance Johnson
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

White-collar workers, members of women's clubs, even Boy and Girl Scouts, will be signed up for part-time work on farms this summer under plans for a land army drafted by Chester C. Davis, food administrator.

Recruitment of the army, which will be an informal mobilization without flags, buttons or uniforms, will be channeled through the State Extension Services, the Office of Civilian Defense, Office of Education, "and all other existing organizations which can help."

In towns and cities, block wardens of the OCD will play an important part in signing up office workers and clerks to spend a day or two each week in the country.

Draft lists will be scoured by county agriculture war boards to locate draft-age men with agricultural experience now working in other jobs. The President announced this week that men in 4-F for reason of physical disabilities may be inducted for limited duty if they refuse to return to the farm.

Men over 38 now in the Army who are released for farm work will be placed through the county war boards and county agents, as will farmers now in conscientious objectors' camps.

County agricultural agents will become the clearing agents for all farm labor requirements. They will fill jobs locally as far as possible, by calling on the United States Employment Service, schools, colleges and civic organizations.

When labor needs cannot be filled locally, they will call on regional directors of the Farm Labor Administration—a section of Davis' Administration of Food Production and Distribution—to send workers in from outside.

Lieut. Col. Jay Taylor, head of the Labor Administration, will take personal charge of migrant labor recruitment and transportation. Davis has set a goal of 200,000 workers to be recruited in this country, Mexico, the Bahamas and Jamaica.

Davis outlined his plans to the deficiency subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee Thursday and asked for 40 million dollars to do the job—as compared to $26,100,000, the amount recently voted by the House.

a day. These are live birds and there is none of the dressed variety coming into the city, he said.

Hotels' Situation

With hotels in the city planning to institute the first of their regular meatless days on Sunday, Harry S. Wender, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, has asked Mrs. Elizabeth T. Sullivan, chairman of the Consumer Interest Committee, to invite representatives of the hotels and restaurants to give their sides of the picture before her committee.

The Washington Restaurant Association has voted disapproval of the two meatless-days-a-week plan. Hotel men said, however, they were hardest hit under the rationing rules and propose to keep meat off the menus Sundays and Wednesdays.

This will enable them to serve an occasional filet mignon, or a similar choice cut, on other days, they said.

Bust of Garner To Be Unveiled In Capitol Soon

A bust of former Vice President John Nance Garner will be placed in the Senate reception room within a few days, Col. Edwin C. Halsey, secretary of the Senate, announced yesterday.

Garner, who was in Washington a short time ago, is not expected to be here for the dedication ceremonies.

The white marble bust of the popular Vice President from Texas, was sculptured by James Earle Fraser of Westport, Conn.

Garner was one of two men in American history to have held both the office of Speaker of the House and Vice President. The other was Schuyler Colfax.

Soldier on Furlough Kills Ex-Wife, Friend

Tulsa, Okla., April 2 (INS).—Austin Branscum, 42, home on his first furlough since joining the Army, shot and killed himself late today after shooting and killing his former wife and her roommate.

According to police, Branscum went to an oil company office to see his former wife, Mrs. Gladys Echols. They engaged in an argument, police said, and she ran to the office of her roommate, Miss Nelle Cone. Branscum followed, opened fire, and both women fell. He then turned the gun on himself.

OPA Chief Says:

Banana Vies With Sugar For Favor

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Whether sugar or bananas are more important in wartime is the subject of a minor controversy in official Government circles, OPA Administrator Prentiss M. Brown revealed yesterday.

Brown intimated that he sides with sugar, but the State Department's support for bananas has prevailed so far.

As a witness before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee on a bill to create a civilian supply agency, the price administrator said 600,000 additional tons of sugar could be brought to Florida ports from Cuba if State Department officials were not insistent that bananas be imported from Honduras instead.

Sixteen ships are now being used exclusively in the banana trade to uphold the State Department's policy of "maintaining the economy of Honduras," Brown informed the committee. The ships, he explained, carry American supplies on the return voyage.

If the additional Cuban sugar could be brought in, the present domestic supply could be maintained, in his opinion, and rationing of sugar for canning uses would not be necessary. But the necessary ships must be found first.

Brown conceded that "somebody who could plead the case for civilian supply" would be useful in straightening out the sugar dilemma, but gave the impression that he did not favor separation of the Civilian Supply Administration from the War Production Board, as provided by the bill.

Only within recent days, he said, have domestic producers of beet sugar been told that they should produce all they possibly can. Prior to that, they were under the impression, the committee was told, that the Secretary of Agriculture wanted them to plant not more than 70 per cent of maximum beet acreage.

Brown said a decision whether sugar for canning purposes should be rationed would be reached "about the middle of next week."

Flannagan Resumes Blast

It will take more than a letter from the President to read patriotism into the record of David Ginsburg, former OPA counsel, who has asked for induction into the Army, Representative Flannagan (Democrat) of Virginia told the House yesterday.

Flannagan's speech was made in answer to a spirited defense of the former chief counsel of the OPA made in a letter by President Roosevelt after Ginsburg had been bitterly attacked in the House.

The Virginia Congressman told his colleagues that he had made the statement about Ginsburg on his own responsibility, although the President's letter attributed the attack to the Costello committee.

"I fight in the open," Flannagan said. He asserted that his own war record was well known to members of Congress and added,

"I will put that record up against a cowpen full of the Ginsburg type."

Flannagan concluded: "for statements I have made with reference to Mr. Ginsburg I apologize to no man, not even my good friend the President of the United States."

Tree Association Made Tax-Exempt

The Senate yesterday passed and sent to the White House a bill extending the protection of last session's institutional tax exemption bill to the American Tree Association.

The association was omitted from a list of scientific and educational organizations excused from real property taxes when the exemption statute was enacted last December, and speedy legislative action to replace it on the select list was promised then.

Railroads' Use Of Manpower Draws Attack

By the Associated Press

A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, said yesterday that a congressional investigation of management's use of railroad manpower would "uncover one of the major scandals of the war."

Testifying before the Senate War Investigating Committee, Whitney declared railroads are "wasting millions of labor man-hours annually" through "ineptitude, bungling and penny-pinching."

"If this committee or any other ever goes to the bottom of the issue of railroad manpower, it will uncover one of the major scandals of the war," he declared.

Whitney reminded the committee that railroad labor organizations are in the midst of negotiations for basic wage increases and said:

"It would not be constructive for any citizen to look upon these or any other wage demands as acts of disruption," but a challenge to Congress to "do a better job" on stabilization.

Sees New Demands

"If a better job of ordering the war economy on the home front is not done," he declared, "all labor will have ample justification for making even more demands."

He said wage stabilization would not halt inflation without control of retail prices, farm prices, salaries and other factors.

Whitney charged that railroad managements waste manpower by leaving men lying around at away-from-home terminals from 10 to 30 hours at a time, some times to "save the expense of dead-heading them back to home terminals where war freight stands immobilized in the yards."

Testifying yesterday on the Austin-Wadsworth bill to draft men and women civilians into war production jobs, Julius G. Luhrsen, executive secretary of the Railway Labor Executives' Association which claims more than one million members, told the Senate Military Committee the proposal represents "nothing but a grant of brute power over the manpower of America." He added that the association believes the use of selective service to administer a proposed national service act "will eventually produce military domination in the field of manpower."

Women Attack Bill

Among yesterday's witnesses were four Chicago women, members of the Women's League of Political Education, all of whom criticized the Austin-Wadsworth bill.

Mrs. Florence H. Griesel contended that drafting of women workers from 18 to 50 years old would result in State control of children. A mother of nine children, Mrs. Grace Keefe, termed the bill "utterly un-American in principle" and said it was sponsored by "a bureaucracy which has bungled, bullied, lied and laugher" at civilians.

Mrs. Bernice St. Clair asserted enactment of the measure would bring regimentation of women and would "double-cross our soldiers who are fighting to combat totalitarianism."

Bataan Veteran

Army Nurse Here Knows 'War Is Hell'

JUANITA REDMOND

Lieut. Juanita Redmond, Army Air Force nurse, lounged in her Hotel Statler rooms yesterday and asserted, "If anybody thinks war isn't hell, tell him to see me."

Lieutenant Redmond, served on Bataan for 4 months until that bastion was overpowered. Then she stayed six days on Corregidor until that, too, was conquered by the Japanese. She knows so much about war that she wrote a book titled, "I Served on Bataan," which is running into its third edition.

In Washington to study plans for recruiting nurses in the vicinity of Fort Worth, Tex., Lieutenant Redmond does not, as might be expected, lay the rod to people who, in this time of war, continue partying and such. "I just believe they ought to do something for the war also," she said.

Fragmentarily reviewing her war front experience, she said that the men on Bataan and Corregidor showed courage that would amaze anybody.

"Those boys got out of bed with fevers of 104 to fight with the others," she revealed.

She told of being blown several feet in the air by a bomb explosion and afterwards not believing she was alive. After a few more bombings, her conception of death lost some of its starkness.

No great literary career is planned by Lieutenant Redmond. "Perhaps I'll write one more nonfiction book," she said.

Truman Group Denounces Lewis Attitude

Declaring that labor leaders "must now demonstrate that they are statesmen and patriots as well as paid advocates for worthy causes," the Senate War Investigating Committee yesterday condemned John L. Lewis' attitude in asserting that his no-strike promise was not "necessarily binding."

"Labor has come of age and the country expects these leaders to recognize that labor has duties as well as rights," the committee said, adding that "no citizen has the right to jeopardize the Nation's existence in war time."

In its first official comment on the dramatic exchange between the committee and the president of the United Mine Workers a week ago, the group headed by Senator Truman (Democrat) of Missouri, observed:

"The obligation which rests upon Lewis is . . . an obligation to the United States arising out of the war emergency.

Isolation Peril Held "Real"

"It is based upon his duty as a citizen to a country which enabled him to exchange the sweat and physical toil of a miner for the comforts and privileges of a labor executive."

Referring to Lewis' refusal to abandon his fight for a $2-a-day wage increase for bituminous coal miners, the committee reported that "the danger of inflation is real" and Government and labor alike should consider wage increases "in a judicial and realistic manner."

At the same time, the committee acknowledged that it did not consider the "Little Steel" formula limiting wage increases to 15 per cent of their January 2, 1942, level, as "sacred or closed to discussion."

"But," the report added, "it does seriously and earnestly call labor's attention to the fact that any and every increase in wages is apt to have serious effect upon prices and that history has demonstrated conclusively that labor suffers more than anyone else in a wage-price spiral of inflationary increases."

Earnings Declared Up 50%

Lewis' claims that the miners' diet was deficient to the point of endangering productivity were interpreted by the committee as an effort "to create the impression that widespread hunger was forcing the miners to fight for higher wages."

"The evidence shows," the report declared, "that coal miners now working six days a week at increased wages and with overtime for the sixth day are earning 50 per cent more in dollars than they were earning two years ago, when they worked only five days a week."

The committee said that a practice of citing price increases without giving any effect to wage increases because of a longer work week "is general among labor leaders," and recommended that in determining wages, consideration be given to total wages received—"the true measure of labor's purchasing power."

Mine Workers 'Intimidated' By Army Agents, Lewis Charges

By International News Service

New York, April 2.—Military intelligence agents in the Fifth and Sixth Corps areas have been visiting union offices and attempting to "intimidate" the miners while negotiations for a new contract are in progress, John L. Lewis charged today.

The bushy-browed leader of the United Mine Workers referred bitterly to the "implied suggestion" of a "second military front." He deplored alleged attempts to convey the impression to the miners that they might be "forced to work at the point of the bayonet."

Lewis issued his fiery statement after negotiations between union officials and bituminous operators of the northern Appalachian area had adjourned until Monday

Later in the afternoon, anthracite producers flatly rejected the 21 proposals which U. M. W. officials wanted included in a new contract covering about 90,000 miners in northeastern Pennsylvania. The proposals included a $2 per day wage boost, which also has been asked of the bituminous operators and is one of the major items under dispute.

The anthracite operators contended that the demands would represent a 95.8 per cent increase in costs, a claim which Lewis flatly disputed. He said the costs would be "less than 50 per cent of what they claim."

"They Have to Eat"

"Regardless of the cost, the anthracite miners have to eat, even if a Government subsidy has to be provided for the industry," the mine chief asserted.

The miners must receive an increase, Lewis added, "in the face of the complete breakdown of the Government policy of price control over foodstuffs."

Lewis' statement concerning the alleged activities of military intelligence representatives said:

"A new and disturbing factor has entered into the situation out in the coal fields. I refer to the intimidating activities and tactics of military intelligence in the Fifth and Sixth Corps areas and perhaps elsewhere.

"Agents of the military intelligence are appearing at our district offices, demanding the names of the coal companies, the locations of the mines and the names of officers and members of local unions, with the implied suggestion that a second military front is to be established in the coal-fields of the country . . .

Miners Resentful

"As American citizens they (the miners) deeply resent the implied suggestion that they will be forced to work at the point of a bayonet through the quartering of troops in coal-mining communities. We think that a grave mistake is being made by whoever is responsible for this intimidating policy."

The Fifth and Sixth Corps areas take in Ohio, Kentucky, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Illinois and Indiana.

Chicago, April 2 (INS).—John L. Lewis' charge that "military intimidation" exists in the coal fields was denied tonight by Maj. Gen. Henry S. Aurand, commanding the Sixth Service Command.

"There are no military intelligence agents in this service command who have the authority to use intimidating tactics," General Aurand said. "Such action is an impossibility.

"Nor are military intelligence agents of the Sixth Service Command appearing anywhere demanding any information. Any agents who can be identified by Mr. Lewis as having done so should be reported to headquarters, Sixth Service Command, at once.

"There is no policy of intimidation."

House Passes Drastic Bill to Curb Axis Agents

imprisonment and $10,000 fine persons who fail to report to enforcement agencies knowledge of hostile acts.

The second, an anti-espionage provision, designed as an act of hostility for which the death penalty might be inflicted, the collection or transmission of "data" on the war plans of the Nation with the intention of aiding its enemies.

It was the first provision that opponents of the bill attacked as the "gestapo" clause. As originally drafted, it would have exposed to its penalties persons not only "knowing" but "having probable cause to believe that another has committed, is committing, or is about to commit" any hostile act.

Jonkman Assails 'Little Souls'

The House turned down an amendment of Representative Jonkman (Republican) of Michigan, which would have penalized persons failing to report knowledge of hostile acts only if their failure were willful, knowing or malicious.

Representative Sauthoff (Progressive) of Wisconsin attempted to kill the whole of the espionage provision. With other members, he contended that "data calculated to inform the enemy" constituted a definition of military information broad enough to supply the Administration with a "club of persecution" which could be used against critical newspapers and radio commentators. He told the House:

"This is the time when little souls get puffed up with authority and try to persecute their fellows. "Christ of Nazareth could not stand on a Washington street corner and preach his philosophy of brotherly love without being subject to prosecution and the death penalty under this bill."

His amendment to strike out the section lost on a standing vote, 112 to 82, but the House accepted modifying language which would make it necessary to prove that persons accused of espionage collected information "for the purpose of informing the enemy."

This section of the bill would make liable to execution not only spies against the United States but espionage agents seeking to hamper the war effort of any nation whose defense the President should proclaim to be "vital" to the defense of this country.

Without opposition, the House approved another Sumners' amendment limiting the life of the measure to six months after the war, or sooner if Congress so orders by concurrent resolution. It also approved an amendment by Representative Rankin (Democrat) of Mississippi, raising the maximum penalty for a violation by a corporation from $500,000 to five million dollars.

Rankin, Celler Clash

In one of those bitter personal exchanges which marked debate on the bill, Rankin referred to the "Jewish gentleman from New York" in a clash with Representative Celler (Democrat) of New York.

Representative Cox (Democrat) of Georgia broke off this dispute with a suggestion that "racial discussion in this body should not take place," adding "that we have racial troubles ahead of us is certain."

The bill was sent to Congress last fall by Attorey General Biddle, following the trial before a military commission of eight Nazi saboteurs.

Girls to Share In Facilities Of Boys Club

One answer to Washington's skyrocketing juvenile delinquency problem has been found by the Southeastern Boys' Club.

"Successful" is the word used by Charles Fyfe, director of the Boys' Club of Washington, to describe an experiment which he initiated a year and a half ago—opening the boys' facilities to girls of their age levels.

Provision of social activities to promote wholesome relationships between the sexes and teach them how to grow up together naturally, was the idea behind Fyfe's project. Ignoring the fact that schools and parties are coed, eyebrows were raised in varying degrees at so "advanced" a conception, but Fyfe fought for the chance to prove that boys and girls will develop into better men and women if given the proper background.

With a current enrollment of about 300 girls, aged 10 to 18, as members of the club, Fyfe yesterday said he no longer considered the project an "experiment."

Currently the programs are purely social, but gradually the girls are taking advantage of the other facilities of the club, such as arts and crafts work. There's an advantage in having a feminine contingent, too, for the girls are willing hostesses on occasion and have a definite place in the club's dramatics.

Fyfe feels that establishment of such a project has become more and more necessary, as children are being neglected for the inevitable "war effort."

He said there were few places in Washington where boys and girls can spend their evenings to good advantage. Early contacts with the coed groups indicated also that they had little conception of how to spend their time. The club, Fyfe noted, while it develops their social understanding, keeps them away from street corners.

Each group has its special night for games and dancing, which follow business meetings for consideration of new members, planning programs, discussing any problems that arise. Friday—originally the "problem" night for young people who want to relax after a week of school—is the big night for the junior and senior groups. Then there are movies, a "splash" party in the club pool, climaxed by a dance. All meetings are supervised, but the youngsters have learned how to govern themselves.

'Baby Broker' Bill Returned To Welfare Unit

The Commissioners yesterday sent the "baby broker bill" back to the Board of Public Welfare for further study and clarification.

The bill to require licensing of all adoption agencies in the District kas sent by the Welfare Board to the District Building on Wednesday with the recommendation that it be resubmitted to Congress in the original form in which it was submitted at the last session.

The Commissioners, however, said last night that they wanted more complete legislative history of the bill before submitting it again to the House. They were particularly anxious for an interpretation of the Schulte amendments which killed the bill. The board was asked to investigate the reasons for the amendments being introduced and to find out what was being done by social agencies to answer whatever objections caused the amendments.

"There's no use to send the bill back and have it defeated again for the same reasons it was during the last session," Commissioner Guy Mason said. "If the persons who got the Schulte amendments in before still feel the same way about it, they're apt to get just such amendments put into this bill. The Commissioners don't want to send down legislation that they know will be killed. We want the board to tell us whether the objectors have changed their minds, or should the bill be changed to get around their objections."

Congressional Clerks Uneasy Over Pay Bill

Congressional clerks on Capitol Hill yesterday voiced uneasiness over the new Federal pay-raise bill reported out this week by the House Civil Service Committee.

A clause in the bill removes specific figures for the pay of Representatives' clerks and secretaries and allows Congressmen to divide their basic $6500 for clerk hire any way they like. Heretofore top salaries for secretaries have been $3900.

Some of the clerks expressed concern that Congressmen might elect to pay as much as $4500 to a secretary, or to a wife named as secretary, and fill in for clerical help with well-to-do young women who want to contribute to the war effort.

The House provision, however, is in line with a recent public law adopted for the Senate. Senators who favored that law maintained that able secretaries were worth more than the $3900 they were permitted to pay them.

Many Congressmen representing large districts have a number of clerks assigned them and also have clerks attached to various committees on which they serve.

Certain veteran House and Senate employes scouted the idea that Congressmen would start knocking down the salaries of clerks. They pointed to the shortage of clerical help and said that young women wanting to help in the war effort no doubt would be able to find more glamorous low-paid jobs than answering congressional mail.

Worker May Set Aside Pact, NLRB Aide Says

Robert B. Watts, general counsel for the National Labor Relations Board, told Senate investigators yesterday no "non-raiding" agreement between labor unions could deny individuals their right to seek to set aside an A. F. L. contract with Henry J. Kaiser's shipyards in the Pacific Northwest.

Asserting that the NLRB should consider the problem realistically and encourage the unions to get together to end jurisdictional disputes, Senator Brewster (Republican), Maine, declared the principal question at issue was "nearly three million dollars in dues."

Watts replied that any individual worker had the right to question a closed shop contract he regarded as illegal.

Value of Peace Pact

"If Mr. Frey and Mr. Green should agree not to stir up any trouble at the critical time, it seems it would be to the Nation's interest to encourage them," Brewster asserted.

He referred to John Frey, president of the A. F. L.'s Metals Trade Council, which has a closed shop agreement with Kaiser, and John Green, president of the C. I. O.'s Industrial Marine and Shipbuilders group, which has attacked the A. F. L. contract before the committee as illegal.

Reads Post Articles

Watts cited wartime conditions in the Pacific Northwest as factors contributing to labor unrest in the shipyards. At one point, he read excerpts from a series of articles by Mrs. Agnes E. Meyer which have appeared in recent issues of The Post on the subject. He told the committee that he considered the reports "able articles by an able newspaperwoman."

Watts said the complaint pending before the board was filed by an individual who contended the A. F. L. contract was signed at a time when 66 workers were involved and now covered from 70,000 to 80,000 workers.

"John Green admitted frankly his principal interest was in getting control of the Kaiser shipyards," Senator Ball (Republican) of Minnesota, broke in. "One witness told us that suggestions had been made to your board not to consider the Kaiser case."

Watts recalled for the Senate War Investigating Committee testimony that three men with offices at the White House and Chairman Donald M. Nelson of the WPB had suggested such a course.

"At no time, at no place, has any one at the White House or Mr. Nelson ever suggested or requested the board to defer the complaint in the Kaiser case," Watts said.

OPA Forming Rule on Food Of Hospitals

In an effort to formulate a program aimed at relieving the serious food shortages in hospitals and other institutions affected by rationing of canned foodstuffs, the Institutional Users Branch of OPA's Food Rationing Division met yesterday in an all-day conference with representatives of major hospitals.

An OPA spokesman said last night that his agency hoped for an "over-all solution" to the problem, so that as emergencies arise in the future they can be handled directly by the local ration boards.

"The present difficulty," he said, "is traceable to lack of understanding of the processed and canned foods ration order, both by local boards and by the institutions involved. We hope to clear the matter up very shortly so that such difficulties need not occur again," he added.

A meeting between OPA officials and members of the Washington Dietetic Association is scheduled for Monday, April 5, at which the problem is expected to be threshed to a final solution.

Justice Jesse C. Adkins in District court who pronounced sentence said he believed the previously clear records of the men justified them being placed on probation. They were arrested last October 14 after they accepted $10 from the operator of an alleged disorderly house on their agreement not to interfere with the operation of the place.

2 Held, Third Freed in Auto Death Probes

D. C. traffic deaths this year .. 23
Deaths this date last year 32
District total last year 108

A coroner's inquest yesterday ordered two men held for action of the Municipal Court on negligent homicide charges arising from recent traffic accidents and released another when the cause of a third death was proved to be accidental.

Held for the Municipal Court was Navy Aviation Machinist's Mate Gordon W. Olsen, 19, of the United States Naval Station at Patuxent, Md., and Thomas Tucker, 57, of Bethesda, Md.

Meanwhile, the District surveyor's office was asked by Lieut. William J. Liverman of the Accident Investigation Unit to determine if still another death was to be listed as a traffic fatality. The victim, Anthony Calloway, 6, of 4922 Benning Road Southeast, was fatally injured Thursday night when he fell off a truck while hitching a ride.

On Private Property, Police Say

The accident occurred on private property, said police, who listed the driver as Early B. Tillman, 46, Negro, of 424 Q Street Northwest. The death will not be listed as a traffic fatality unless the truck is proven to have been on public property by the surveyor's report.

Police said Olsen was the operator of a Navy truck which last Monday sideswiped the left side of a streetcar at Eleventh and East Capitol Streets, and then hit Arthur Steele, 78, of 932 North Carolina Avenue Southeast, as he was apparently standing on the sidewalk near the southwest corner of Lincoln Park. Steele died several hours later in Casualty Hospital of a crushed skull.

Following the accident, Olsen was charged by police with illegally entering Eleventh Street, which at this point becomes a one-way thoroughfare. The driver of the streetcar was Lorn Worthey, 26, of 1436 Kenyon Street Northwest, who was said by police to have had one day's experience.

Truck Climbed Curb

Tucker was ordered held in the death Thursday of Joan Brown, 15, of 1304 W Street Northwest. She was pinned to a tree at Eighth and R Streets Northwest by a truck which climbed the curb after colliding with another car. The operator of the car with which Tucker's car had collided before striking the girl was Leslie Johnson, jr., 34, of Hyattsville, Md.

Ralph P. Eckenbarger, 35, 132 Eighteenth Street Southeast, was exonerated of blame in the traffic death last Monday of Joseph T. Jones, 34, Negro, of 202 L Street Southwest. Police said Eckenbarger was the operator of a streetcar which struck Jones as he was crossing Indiana Avenue just east of Third Street Northwest. Jones apparently had walked between parked cars and, according to police, was not in the crosswalk.

Hearing Called On Taxicab Group Riding

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday ordered a public hearing to be held May 3 on rates and regulations of taxicab group riding, which the commission has been trying for more than a year to put into operation.

The hearing was called for 30 days after the notice in order to let the Office of Price Administration intervene if it chooses. This action by the PUC was described by PUC Member Gregory Hankin as "part of a plan to put the OPA on the spot and to shift to it the blame for a fault which is ours."

Rate Schedule Submitted

A proposed schedule of rates—not yet made public—was submitted to the OPA by the PUC on February 18, with a request that it be examined for possibilities of general price increase. The OPA responded that the rates suggested constituted a general increase, and it hoped that a schedule could be worked out which would accomplish the desired full utilization of equipment of rubber and gasoline—not to mention the convenience of passengers—and yet would result in no price increase.

In his dissenting opinion, Hankin charged that the setting of the date for the hearing a month away involved an unwarranted delay in settling the year-old problem, that nothing constructive would come of another hearing anyway, and that the whole thing was to involve the OPA in an affair that is primarily to PUC's responsibility.

"At the last hearing it seemed that all persons concerned were unanimously of the view that group riding should apply to all taxicabs throughout the entire 24-hour day for all trips except emergency cases and that group riding service be made mandatory on all persons who operate taxicabs in the District of Columbia," Hankin said. "The only question that remained was, how the present lawful rates per trip should be so translated into flat per person rates on a group riding basis as to avoid increase in rates. There is no warrant for further delay in solving this simple problem."

Charges Noncooperation

Hankin further complained that although a study could be made of the taxi industry that would "yield better approximations," the intention of the commission in ordering this hearing was only to present "conjectures as to probable earnings prompted by desires for increases in revenues, but based on competent evidence."

He ended his blast at his colleagues by accusing them of noncooperation with the national price stabilization program, and of treating the director of price stabilization's representatives with contempt.

Eastern High Orator Wins Legion Contest

David Leonarduzzi of Eastern High School, last night won the local oratorical contest conducted by the American Legion.

LEONARDUZZI

The contest was held at the auditorium of the American Museum of Natural History. The judges were: Judge George R. Boss, Frank L. Yates, Prof. Charles S. Collier, Dr. William A. Hunton and Dr. Ruth Coyner.

Leonarduzzi spoke on a "Guarantee of Freedom."

There were five contestants: Elizabeth Ames of Central High School, Betty Jane Watt of McKinley High School, Louise Repetti of Notre Dame Academy and Elaine Barry of Browne Junior High School, in addition to the winner.

The next contest will be a regional one at Charlotte, N. C., on April 16 and the National at New Orleans, on April 19.

Redistribution of Colonies Aim of British Labor Party

By Eric Hawkins

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, April 2.—Redistribution of African and Pacific colonial territories to remove the "potential menace to the world peace" which it sees in the "existing imperial monopoly system" is urged by the British Labor Party in a report issued today outlined its postwar policy on "backward" colonies.

The menace also would be eliminated by "altering the international colonial system so that the administration of colonial territory no longer insures strategical and economic monopolist advantage to the administering of the state," the report says.

Developing its view, the British Labor Party gives the opinion before the war some of the colonies had been reparceled out to Germany, Italy and Japan "the distribution would have been more equal," but it adds that "sooner or later new claimants"—which are not otherwise designated—"would almost certainly appear and the same problem of menace to peace would occur again.

The report proceeds: "Under the pre-war international system the possession of colonial territories gives great strategical advantages to the possessing state, it also gives some economic advantages, the value of which frequently has been grossly exaggerated by propaganda in Germany and other countries who complain of not having colonial possessions.

"The possession and control of such territories are extremely unequal. The greater part of them are or were controlled by three great powers—Britain, France and Italy—with other important areas held by Holland, Belgium and Portugal."

It lays down two main principles for the African territories:

1. "That these territories be administered by the colonial powers as a trust for native inhabitants, the chief aim of administration being their welfare, education and development," and,

2. "That the primary object of administration should always be to train native inhabitants in every possible way so that they may be able in the shortest possible time to govern themselves."

Maryland Urges Widening Of D.C.-Baltimore Boulevard

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., April 2.—The widening and improvement of the Washington-Baltimore Boulevard "at the earliest possible time" was requested today by the Maryland Legislature as "vital to the successful prosecution of the war."

In a joint resolution previously approved by the Senate and adopted today by the House, the General Assembly asked the State Roads Commission to draw up the modernization plans and allocate whatever funds may be necessary and available for the work.

The resolution left to the roads commission the extent of the improvements, but called attention to the fact that the boulevard is "one of the most heavily traveled roads in the State of Maryland."

In addition, it continued, "today this road is an essential part of the highway system over which the armed forces of the country are being transported daily with the least effort and the greatest speed and as a result of this burden of travel and transportation so intimately connected with the war its continued existence, maintenance and improvement has become vital to our national defense."

The resolution also asserted such improvements are "of interest to the State of Maryland and its citizens because of the State's vast investment in the University of Maryland at College Park and finally and above all it is essential to the welfare and security of the Nation and vital to the successful prosecution of the war."

Nero's Concerto for Hot Fiddle Proves Clever Adaptation

Lieut. Charles Brendler conducts the U. S. Navy Band Orchestra on Friday night in Department Auditorium. Soloist: Paul Nero, violin. Program: Overture to an Italian Comedy (Benjamin), Symphony in E minor (Schubert), Kaiser Walzer (Strauss), Concerto for Hot Fiddle (Nero), Rumanian Rhapsody No. 1 (Enescu).

By Ray C. B. Brown

When Paul Nero composed his "Concerto for Hot Fiddle," which was performed by himself and the U. S. Navy Orchestra last evening in Department Auditorium, he must have been aware that his name in association with such a title would inevitably evoke the legend of a certain emperor fiddling while Rome burned. Fortunately the comparison did not deter him from writing the work, which is a clever adaptation of the classical concerto form to the eccentricities of jazz, blues and swing. Modernism was even carried as far as the use of a microphone to amplify the tone of the violin and carry it over the frequent explosions of the brass choir.

BROWN

While the music is a mixture of styles, there is a parallel amalgamation of seriousness and humor in the tempo indications of the three movements: "Moderato e Allegro; Bounce; Larghetto: Boogie Woogie; Presto: In the Groove." The themes of the first two movements are lyrically romantic, somewhat in the manner of Liszt's melodies, and the contrast between them and the violent distortions to which they are subjected is continuously amusing. Hot intonations and blue notes alternate with straight playing, and the cadenza, reserved for the final movement is unique in its individuality. Well worth hearing for its real musical values beneath the persiflage, the concerto is scored not for full orchestra but for the instrumentation of a swing band.

Lieut. Charles Brendler began the concert with another work which is still in the novelty class, "Overture to an Italian Comedy" by the Australian composer, Arthur Benjamin, who now resides in British Columbia. Brisk and lively music of an entertaining kind, it has wit and the atmosphere of the opera bouffa. The remainder of the program consisted of Schubert's B minor symphony, the "Kaiser" waltzes of Johann Strauss and Enescu's first Rumanian rhapsody.

Phi Sigma Chapter of Sigma Gamma Rho Sorority presents Muriel Rahn in a song recital on Friday night in Asbury Methodist Church. Accompanist: Jonathan Brice. Program of compositions by Bach, Cesti, Legrenzi, Brahms, Franck, Severac, Bizet, Wagner, William Grant Still, Corinne M. Lawson, Rakhmaninoe, Marjory Kennedy Fraser and Samuel Coleridge Taylor.

Muriel Rahn, the young colored soprano remembered here for her part in the Alfred Lunt-Lynn Fontanne production of "The Pirate," gave a song recital last evening in Asbury Methodist Church. While her diversified program contained some songs not exactly suitable for her manner of interpretation, she made a pleasing impression with the clear and resonant quality of her voice. Her tone production is not always free from a constriction that results in a slight flatting, and her open high notes are a little hard. With more attention to breath control and to coloring of tone in tender phrasing, she will improve the dramatic effectiveness of her singing.

Bach's "If Thou Be Near" and "My Heart Ever Faithful" were followed by "Intorno all'idol mio" from Marc' Antonio Cesti's opera, "Orontea;" and Legrenzi's "Che Fiero Costume." Her second group contained Brahm's "Immer Leiser Wird Mien Schlummer" and "Von Ewiger Liebe," Franck's "La Procession" oddly juxtaposed with Deodat de Severac's "Ma Poupee Cherie," and Bizet's "Ouvre Ton Souer." A Wagnerian excerpt, "Dich Theure Halle," displayed the full power of her voice.

Unusual in the program was an entire group of songs by William Grant Still: "Breath of a Rose," "Winter's Approach," "Listen to the Lambs," "Gwine ter Sing All Along the Way" and the first performance of "In the Garden" from an opera with libretto by Langston Houghes, "Troubled Island." In a final group were combined Corinne Lawson's "Lazy Song," Bakhmaninov's "O Thou Billowy Harvest Field," the "Eriskay Love Lilt" collected by Marjory Kennedy Fraser in the Hebrides, and Coleridge Taylor's "Life and Death."

Cherry Trees In Full Bloom Over Weekend

Although the famed cherry blossoms around the Tidal Basin this year have played to the smallest audience in their history, National Park Service officials expect a large increase this weekend in the number of hikers, bicyclists, horseback riders and even motorists as the blossoms emerge in full bloom.

Park police reported yesterday that the prospects are so unlikely for heavy traffic that only the customary detail will be assigned to the Potomac Park area.

Meanwhile an A-card holder with a gallon and a half of gasoline to squander this weekend could make a blossom roundup of his own by driving from Hains Point to the far reaches of Bethesda, Md., where Wisconsin Avenue is lined with cherry trees (imported from you-know-where) from the District line almost to the Naval Medical Center.

En route a blossom enthusiast would find an especially fine group of trees in Kenwood, which lacks only a stretch of the Potomac River to be one of the most picturesque post card views in the city. A quiet suburb for 11 months each year, Kenwood annually becomes a mecca for camera fans and hikers in April and the size of trees there rivals those around the Tidal Basin.

Park officials pointed out last night that you don't have to have 1-A walking qualifications to see the downtown blossoms today and tomorrow. Streetcars marked "Bureau of Engraving" deposit floral-minded folk within a few moments' jaunt of the trees.

If weather conditions continue in yesterday's spring-into-summer motif, additional streetcars will be put on the Fourteenth Street Northwest and Southwest route, running directly to the new underground terminal near the Bureau of Printing and Engraving.

Longest waiting line in town is expected to be at one particular Tidal Basin cherry tree that obligingly provides a frame for the Jefferson Memorial thus becoming ideal bait for amateur photographers.

Youth Sentenced In Faidley Death

Charles Lewis, 17, Negro, of 1010½ U Street Northwest, was sentenced yesterday by Justice James W. Morris in District court to from two to eight years after he pleaded guilty to a charge of manslaughter growing out of the death February 6 of Charles Faidley, 1212 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, a Washington florist.

Faidley died in Casualty Hospital soon after he was found badly beaten at the corner of Seventh and H Streets Northwest. Police charged that Lewis and several other Negro youths beat Faidley in an attempt to rob him.

PUC Orders New Hearings On Gas Rates

While the Washington Gas Light Co. rate adjustment for the present year still is pending in the District Court, the Public Utilities Commission yesterday gave notice of intention to hold hearings on the adjustment for rates to be set September 1 under the sliding scale arrangement.

At the same time, the PUC ordered that an investigation be made of the rate of return to be allowed the gas company under the sliding scale.

The sliding scale arrangement, by which rates are fixed annually in proportion to the return from the previous year—with rates lowered if the return exceeds a certain percentage and raised if the return is below the specified limit—has been a matter of contention between the PUC and the OPA since last summer, when the Federal agency intervened in the 1942-43 rate hearing.

Not only did the OPA protest against the strict application of the sliding scale formula in the gas rate case, which is still in the courts, but it intervened for the same reason in the electric rate hearings, which have not been concluded.

The present allowable rate of return on the gas company rate base is 6.5 per cent. The PUC order states that an investigation "be made into the rate of return to be allowed the Washington Gas Light Co. on its property used and useful for the convenience of the public, under the provisions of the sliding scale arrangement."

Obituaries

James Witten Dies; Funeral Set Monday

James W. Witten, 87, past master of Washington Centennial Lodge No. 14 and former grand master of the grand lodge of Masons of the District, died at Doctors Hospital yesterday. He lived at 1401 Fairmont Street Northwest.

MR. WITTEN

Coming to Washington in 1893 as principal examiner in the General Land Office, Mr. Witten later served as chief law officer and also as superintendent of opening of sale of Indian lands in the land office.

Born in Gentry County, Mo., he was a graduate of Central College, Fayette, Mo. He was admitted to the bar in 1881 and elected prosecuting attorney of Gentry County the following year.

Mr. Witten is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary Witten; one daughter, Mrs. Hazel Dennison of Wyomissing, Pa.; two sons, A. B. Witten, with the War Department Engineers, Camp Patrick Henry, Va., and Capt. Nash A. Witten, U. S. Army, serving overseas. Four grandchildren and two great-grandchildren also survive.

Funeral services will be held at the Hysong funeral home, 1300 N Street Northwest, Monday at 2 p. m. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Greenslade To Have Funeral At Naval Academy

Services for Mrs. John W. Greenslade, wife of Vice Admiral John W. Greenslade, commandant of the Twelfth Naval District, will be held at 3 p. m. today in the Naval Academy Cemetery at Annapolis, Md.

Mrs. Greenslade, daughter of the late Col. Hugh J. Gallagher and Mrs. Gallagher, formerly of Washington, died Sunday in San Francisco and, after funeral services there, the body was brought East for interment. Simple rites will be conducted at the grave.

Admiral Greenslade, who served as a member of the Navy Department's general board in 1934, made a trip on the dirigible Hindenburg to Germany to observe the operations of the airship. His Washington address was 3325 Rowland Place Northwest.

Judge to Rule Today in Tulsa Killing

By the Associated Press

Tulsa, Okla., April 2.—The State described Mrs. Ella B. Howard today as the "rootin', tootin', shootin'" slayer of Mrs. T. Karl Simmons, but the defense asserted the wealthy Tulsa socialite "came up to Mrs. Howard's room with no good in her heart."

County Attorney Dixie Gilmer, concluding the prosecution's argument that Mrs. Howard, a Fort Worth divorcee, be held on a murder charge in the slaying one week ago, asserted the defendant came out of the hotel death room with "a smoking pistol in her hand, ran to another room and there, what did she do? She called her lawyer."

Mrs. Howard's counsel, giving the defense version of the domestic tragedy, in its final argument contended Mrs. Simmons "came up to Mrs. Howard's room with no good in her heart."

"Her acts showed she was there for trouble," added Defense Attorney Walter M. Scott. He said no proof had been offered that the gun used in the shooting belonged to his client.

Judge To Rule Today

Common Pleas Judge Grady S. Cornett said he would rule tomorrow whether Mrs. Howard would be freed, the charge reduced to manslaughter or whether she would be held for trial.

Another defense lawyer, Marvin Simpson, said George Sheehan, veteran employe of Simmons, tried to prevent Mrs. Simmons from going to see Mrs. Howard.

"But what do we find" he asked. "We find Mrs. Howard in her own home, her hotel room, with Mrs. Simmons bursting into it. Where's there a scintilla of evidence that Mrs. Howard fired the bullet?"

A late defense witness, Jail Matron Bess Wilson, testified she examined the defendant a couple of days after the slaying and found her bruised about the left hip and on the right arm.

Cried For Help

Another defense witness testified today that Mrs. Howard pounded on his hotel door and cried for help a short time after Mrs. Simmons was slain.

Mrs. Howard, 44, slender, gray-haired, followed the testimony intently in the jammed courtroom. Beside her at the counsel table sat the man she divorced 10 years ago, Louis Howard of Austin, Tex.

The State witness, who told of accompanying Mrs. Simmons to the ninth floor in a futile effort to keep her from going to Mrs. Howard's room, was Sheehan, office manager for Simmons oil firm for 20 years.

He said Mrs. Simmons called him by telephone to the luxurious Mayo Hotel.

"She told me Mrs. Howard was registered in the hotel and she thought Mr Simmons was up there with her," said Sheehan in a low voice.

He went with her to the ninth floor, he said, searched her purse but not her person "making sure she wasn't armed," then returned to the lobby when "she told me to turn her loose."

Heard First Shot

Norman Cantor, recently discharged corporal from Camp Crowder, Mo., who had a room across the hall, said the first shot brought him to the door, where he heard a woman in the room say: "You'll be sorry if you take that."

"Then I heard two more shots," he continued, "and when I opened my door I saw Mrs. Howard come out of the room across the hall. She seemed quite disturbed, paused for just a fraction in the hall and said 'Help.'"

Sheehan testified Simmons left his home in a fashionable part of Tulsa on the night of March 24, the same day Mrs. Howard arrived from Fort Worth, and took a room at another hotel, where he was at the time of the shooting.

The dead woman's husband made a brief appearance on the stand.

"Is Mrs. Simmons living or dead?" County Attorney Dixie Gilmer asked him.

"Dead," replied Simmons. He then was excused.

3 Little Bodies

Killed Babes Out of Pity, Mother Says

BERNICE WILLIAMS,

By the Associated Press

Denver, April 2.—An unwed mother has admitted, Detective Capt. James E. Childers said, that she drowned her three newborn babies and hid their bodies in a hope chest because "they were children of sin."

Bernice Williams, 23, signed a statement admitting the slayings, Childers announced, after a calm recital of how she bore the babies unattended, the first one in 1941.

A murder charge and an unusual accusation of "concealing the death of" an illegitimate child were filed against her. She is held without bail for hearing Monday.

Meanwhile, attendants in the matron's quarters at the jail disclosed that Miss Williams has declined all food since her arrest.

Three tiny bodies, two of them almost mummified, were found yesterday wrapped in cloth and cardboard, stuffed in a chest stored in an apartment house basement.

"I couldn't help it because they were born," Childers quoted the young woman as saying. "I'm just constituted that way. They were children of sin, and it was best that they should die. Nobody but me knew about them until today—not even the fathers.

"My physique is large and my condition never showed."

Childers said her signed statement contained these details:

That she laid off work, as a department store buyer of infants' wear, only three days at each birth, and performed the necessary surgery unaided, at night, in the bathroom.

That she submerged each infant in a bathtub of water for 20 minutes.

The first two children were girls, with the same father, her statement related. The third was a boy, by a different man.

Police said the woman named two married men as the fathers of the two girls and boy.

Pay-as-Earn Tax Action Is Boomed

By Cecil B. Dickson
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Strong pressure for action on pay-as-you-go tax legislation began to pile up in Congress yesterday.

Seantor Bennett C. Clark (Democrat) of Missouri served notice that he would seek to put the Ruml tax forgiveness plan on the Guffey coal bill as a rider if Chairman Robert L. Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina prevented the pay-as-you-go plan from being reconsidered by the House Ways and Means Committee.

The Guffey Coal Act expires April 26. President Roosevelt has asked that it be renewed for two years. It is pending before the Ways and Means Committee, and is to be reported to the House later in the month. Under Senate rules, Clark could propose the Ruml plan as an amendment.

Clark is a member of the Senate Finance Committee. He told the chairman, Senator Walter F. George (Democrat) of Georgia, he was determined to give the Senate an opportunity to act on pay-as-you-go legislation this month. This is the only way the Senate can act on the Ruml plan, which was rejected by the House early in the week.

Petition Action Weighed

House Republicans, meantime, began to talk about filing a petition for the discharge of the Ruml plan from the Ways and Means Committee. This would require 30 days. Representative Frank Carlson (Republican) of Kansas said "We can get the signatures of 218 men, because the Democrats are hearing from their constituents."

After the House rejected the Administration source collection and the Ruml plan this week, thousands of letters have been pouring into Congressmen's desks demanding action on pay-as-you-go legislation.

Doughton, who left town for a rest in Laurel Springs, N. C., announced taxes would not again be considered by the Ways and Means Committee until the President's 16-billion-dollar new revenue request is brought up about two months from now.

The Guffey Coal Act and extension of the Reciprocal Trade Act fo three years are next on the schedule. Hearings open April 12 or the trade extension. Doughton ha introduced a bill extending the trade act.

Representative Harold Knutson (Republican) of Minnesota who led the fight for the Ruml plan, said Doughton asked him how he could get hold of him over the weekend.

"I'm going to Florida," Knutson said, "if I can get away. But the pay-as-you-go plan is not dead. We Republicans will continue to fight for it."

Record-breaking revenues of 25 billion dollars by the end of this fiscal year, June 30, are expected by the Treasury, while war spending will push the 75-billion-dollar mark, a new all-time high.

Secretary Morgenthau announced yesterday war spending in March soared past all previous records with $6,743,800,218, or more than the $6,301,000,000 spent for national defense in the entire 1941 fiscal year.

Assistant Secretary John J. Sullivan said the Treasury would check on delinquent income taxpayers through the reports of employers and the Social Security records.

Sullivan said that even with higher income tax rates this year, there was "less complaining than last year."

"This year more than 40 million people have filed income tax returns," he said.

The Treasury expected 45½ million individual returns and the Internal Revenue Bureau is now checking up on the number of delinquents, which, Commissioner Guy T. Helvering said, would take some time.

Sullivan said the Treasury knew that not all those subject to income tax filed, but "we'll find them sooner or later." Of those who failed to file, he said, "they would be better off if they file even now."

Revenues for the first nine months of 1943 fiscal year, which began July 1, 1942, totaled $15,519,081,338, while war expenditures aggregated $50,574,252,869.

In the same period of the previous year, revenues were $9,678,004,241, with war outlays $15,385,066,942.

Budget estimates of revenue for this fiscal year are $24,552,000,000; for war outlays, $74,000,000,000.

Who's Mabel? Army Mural Mystery

By the Associated Press

Denver, April 2.—Mabel, whose telephone number is KE. 0770, seems to be a military secret.

Except for one unidentified soldier somewhere, nobody even knows what city she lives in . . . or if she's a real person.

The hunt for Mabel started because of a mural done by soldier-artists in the post theater at Buckley Field, near Denver.

A curious reporter dialed Denver's KE. 0770 and asked for Mabel.

A sweet feminine voice answered: "I am married. I have a family and I don't know anybody at Buckley Field and I don't want anything to do with this. My name isn't Mabel and I won't tell you what it is."

The Mountain States Telephone Co. disclosed "KE" exchanges in Minneapolis-St. Paul, Omaha, Nebr., and Oakland, Calif.

"And there probably are dozens more in the country," an employe added.

Five artists, all soldiers, worked on the mural, Buckley Field reported. Four have been transferred to other stations and the fifth is away on furlough. The office declined to name the soldiers.

As the news got around more and more people kept calling Denver's KE 0770 and asking for Mabel.

Finally, she just gave up denying that Mabel was there and quit answering the 'phone.

Uphold The Veto!

Organized labor is now showing signs of putting the national interest above its own group interests. The gesture from Messrs. Murray and Green in seeking price stability in place of wage increases deserves a similar gesture from the farm bloc. Such a reciprocal gesture would end the menace to our currency. Since Pearl Harbor both blocs have been playing a game of compensation at the expense of the people's and their own dollar. One demand has generated another, with neutralizing effect, and the game has thus represented a caucus race, where the more you run, the more you stay in the same place vis-a-vis each other. That place, as we show in an adjoining column, is on the spiral of inflation. Unchecked, this spiral would leave nothing in our wage and savings dollar but the memory of its power to buy.

An invitation to the farm bloc to cooperate with labor in saving the dollar may be read in the President's veto of the Bankhead bill. We hope it will be upheld. Without doubt the bill got overwhelming support in Congress because it was seen as an effort to correct a presidential misinterpretation of the Stabilization Act in respect of farm prices. There is merit in the congressional case. However, if the President evaded the intent of Congress, he did so in behalf of the people's dollar, and Congress should give him that credit. It isn't as if the farmers are in a bad way. On the contrary, by any test whatsoever, the farmers enjoyed the most prosperous year in history last year, and this year will be even better. Self-restraint only is needed to keep the purchasing power of their record income intact. Our dollar, their dollar, will not be saved by spleen. It can be saved only by financial statesmanship, and the farm bloc is given an opportunity to display it.

Let the farm bloc bear in mind that the entire country has become more than ever anxious about the monkeying with its dollar which is going on in the Nation's Capital. Some, if not all, of the farm organizations already have noticed it. In consequence, two of these bodies have broken away from the "Big Four" in lobbying for the Bankhead bill—the American National Livestock Association and the Farmers' Union. Frank S. Boice of Arizona, president of the former, warns Congress that such legislation would merely convince the public that "organized agriculture is demanding its pound of flesh." It is demanding it, too, from a region in the body economic which will not withstand the shock.

Trade Agreements

There have been disturbing rumors of late that when the Trade Agreements Act of 1940 expires next June, Congress will either allow it to lapse or renew it in a form that will destroy its usefulness. It is pointed out in this connection that the recurrent votes on this legislation, first approved in 1934 and reapproved in 1937 and 1940, showed a steady decline in the affirmative majority, and that there is now a large element in Congress which wants a return to the old system of tariff-making. If these rumors are correct, we may lose the peace even before we win the war. Certainly the failure by Congress to renew the Trade Agreements Act will be regarded everywhere as a clear indication that we propose to return to economic isolation. That means political isolation as well.

In his speech before the New York State Chamber of Commerce Thursday, Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, made clear what this would mean in terms of the common welfare. As he points out, "any organization whereby the nations who want peace will cooperate to enforce it would fall apart if the economic underpinning were unsound." For an international order to exist and prosper, there must be a steady expansion of world commerce. To bring that about in an orderly fashion, with due concern shown for long-established domestic interests, was the aim of the trade agreements program which Secretary Hull has for so long sponsored. Each of the 30 such agreements that have been concluded represented months of the most careful examination by competent experts from various governmental bodies. Each, as Mr. Welles says, "sought to deal with conditions as they are, not to apply any theoretical conception of the way things should be if we were to go back a hundred years and start our economic policies from scratch." And in line with historic American policy, each embodied a most-favored-nation clause so as to make it as little discriminatory as possible.

In the period before the war, to quote Mr. Welles again, the trade agreements program was one spark of sanity in a world outlook that seemed wholly and hopelessly dark. For us to abandon it at a time when its usefulness can now really begin would be a blunder worse than a crime.

Inflation Is Here

That organized labor has at last switched from demands for higher wages to demands for stable prices is a belated testimony to its sense of proportion. We can lick inflation if all groups in the community become price-conscious, and not unless. For inflation is no longer around the corner. It is here, and it is daily becoming more menacing as Government expenditures mount and payrolls continue to swell. During the current year national income is expected to reach the fantastic height of 140 billion dollars. In normal times this would be the outward sign of abundant prosperity. Nowadays it is a sign of national ill health—that we are losing a major battle on the home front. For, since so much of our plant is engaged in producing war goods, the money cannot be translated into goods and services. The volume of consumer goods available for civilian purchases, it is estimated, will drop to 77 billion dollars. Even after individual income taxes siphon off 15 billion dollars, there will still be 40 billion dollars of free spending power to add to already swollen cash reserves.

Here is an inflationary gap which at any time threatens to take the lid off our regular price controls and is already supporting a black market of formidable proportions and fancy prices. Wages and salaries have risen so rapidly that the recipients have not had time as yet to adjust their spending to their enlarged incomes. Furthermore, they have been hampered by rationing controls. But if these idle funds are not soon recaptured by the Government, they are going to overflow into the commodities market not in a trickle but in a rush that will sweep away the barriers erected by the price control authorities. There is no "maybe" about this prediction. Disaster is inevitable if steps are not taken to raise taxes and/or to expand buying of Government bonds out of savings to the extent of many billions of dollars.

It cannot be stressed too strongly that our black markets are due in very large part to the existence of idle funds that people are tempted to spend. That kind of temptation proves irresistible to many as deprivations become greater and the volume of accumulated unspent income mounts. Every responsible economist in the country, including experts attached to the Department of Commerce, the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Reserve Banks constantly stress the danger of inflation inherent in these unspent funds. Yet, in spite of the critical situation, the Ways and Means Committee has wasted two months in fruitless discussion of pay-as-you-go plans and the committee is now back at the starting point. Moreover, Chairman Doughton appears to be in no hurry to take up new tax proposals. Nor is there any word from the Treasury indicating an intention to press for a new tax program in the near future.

While the more than 40 billion dollars of surplus income received this year will be reduced to less terrifying proportions by purchases of Government bonds, the outlook is far from encouraging. For, as the Federal Reserve Bank of New York points out, the commercial banks and the Federal Reserve Banks are still financing over 50 per cent of the budgetary deficit. With deficits for the current fiscal year in the neighborhood of 60 billion dollars and with the prospect of a still larger deficit in the coming fiscal year, the banks at their present rate of buying would create about 30 billion dollars additional purchasing power this year and even more next year to supply the Government with needed funds. The longer this kind of financing continues, the closer the Nation approaches to a catastrophic explosion of inflationary forces. Organized labor seems to be waking up to this stark danger. It is a pity that the Government isn't.

Italian Jitters

It is an interesting circumstance that the greatest single force of Flying Fortresses ever employed against an enemy target was that employed in the raid on Cagliari, Corsica. Nearly a hundred of these powerful four-engined craft, accompanied by strong formations of Lightnings, took part in the raid. This is an indication, first of all, of the great strength of the American Air Force in North Africa. But it also serves as a reminder that weather conditions in the Mediterranean sector are far more favorable for daylight bombing of the kind the Fortresses are peculiarly fitted for than are the weather conditions in western Europe.

Sardinia is one of the great Axis bases from which the German-Italian forces in Tunisia are supplied. Sicily is another. But Sicily is just as vulnerable to Allied air power based on North Africa as is Sardinia. And after Tunisia is cleared of Axis troops, the vulnerability of Italy herself will very considerably increase. No wonder, then, that something like a state of panic is beginning to be manifested in the peninsula, and Mussolini has found it necessary to order all able-bodied men, from 17 up, to be prepared for military service when and if the Allied invasion begins.

That invasion, in fact, begins to loom as a possibility of the not very distant future for the harassed Italians who, never having their heart in this war, are now more distraught than ever over the prospect that their beautiful land will be made into an actual battlefield. But if their panic grows, so, too, does the panic of the Nazis. They never have hesitated to manifest their contempt for their Italian allies. But Hitler realizes, if his followers don't, how important it is to Germany to keep Italy in the war. For if Italy is lost a very powerful blow will have been dealt the Reich, one which may easily prove fatal.

Doctors' Dilemma

One of the real services which Government information can render to the American people is to set before them clearly and factually the nature of the problems which they must meet. Just such a service has been performed for the public by the Office of War Information in its report on the shortage of civilian doctors and the effects of this shortage on the Nation's health.

The general conclusion drawn by OWI as a result of its careful Nation-wide survey is that "while there is not at present a serious breakdown in the health of the Nation due to the doctor shortage, there is a probability of slow deterioration of health in communities suffering from medical shortages." One-third of the doctors normally engaged in full-time civilian practice have been drawn into the armed services. Those remaining, moreover, are unevenly distributed. Some rural areas, which even in ordinary times had far too little medical care, are now bereft of physicians entirely. Industrial communities whose populations have multiplied in response to war production needs do not have a sufficient number of doctors to care for even the most serious cases of illness and accident. And it must be remembered that their medical needs are aggravated by the overcrowding, poor housing, inadequate sanitation and long hours of work which are the inevitable conditions of wartime life.

The medical problem existing in some of the new war production centers was graphically portrayed in an article by Agnes E. Meyer in Tuesday's Post. Describing conditions in Bremerton, Wash., site of the Puget Sound Navy Yard, she reported: "At present there is one doctor in the Puget Sound area to 5000 or 6000 persons . . . Nearly a thousand persons a month leave Bremerton largely because of this lack of medical care."

Inadequate medical attention is one of the contributory causes of absenteeism. It paves the way for the spread of contagious disease which could reach epidemic proportions and cause a disastrous disruption of our war effort. Thus, quite clearly, the shortage of civilian doctors is a matter of immediate concern to military authorities. Yet these authorities are certainly not altogether free from responsibility for the shortage which exists. The armed forces have first call upon our medical facilities, as they must and should have first call upon every other national resource. Yet it is reasonable to ask that they make their demands as sparingly as possible. It is by no means clear that they have done so in regard to doctors.

The doctors themselves, especially the younger men, are naturally eager to don uniforms and enter military service. The Army and the Navy might well tell some of them that they can best serve the national welfare by staying in communities where they are urgently needed. Do the Army and the Navy, right now at the present stage of the war's development, require the full services of all the medical men they have put into uniform? If not, they might well release some of them, temporarily, until there is a genuine need to call them back into active duty. Army doctors in camps adjacent to industrial communities could, perhaps, be permitted to devote some portion of their time to meeting civilian medical needs.

The shortage can be relieved also by civilian efforts. Wider employment of the country's 9000 women physicians would help. There are now some 6000 refugee doctors in the United States, some of whom are kept from practicing by State licensing regulations or by the opposition of the organized medical groups. The Public Health Service should be given funds to enable its medical corps to practice where urgent needs exist. Above all, the War Manpower Commission's Procurement and Assignment Service must be empowered to act more vigorously toward the relocation of medical personnel. Essentially, the problem is one of effective manpower allocation. It can be met only by a recognition that the Nation's war needs are indivisible. There is no conflict or competition here between civilian and military requirements. They are linked together and must be confronted cooperatively.

A SONG FOR YOU

Should ever your lightest thought walk by
My listening heart must hear it pass
Be noon, be dark
Be ash, be spark,
Be step not bending blade of grass
Be song of silence where the lark
Has fled . . .
O thought, with lighter tread
Then star-shoes stepping down the air
The waiting heart will know you there . . .

Argentine Politics

By Virginia Prewett

Two Events

With the campaign that will give Argentina a new President next September slated to start within a very few weeks, two events that have significant bearing on the comparative strength of the isolationist conservatives and the prodemocratic opposition have happened in close succession. Since Argentina's foreign policy is involved, this is the most keenly watched political situation in the hemisphere today.

The first event was a heart attack recently suffered by Honorio Puyrredon, the Radical leader, who, it is conceded, will head the opposition ticket.

Liberal Hope Is Old

All observers agree that the opposition's best hope in the coming contest would arise from a combination of liberal parties, the strongest of which are the Radical and Socialist, under an aggressive Radical leadership. Puyrredon is one of Argentina's elder statesmen and has great personal prestige all over the nation, but his recent heart attack calls sharp attention to the fact that he is 70 years old and not in good health.

The other older Radical leaders are around Puyrredon's age and none of them has his standing. The party has a number of active young members who are making names for themselves in political life, but there is not one who as yet has the experience and the national reputation needed to rally liberal forces to a strong attack.

This leaves the opposition in Argentina without a figure of national proportions who can be expected to exert a vigorous leadership in the coming campaign. It can be counted a serious weakness in their position.

The second significant event is the contest over the election held on March 23 in the province of Entre Rios. First reports on this election gave the opposition ticket a 3000-vote majority over the government-backed conservative candidates. Entre Rios will account for 22 electoral votes next September and the apparent liberal victory there was hailed as a major break for the liberal cause.

Unfortunately for these hopes, the local conservative organization is charging that the election was fraudulent. Under Argentine law, when an election is contested, the President can appoint an "interventor" whose legal powers are such that he can readily swing political control into the hands of the government's machine if he wants to. Within the past two years the Castillo government has intervened with this result time after time. They did so even in the key province of Buenos Aires, the liberals' stronghold.

The conservatives call this "patriotic fraud." Although numerically a minority party within the nation, they have managed to build up a well-entrenched political control through practicing it.

These steamroller tactics, combined with the situation of the leadership among the opposition, make it almost a foregone conclusion that the conservatives will elect their man in September. This throws emphasis on the situation within the Conservative Party itself.

In recent months there have been definite signs that a revolt is brewing within conservative ranks against the high-handed actions of the Castillo clique. In early February the conservative deputy, Justo V. Rocha, who is chairman of the Chamber of Deputies foreign relations committee, wrote an open letter condemning Castillo's autocratic methods and his foreign policy to Senator Gilberto Suarez Lago, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee and president of the Conservative Party. Rodolfo Moreno, conservative governor of Buenos Aires province, has also made public statements that identify him with this revolt.

If the opposition victory in Entre Rios had been left undisputed, the province of Buenos Aires and with it Moreno and the dissatisfied conservatives, would have controlled a key bloc of votes in the coming presidential election. This lever would have made it possible for them to force some modification in the party's stand on "prudent neutrality" at the approaching national convention.

Clique Heads Off Revolt

But the Entre Rios election is contested and Entre Rios votes in control of the Castillo machine would counterbalance the Buenos Aires votes. The Castillo clique has never hesitated to use the power of intervention in provincial election disputes to beat down liberal opposition. In following precedent in Entre Rios, they would accomplish the double purpose of heading off, for the time at least, the threatened revolt within their own ranks.

It is possible, of course, that this threat will appear again from a new direction. The party platform is not yet written, but the personality of the man whom the controlling clique has picked to step into Castillo's shoes is revealing. He is Rebustiano Patron Costas, a sugar baron of purest conservative dye whose views and record indicate that he will follow closely in Castillo's footsteps.

The Castillo group has adopted a rigid line and have plainly shown that they do not intend to swerve from it. On the eve of the opening of the presidential campaign, all factors add up to an almost impregnable position for them in the political life of the nation.

This can be taken to mean that no matter what the admittedly prodemocratic Argentine majority may think about their country's foreign policy, there is little hope that their government will abandon its isolationist stand any time soon.

They Remember

Trade Agreements: An Acid Test

IN THE LATEST of the brilliant speeches he has been making on problems of postwar policy, Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles expressed a thought which cannot be repeated too often.

"One of the gravest doubts which exists in the minds of our partners of the United Nations today," he said, "is the doubt as to what the policy of the United States will be when victory is won. They remember that when the victory of 1919 had been achieved this great country of ours withdrew from almost every form of practical cooperation . . . and made no effort to win the peace."

THE CONSEQUENCES of the lone-handed policy pursued by the United States after the last war need no underlining at this time. They are only too firmly apparent in every phase of our national life, in the lives of every man, woman and child in this country.

Nor does one have to be a prophet or a son of a prophet to envisage the kind of a world we shall have if, after this war, we repeat the blunders of the past.

It will be a world even less to our liking than the world that arose from the ashes of Wilson's great dream. But the consequences of our refusal to participate in a program of international cooperation will this time be more immediately disturbing and also more drastic, so far as our lives and fortunes are concerned, than was the case last time.

WE ARE PAYING heavily in blood and treasure and tears for the mistakes of 1919. But be it remembered that for a decade after our return to isolation all the surface indications were (1) that we hadn't made a mistake and (2) that if we had the blunder was neither fatal nor costly.

That period saw the rise and flowering of a boom beyond any in our history. And during those 10 years the United States continued to exercise a very considerable, if not always constructive influence, on world affairs.

The hope of weaning the United States away from isolationism was long in dying. Our partners of World War I regarded the verdict of 1919 not as permanent and unalterable, but only as a temporary aberration. It is for that reason that they welcomed any and every proposal, however jejune, that emanated from Washington if such a proposal seemed to point in the direction of larger American participation in world affairs.

TO SECURE the postwar cooperation of the United States, France, at the peace conference, abandoned its claim to the left bank of the Rhine and to the Saar.

To rebuild the wartime bridge that had united this country and the Allies, Italy and France, despite their misgivings, joined Great Britain in participating in the Washington conference for the limitation of naval armaments. That conference and the agreements that arose from it were hailed by contemporaries as tremendously constructive, an example of brilliant American leadership in the cause of world peace. The ultimate result of that conference were not peace, but Pearl Harbor.

The powers applauded America's initiative in the matter of seeking a solution of the reparations problem. They applauded and signed the Briand-Kellogg Pact, which this country had sponsored, not because they had much faith in such diplomatic mumbo-jumbo, but because they hoped against hope that it would be followed by more active American efforts to bolster the peace.

By the same token, it is no mystery that in the second decade following the last war, the decade preceding the outbreak of hostilities in Europe, our influence upon the march of world events was reduced to the vanishing point. The Japanese militarists, Hitler and Mussolini paid no attention to our exhortations because they never had any force behind it. That grim decade saw the United States becoming, for all intents and purposes, a cipher in international affairs.

IF ONCE AGAIN we go the way of 1919 our influence will again shrink to zero, this time immediately, and every nation will, perforce, make its plans without us.

Having to keep the aggressors in check without the support of the United States, our allies will never agree to reduce their armaments. So, in turn, we, too, shall have to bear the burden in peacetime of the fearful cost of maintaining swollen military and naval establishments. The disturbing effect on world economy and on our own economy of such a state of affairs can easily be imagined.

Mr. Welles in his speech of last Wednesday made an extremely cogent plea for the renewal of the Trade Agreements Act. Like the Ball resolution, and even more because action on this matter cannot be postponed, what happens to the trade agreements provides an acid test of our postwar intentions.

As Mr. Welles points out, our allies will view the decision reached by Congress on this matter "a clear indication as to whether the people of the United States have determined upon a policy of international cooperation for the future, or whether they will once more turn back to that road of isolation which leads to inevitable disaster."

Letters To The Editor

Mr. Jones Defends Aluminum Contracts

On March 22, the Washington Merry-Go-Round supplied you with a column insinuating that the contracts between Metals Reserve Co. and the Aluminum Co. of Canada, for the purchase of aluminum, had been secretly made, were contrary to the President's policy, and had defrauded the American taxpayer. All of these statements are false.

The letter to Senator Truman shows that the appropriate policy-making agencies of the Government requested that these purchases of aluminum be made, that the President approved the program in its entirety, and that the advances were made under authority of law.

The statement that the projects had been "a closely guarded secret" is a complete falsehood. The first contract was announced by me at a press conference May 16, 1941, and published the following day in many newspapers. A press release was issued by the Federal Loan Agency on July 2, 1941, relative to the second contract. Wartime restrictions prevented public announcement of the two contracts concluded in 1942.

JESSE JONES,
Secretary of Commerce.
Washington, March 25.

March 24, 1943.

Dear Senator Truman:

In reply to your inquiry about Metals Reserve Co.'s purchases of aluminum from Canada, beg to advise that May 2, 1941, at the request of OPM, Metals Reserve Co. contracted with the Aluminum Co. of Canada for the purchase of 170,000 metric tons (374,680,000 pounds) of aluminum at 17 cents per pound, the then prevailing price of aluminum in this country.

This contract and all subsequent contracts in this program were approved by the President.

In connection with the purchase, the Aluminum Co. required an advance of 25 million dollars, which we agreed to make at 2 per cent interest. Such advances are authorized in connection with the purchase of critical and strategic materials under Section 5d of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended, and do not require interest. The interest was computed to equal 0.295 cents per pound of aluminum, and in drawing the contract this was deducted from the price of 17 cents. The advance was to be amortized at the rate of 6 2-3 cents per pound of aluminum delivered.

Substantial advances on purchase contracts of critical and strategic materials have been made to China and Russia, and in connection with purchases in some Latin-American countries.

May 13, 1941, OPM requested that the initial contract be doubled. This was concluded at the same price. The company asked for an advance of 25 million dollars against this contract, and a loan for this amount was made to it by the Export-Import Bank at 3 per cent interest.

In negotiating contracts with the Aluminum Co. of America to build and operate aluminum plants in the United States for our account we secured a reduction from Alcoa in the price of aluminum in the United States from 17 cents to 15 cents per pound, thereby saving the Government a great many millions of dollars.

After getting the reduced price from Alcoa, we asked the Aluminum Co. of Canada to reduce their price from 17 cents to 15 cents, notwithstanding we had contracted to pay 17 cents. The company was reluctant to reduce the price since they were getting 17 cents from the British and Canadian Governments. However, we finally prevailed upon them to reduce the price to 15 cents on 80 per cent of the shipments. To get this reduction in price, we waived the interest on the advances, and made a reduction in the amortization requirements. The reduction from 17 cents to 15 cents saved Metals Reserve Co. 16 million dollars, while only $2,500,000 was waived in interest. This revision of the previous contracts provided for an increase in our purchases of aluminum from Canada to one billion pounds.

February 23, 1942, we were requested by WPB to increase the purchase of Canadian aluminum by an additional 370 million pounds. These purchases were made at the reduced price schedule. The latter contracts also provided for advances against deliveries.

Total loans and advances to date in connection with all purchase contracts aggregate $69,500,000, and repayments have been $15,919,477. Total amount of aluminum contracted for is 1370 million pounds, and deliveries to date have been 368 million pounds.

The contracts made provision for a fixed basis of cancellation on any part of the aluminum that we might determine not to buy.

Metals Reserve Co. has had no control over the expenditure of the loans and advances, that is, whether they were to be used for working capital, plant expansion, or otherwise. Sincerely yours,

JESSE H. JONES,
Secretary of Commerce.

Just Global

The scene is any home of the postwar period, if the global mood goes on unchecked and aviation continues to develop by leaps and bounds.

Father—Where's everybody, dear? The house seems so quiet in the last hours.

Mother—Oh, nothing special. I hadn't noticed it.

Father—Where's Junior?

Mother—Junior went out just a minute ago—to Moscow, I think, he said, some place like that.

Father—He went to Moscow yesterday.

Mother—But it's all right if he goes again today, isn't it?

Father—I don't like him going there every day, you know. Where's Aletia?

Mother (nonchalantly)—She put on her hat and coat, so I guess she ran over to Brazil or Dakar. I think she said something about Dakar—but one never knows. She's so restless.

* * * *

Father—Where's Walter? I just saw him in the yard.

Mother—Walter had an hour or so on his hands and he took a run over to see that Stevens girl in Asia.

Mother—The Burma Road one, I think.

Father—She's quite a nice girl.

Mother—Oh, did you meet her?

Father—Of course. Don't you remember she was at that dinner we went to night before last in Fuchow?

Mother—What a bore that party was. I wish we had gone to the other one.

Father—What other one?

Mother—We were invited to bridge with the Biffells in Sebastapol the same night. If I'm going out for a whole evening I like Sevastopol.

* * * *

Father—Where's Jennie?

Mother—You know very well where Jennie goes every day.

Father—Where?

Mother—To school, of course.

Mother—Mrs. Crumpsell's Academy in Madagascar.

Father—I thought she was at Mrs. Bertinn's School in Zanzibar.

Mother—No, we took her out of that. She hated being so close to home.

Father—Where's the baby?

Mother—You still call Millicent the baby—she's almost 5 years old now.

Father—Where is she? I haven't seen her since breakfast.

Mother—The two little children next door came over and wanted to take her some place to play.

Father—Where did they go? Haven't we got a big yard?

Mother—Oh, Chidsey, you're so old-fashioned and provincial.

Father—Where did they go?

Mother—Im not sure. The Gallins child wanted to go to some park in India; the Adams girl preferred French Morocco. They'll be back presently!

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

A Good Day On The Home Front

Not for a long time has anything so promising happened on the home front as the decision which the labor leaders made public after their meeting at the White House on Thursday. Mr. Green and Mr. Murray tell us that, instead of a campaign to increase wage rates, they will make a campaign to restore and stabilize food prices. They could not have made a decision which serves better the country as a whole, their own rank and file, and the cause of organized labor.

LIPPMANN

THE ARGUMENT which Mr. John L. Lewis made recently proved conclusively that labor itself has nothing to gain by forcing up wage rates in the hope of catching up with the rising cost of living. For Mr. Lewis admitted that in the absence of effective price control, the retail shops in the mining communities were charging his miners what they could afford to pay: it followed, as night after day, that more pay would merely mean that the miners would be charged still more, and that they would, therefore, be no better off. The only remedy then was to deal with the prices of food rather than with wage rates.

This view, we now learn, has prevailed with the Combined Labor Victory Committee, which is headed by Mr. Green of the A. F. of L. and Mr. Murray of the C. I. O. If they act on it, and are encouraged, as most certainly they should be, to line up the influence of organized labor behind price control and rationing, they will revolutionize for the better the whole situation on the home front.

FOR the rationing of food at stable prices can be made to work if the community of the consumers realize how great is the stake of each family in its honest, just, and effective administration. The system could never be made to work if the great mass of the wage earners looked not to rationing and price control for their salvation but to wage demands backed by the threat of strikes. That could only inflate the black market, and make the proper distribution of food impossible, and give the weakest and poorest the short end of the stick.

But if organized labor will now identify its interest with the success of rationing and price control, then they can be made to succeed. In every community the officers and the rank and file of labor will be a body of inspectors and economic policemen. They will be far more alert and competent for enforcement than the OPA officials alone could possibly be. They will be in a position to know how rationing actually works, to report quickly where it is not working, and to carry on the complaint until it is remedied.

And where inspection and policing of prices were not sufficient, they would at once be in a position to propose the supplementary measures, such as the special requisitions and subsidies which may be needed then to make sure that the promised rations at the fixed price are available in the shops.

IN TAKING this line, the leaders of organized labor will alter radically their relation to the community. Instead of finding themselves isolated and opposed to the interests of the rest of the people because they threaten to interrupt war production and to wreck the price structure, they will become the champions of the interests of all the people. For it is the interest of all that rationing at stable prices should work. With labor exerting itself to make it work, instead of making it unworkable, organized labor will begin to earn the gratitude instead of the resentment of the Nation.

The leaders of labor must be aware of the hostility which has been building up against them, and they cannot afford to ignore the dangerous consequences this may have for them as time goes on, and especially in the postwar demobilization. If they stood to gain by pushing up wage rates, it would still be a recklessly unwise policy for them to follow. But since they cannot even obtain an immediate material benefit from this policy, it is, as the saying goes, worse than a crime—it is a blunder.

On the other hand, the course which they decided upon at the White House on Thursday is as sound as it is expedient, as right as it will be popular.

THE EQUALLY ugly controversy between the farm bloc and the rest of the Nation could also be settled. The farm bloc has nothing to gain by a policy which makes them the enemies of a stable cost of living. It is their best interest also to be the champions of a standard of life which provides adequate food at stable prices. They must, therefore, wish to see rationing work.

It is also true, however, that in order to obtain maximum production of the particular foods which are most needed in the war, farmers must have the inducement of prices which not only cover their costs but yield an incentive profit. For a planned war agriculture in a country of this size cannot be regimented. It can only be induced. The effective inducement is profit. Therefore, the community must not be dogmatic about "ceilings" but must take the view that it will pay for food, as it pays for airplanes, what it is necessary to pay to get the food.

THIS SEEMS to raise a conflict of interest between the farmers' incentive profit and the consumers' need for stable prices. But the conflict is apparent rather than real: it arises from the dogmatic prejudice of the farm leaders against subsidies and the dogmatic prejudice of others in favor of frozen prices. Let all the prejudices be laid aside, and the practical and self-evident solution, which every country has adopted, emerges. It is to use Government subsidies to close the gap between the higher inducements which farmers need and the fixed prices which the consumers need.

The money invested in those subsidies is as much a legitimate cost of war as any other war expenditure, and a few hundred million dollars used to make rationing work will pay high dividends in efficiency and good will.

Harder War Seen

Princeton, N. J., April 2.—Even before Prime Minister Churchill's recent warning to the British people that they still face a long hard war, the British public had adapted its own thinking to the idea that the worst is yet to come.

When the Prime Minister stepped before the House of Commons to make his speech, he was talking to a nation which believes overwhelmingly that the British army has by no means seen its hardest fighting and that Germany cannot be defeated without large-scale invasion of the continent, using every ounce of force the Allies can muster. So far as the majority of Britons are concerned, the Churchill warning against complacency was probably unnecessary.

Invasion Necessary

Despite Russian successes in the East and the often-advanced theory that Germany can be beaten into submission by bombing alone, the British public has long held the view that the Nazis cannot be crushed without a large-scale invasion of Europe from the West or the South. Today that belief is more widely held than ever, as the following survey by the British Institute of Public Opinion indicates.

"Do you think it will be necessary for the Allies to invade the continent before Germany can be defeated?"

In line with this sentiment is the widespread belief that the British armies still have their toughest battles ahead. When asked whether the British Tommies have seen their hardest fighting, 78 per cent of Britons said "no."

War Council Favored

There is a rising sentiment throughout England in favor of a supreme war council of all the United Nations to plan and direct the war on all fronts. At the time of the Casablanca conference there was much speculation both here and in England as to whether such a council would be set up.

The popular appeal which the idea has in Britain is shown in the following trend revealed by British Institute surveys:

"Should Britain, America, Russia and China form a supreme war council to plan and direct the war on all fronts?"

	Oct. 1942	Today
Yes	85%	76%
No	9	9
Undecided .	26	15

British public sentiment does not, however, favor the appointment of one supreme commander over all the armed forces of the United Nations. Approximately one-third favor such a plan, while 40 per cent oppose it and the rest are undecided.

The general feeling is that it would be impractical for one man to try to take control of all the fighting fronts around the world.

Brown On 'Hot Seat'

Now Patman Orders OPA Inquiry

OPA Administrator Prentiss M. Brown was viewed yesterday as on a "hot seat" as a result of recent developments in OPA.

It appeared that the controversy over grade labeling of canned goods had become the focal point of a struggle which will determine whether Lou R. Maxon, a Detroit advertising executive brought in by Brown to be deputy administrator in charge of information, or three deputy administrators appointed by Brown's predecessor, Leon Henderson, will have a major voice in OPA operations.

Meanwhile, Chairman Patman (Democrat) of Texas, head of the House Small Business Committee, announced that he had ordered an immediate investigation of the OPA to determine whether the agency had exceeded powers granted by Congress.

"No End of Trouble"

"I have ordered an investigation into all phases of the issuance of orders and regulations by the OPA," Patman said. 'Our committee is convinced that the emergency price control act has not been complied with. Conditions are forced upon retailers and wholesalers which do not follow the provisions of this act. This has caused no end of trouble to retailers."

Earlier, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, entered the grade-labeling controversy by informing Brown that grade labeling is a "war emergency program," with "inevitable breakdown of price control on basic consumer goods" as the altenative. Grade labeling has been opposed by national canning interests as a needless reform measure.

Maxon has sided with the canners, while the three Henderson deputies have favored the labeling proposition, alone, with consumer and labor groups.

Brown yesterday made it clear that Maxon was not to have power to overrule the other three deputies without first securing Brown's approval.

Three Other Deputies Protest

Thursday, it was revealed, Brown issued an order giving Maxon a complete veto over all OPA orders which, in his opinion, might "endanger" OPA public relations.

The three deputies appointed by Henderson—J. K. Galbraith, in charge of price control; Paul A. Porter, in charge of rent control, and Paul M. O'Leary, in charge of rationing—promptly went to Brown and demanded, in effect, to know "who is running this show, anyway."

Brown then ordered Maxon's veto power temporarily suspended pending examination of the situation. Yesterday he announced that he had given Maxon authority to review all actions which bear on OPA relations with the public "in order to minimize irritations flowing from them," but added this significant reservation which did not appear in the original veto order:

"Mr. Maxon has been instructed and understands that when he differs with any other deputy administrator on a matter of policy, as a result of his scrutiny of proposed OPA actions, the problem is to be referred to me for decision."

The OPA information division held the same relationship with the other divisions during Henderson's regime.

In deciding between the three operating deputies and Maxon on the grade labeling question, Brown faces the likelihood that the three will resign if they lose the fight. A decision is expected this coming week.

It is clear that the possibility of their resigning in a body was one of the factors prompting Brown to limit the effectiveness of Maxon's authority to veto OPA actions.

Brown said he wanted OPA regulations to be reviewed "carefully to make sure that they could be easily understood by the groups to which they apply, and that they did not cause unnecessary resentment by the groups affected." He added, however, that "once regulations and orders are put in final form, I intend to enforce them to the letter and to bring violators to account."

Stands By Maxon

"This order is not a reflection on the able and hard-working group of men making up the staff of OPA," Brown said. "It is a recognition of the fact that Mr. Maxon, the only man whom I have appointed to a policy-making post since becoming OPA administrator, is a well-known authority in the public relations field, and I have the fullest confidence in his ability and integrity."

The Small Business Committee inquiry was ordered on the petition of 19 national retail distribution organizations representing some 500,000 retail merchants engaged in various merchandising lines, Patman said, adding:

"Being shorthanded for help to operate their businesses, these merchants do not understand why they should be subjected to so much paper work, figuring markups or dollar-and-cents ceilings, especially when such percentages are contrary to their usual policy in pricing their merchandise.

"There have been numerous instances when they have been asked to accept a reduction in their mark-up despite higher operating costs and higher taxes."

Torpedoed Ship, Given Up as Lost, Makes Port

By Edwin D. Gritz

Widespread shipping waste and mismanagement which is endangering lives of fighting men was charged by President Philip Murray of the C. I. O. yesterday in a detailed statement, with examples, sent to Senator Sheridan Downey (Democrat) of California for Government action.

"Lives of American and Allied fighting men are being endangered and lost because of insufficient supplies or delays in supplies reaching the armed forces," Murray said, adding that repeated suggestion of union plans and ideas to correct the situation have merely led Government agencies involved to "whitewash" their part in the matter.

Downey immediately informed the Senate of the report, saying that it carried "serious charges" and should be investigated by the Truman Senate war investgating committee.

Bridges Filed Similar Charges

War Shipping Administration officials, informed of the charges, admitted they received a similar report of "mismanagement" about three weeks ago from Harry Bridges, West Coast C. I. O. leader, but said the charges then as now were not sufficiently specific for immediate remedial action.

Although asserting that investigation was still in progress, shipping officials made a strong point of their desire "to get the facts," indicating in effect that if the C. I. O. could back up its charges, corrective action would follow where advisable.

The officials said, however, that many points of criticism, some of them contained in the C. I. O. report, were unjustified on the basis of war shipping experience.

The War Shipping Administration released a statement on one phase of its "mismanagement" investigation, that dealing with dry or sand ballast. This was in answer to repeated criticisms that ships frequently carry sand for ballast to and from war zones instead of utilizing the space for vital return cargoes.

This report stressed that ship time was of first importance. Other factors leading to the use of sand ballast were listed as lack of "necessary" war cargoes in war zones like North Africa, lack of loading facilities, enemy bombing danger in foreign ports, and the almost imperative need for a dependable ballast to enable safe operation of ships in convoys where rigid speeds are maintained.

The C. I. O. statement prefaced its list of bad shipping practices with a charge that the incentive or peacetime competition that existed between private shipping companies has been eliminated through cost-plus contracts, with profits guaranteed under "any and all circumstances."

Examples of waste and mismanagement included:

"At Southwest Pacific ports, ships unloading dump tons of trucks, guns, ammunition and supplies into the sea.

Very recently, in a West Coast port area, 250,000 tons of lend-lease cargo awaited shipment on docks. For two days in that particular week, not one of the hundreds of skilled longshoremen in the port worked a single hour.

"A ship lay 100 days in the South Pacific, during which time crew members were not permitted to help unload the ship by order of the shipping operators . . .

Unessential Cargoes Cited

"Ships carry wine and champagne cargoes in the Pacific. Others carry cargoes of bananas, artificial flowers, birdseed, caviar, toothpicks, and toys.

"A ship completed its outbound voyage, docking in Africa. The docks were stacked with crude rubber awaiting shipment to the United States. The ship returned to the United States in ballast, leaving the rubber.

"A ship made a trip from New York to Brazil and West Africa without loading or unloading.

"A ship waited 10 days at Bombay, India, for cargo. No cargo was available. She stopped at three more ports; no cargo there. The ship was finally ordered to Argentina, carrying 800 tons of water ballast. This ship spent two months all told seeking cargo before getting a load . . .

"During a recent two-week period, six ships left the Atlantic Coast loaded to 70 per cent capacity only, wasting 30 per cent. On a recent voyage of 185 days, a ship wasted 45 days in waiting to be discharged and loaded again in foreign ports. Another wasted 33 days, a third 29 days."

Montgomery Gets Leave to Recover From Tropic Fever

San Francisco, April 2 (AP).—Lieut. Comdr. Henry Montgomery, jr.—plain Robert Montgomery to millions of screen fans—returned today from rigorous sea duty in the South Pacific to recover from tropical fever.

Pale and 22 pounds lighter than he was in his film days, Montgomery will have 30 days to visit his wife and two young children in Los Angeles before being reassigned to duty.

"I've only been with them for a total of five days in two years," he said. "It's going to be a wonderful reunion."

Montgomery was aboard warships which bombarded the Jap airfield at Munda, New Georgia, on January 5, and struck again at the enemy field at Vila, Kolombangara Island, on January 24.

Ranchers Blame Army Plane Flares For Prairie Fire

Brady, Nebr., April 2 (AP).—Fire Chief Eauclaire Dewey said this afternoon he was investigating reports from ranchers that an Army plane dropping flares was responsible for a prairie fire that started at noon yesterday and burned over an area 20 miles long and 15 miles wide.

Dewey said the ranchers told him they saw the plane, and that a short time later the fire broke out in many sections.

At least 1000 tons of hay and perhaps 300 head of cattle were destroyed, according to reports from ranchers given to Dewey.

Dewey said that the fire, fought by approximately 800 volunteers at its height last night, was finally brought under control this afternoon.

Doctors Hospital Quits Group Hospitalization

Doctors Hospital has withdrawn from Group Hospitalization, Inc. The reason, according to Joseph H. Himes, president, is that the hospital is in a different category from the others in the city which do not have to pay taxes and he said he had been informed that the Doctors Hospital had found it could not afford to give the services needed at the price available.

As a result of this action, the board of trustees of the association voted to pay to the patient using a nonmember hospital $6.50 a day instead of the former $5 per day which had previously been paid directly to the hospital. Proof that accommodations could not be secured in a member hospital must be furnished.

Nats' 16-Hit Attack Beats Norfolk Gobs, 9 to 6

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Norfolk, Va., April 2.—Pewee Reese, the best shorstop in the National League last season when he was with Brooklyn, has been farmed out by the Norfolk Naval Training Station team. He couldn't make the grade.

POVICH

That ought to give you an idea of what kind of baseball talent the Navy has been funneling into its Norfolk training base. They didn't need Reese, because the Navy team here has the man who was the best shortstop in the American League, Phil Rizzuto.

There isn't a major league club which can be as choosey about its talent as the Norfolk Training Station. There isn't a big league club, for instance, which could release not only Reese, but Pitcher Hugh Casey, formerly of Brooklyn; Murray Franklin, the former Detroit third baseman; Al Evans, former Washington catcher, and a half-dozen other big leaguers.

They weren't needed around here, so the training station team sent 'em across the road to the Naval Air Base squad, just out of friendship.

If there are any ball players the Norfolk Training Station happens to need, and if they happen to be in the Navy, they would be here in a jiffy. Within the past fortnight, for instance, a chap was sent along from the Treasure Island (Calif.) Training Station, because the team here needed another outfielder. He was Dominic Di Maggio.

The gentleman, whose doings it is, is Capt. H. A. McClure, the commanding officer here, who is reflecting that the Norfolk base have the best ball team in the world, no less. Captain McClure is a fan. That's why Di Maggio, Don Padgett, Freddy Hutchinson, Rizzuto, Benny McCoy and a dozen other big leaguers are playing for Norfolk.

On the wall of the dugout of the Norfolk team is a stern command: "By order of the Commanding Officer, nobody except players of the Naval Training Station team is permitted in this dugout." That goes, except for one exception. The exception is Captain McClure, himself. He reserves for himself a seat on the players' bench at every game.

When a Navy player hits a home run, for instance, the first man to greet him after he crosses home plate is Captain McClure. When Benny McCoy clouted a homer over the right-field wall against the Nats yesterday, the commanding officer, gold braid and all, was waiting for him out on the field in high glee. Phil Rizzuto got the same reception.

When Dominic Di Maggio took a nasty spill over the low fence in chasing a fly ball the other day, and lay inert on the turf, Commanding Officer McClure didn't wait for the trainers to report on Di Mag's condition. He leaped into the automobile he had parked near the dugout, chauffeured it himself, and careened past first base on a wild dash to the outfield to see for himself what had happened to "his boy." He offered to drive Di Maggio to the hospital personally until it developed the player was not seriously hurt.

There were 6000 sailors and officers in the park when the Nats played the Norfolk club in the opening game yesterday and they were there because Captain McClure likes a large attendance. It isn't mandatory that all men on the base with liberty go to the ball game, but its understood pretty thoroughly that the commanding officer wants it that way.

It's great stuff, this baseball, Captain McClure thinks. He interprets its benefits from his own reaction. He calls it wonderful relaxation and a morale-builder. He says it has a very definite part in the whole training program. And besides, of course, he likes to see a ball game.

McClure doesn't want his athletes pampered, though. They don't have any soft touch despite their fame. The bugle blows for most of 'em at 4:45 a. m. After they complete their training course, they have it a bit easier. But Freddy Hutchinson's case is pretty typical. He was up one day last season at 3 a. m. to stand watch from 4 to 6. Then he drilled until chow at 11 and at noon was back on the drill field until 2 p. m. An hour later he was "one of McClure's boys," out there pitching a full ball game.

Beau Jack Winner Over Armstrong

Mob Boos Verdict; Vote Is Unanimous; N.Y. Champ Saved By His Early Lead

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer

Madison Square Garden, N. Y., April 2.—Beau Jack, New York's version of the lightweight champion, won a 10-round, non-title decision here tonight over "Hammering Henry" Armstrong, former triple-crown wearer, but the turnaway crowd of 19,986, rabidly pro-Armstrong, figured differently.

As the former Augusta shoe-shine boy's hand was raised in triumph, the mob let go a tremendous boo. As they left the ring, "The Hammer" won the ovation and the Beau got the jeers, and as Harry Balogh stepped to the microphone to announce the next bout, he was greeted with another howl of derision.

But Beau Jack won in everybody's eyes that mattered—two judges and Referee Billy Cavanaugh, all of whom voted for the Beau.

Five for Beau Jack

Cavanaugh voted five rounds for Beau, three for Henry and two even; one judge said it was eight and two and the other said it was seven and two with one even.

Armstrong is Strong

But it was closer than that. "The Hammer" finished strong—so strong that Beau Jack was taking something of an artistic pasting during the final two rounds, but the Beau had piled up an almost insurmountable advantage by that time.

Henry was almost; but not quite, the Henry of old. Ever onward he plunged in that unchangeable style that earned him the name of "perpetual motion," but he wasn't the puncher nor did his punches carry the authority of the Armstrong of other years. He weighed two and one quarter pounds more than the Beau, 138 to 135¾.

Nor did Henry's eyes trouble him. His only excuse was age and the freshness of the younger man facing him, a condition he could do nothing about but at that, Henry was a tough boy for the Georgia shoe-shine kid.

As he promised, "The Hammer" worked on the Beau's middle, beating out a rythm in accompaniment to his methodical bobbing and weaving style. But the Beau took it in good style.

Beau Starts Fast

Jack started like a whirlwind, stabbing lefts at the ever coming Henry that bothered "The Hammer." It looked as if Beau was going too fast and few thought he could maintain the pace. But, except for the ninth and tenth rounds, he did. During the first eight rounds, the Beau threw countless punches, missing many as Henry weaved and bobbed out of the way, but many more connected.

From the first to the eighth, it was almost monotonous. Beau kept stabbing his left, trying vicious uppercuts and generally on the run. Henry was beating Beau inside and continued to force the fight.

In the fifth, Henry staggered Beau with a hard right and the crowd, sensing a possible thriller, roared approval, but Beau weathered the squall and emerged nicely with his flashy back-pedaling.

Armstrong's Game

Finally, in the ninth round, the Beau suddenly changed his tactics and stood toe-to-toe and slugged. At this game, Armstrong was in supreme command and looked like the champion he once was. And in the tenth, Henry landed several hard rights and that had the Beau's head buzzing.

The fight was closer than the judges saw it and the Beau was not the 1-to-2 shot the boys who lay it on the line had him. Armstrong was a better Henry than most everybody realized. It could have gone either way. Incidentally, Mike Jacobs' cash register totaled $104,976 and it would have been more if every seat in the place wasn't sold.

Sullivan Hits Homer and Breaks Tie

Case Also Slams for Circuit; Carrasquel, Pyle Shine on Hill; Wynn Hard Handled

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Norfolk, Va., April 2.—On the baseball front, the Navy took a beating today. The Nats deflated the proud Norfolk Training Station team, giving the Gob's pitching a 16-hit burst and a 9-to-6 defeat in the presence of 4000 sailor fans.

A home run by Johnny Sullivan in the eighth inning didn't hurt the Nats any. Sullivan walloped a line drive deep into the leftfield corner with Gerry Priddy on base at a time when the score was tied at 6-6. Until that point the Norfolk Sailors were very much in the ball game despite their grand total of only five hits off the Washington pitching in contrast to the Nats' 16 blows.

Alex Carrasquel and Rookie Ewald Pyle removed the bite from the Sailor squad in the last six innings after Early Wynn had been pounded for five runs in the first three. Carrasquel gave up only one hit in his three-inning turn, and Rookie Pyle did likewise, holding the Gobs scoreless.

Case Hits Homer

George Case produced an important blow for the Nats in the second inning with his club trailing, 4 to 3. He whacked a cute homer into right field with Clary on base. It was a deliberately placed drive off Walter Masterson.

The Nats collected their winning runs off Tom Earley, former pitcher for the Boston Braves, in the eighth inning, but the fellow they treated the most roughly was Walter Masterson, their old pal.

They scored their first six runs off Masterson who gave up nine hits in the first three innings. The Nats scored three runs after Clary and Case both struck out in the opening inning. Then followed five straight singles, by Spence, Johnson, Vernon, Priddy and Sullivan.

Wynn in Trouble

But at the end of the inning the Nats were trailing, 4-3. Wynn was in trouble after issuing two walks, and Padgett got a run home with a single. Then Eddie Robinson, former Baltimore first baseman whacked a homer over Case's head with two on base and the Gobs were in front, 4-3.

After Case's two-run home moved the Nats ahead, 5-4, in the second the Sailors tied the score at 5-5, and in the fourth they tied it again at 6-6.

Priddy's single to right with two out in the eighth set the stage for Sullivan's crusher, his homer into the left field corner. The Sailors got only one hit after the fourth inning. . . . The first man to face Alex Carrasquel, Phil Rizzuta, tripled to right, but the Venezuelan allowed no more blows. . . . Pyle pitched himself into the affection of Manager Ossie Bluege with his one-hit job in the last three innings. . . . The rookie southpaw struck out three and walked only one. . . . Gerry Priddy produced the fielding feature of the game with a one-hand pick-up of Robinson's grounder far to his left in the eighth. . . . It superceded Stan Spence's shoestring catch of Padgett's Texas Leaguer in the seventh. . . . An odd thing about the Nats' hitting: At the end of three innings, when they had nine hits, every man in the line up owned a hit. . . . Manager Bluege was able to feast his eyes on a smart double play by the Nats new infield, via Priddy, Sullivan and Vernon. . . . The Nats have been forced to cancel the game scheduled here with the Norfolk Sailors on Tuesday, owing to lack of transportation back to Washington. . . . Tomorrow, the Nats take on the Sailor team again, with Owen Sheets and Jim Mertz sharing the pitching.

All Athletics Are Dropped By Duquesne

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, April 2.—Duquesne University, a little school with a big football and basketball reputation, became a "war casualty" today, scrapping its entire intercollegiate sports program for the duration.

John D. Holahan, graduate manager of athletics, said the action was necessary because of "the uncertainty of athletes and opponents for next fall and winter." He said the school would concentrate on intramural sports and a physical-fitness program.

All Sports Ties Severed

While numerous schools have dropped either football or basketball—or both—Duquene is one of the few major schools to sever all its collegiate sports ties.

The Dukes' action brought downright sorrow from Football Coach Aldo T. (Buff) Donelli and Chick Davies, floor mentor, whose teams were nationally known.

Donelli, in four years, rolled up the scintillating mark of 29 victories and 2 ties against 4 defeats—including a stretch of 16 straight triumphs until a 14-6 defeat by North Carolina the past year.

A Great Record

Davies enjoyed even greater success over a longer period of years In 1933, 1935 and 1940 his teams lost but one game each year. This year, almost completely riddled by losses to the armed services, the Dukes were the only college team to beat Wyoming, which defeated Georgetown for the N. C. A. A. title and then whipped St. John's, the Metro Invitation winner, 52-47. The Dukes trimmed the Cowboys, 43-33, in an early season game here.

Musto KnockedOut By Sergt. Gomez

Tampa, Fla., April 2 (AP).—Sergt. Tommy Gomez, hard-punching Army heavyweight from Camp Van Dorn, Miss., continued his pugilistic successes here tonight by scoring a technical knockout over Tony Musto of Chicago in 49 seconds of the first round of a scheduled 10 rounder.

Ft. Belvoir Wins, 18-6; Hoyas' 16 Errors Help

Joe Wells Gives G. U. Good Pitching For 5 Frames; Mann Slams Homer

Georgetown University, long a keen factor in intercollegiate baseball, struck an all-time low yesterday when the Hoya nine, formed to carry on at all costs, took an 18-6 drubbing from the Fort Belvoir Army team in its 1943 debut.

The Hilltoppers may have set some kind of collegiate record when the scorekeeper charged them with 16 (count 'em) errors during the nine innings played in a high wind on the Medico field at the university. Coach Joe Gardener used three pitchers and Joe Wells appeared much the best. The Washington boy allowed only one hit in the five innings he worked but his mates booted the ball around to give the servicemen five runs. Earl Branfield and Gene Rosel pitched the remaining frames and were not effective although their support was discouraging.

The longest clout for Georgetown was from the bat of Mann, who slammed a homer. Fort Belvoir showed two effective hurlers in Seidel and Sokolnicki.

In the sixth inning, the soldiers chased an even dozen runs across the plate.

Mike Belloise Wins

Philadelphia, April 2 (AP).—Former Featherweight Champion Mike Belloise of New York won an unanimous decision over Charley Williams, Philadelphia Negro, in the eight-round feature bout at the Cambria tonight.

Conqueror Of Dorazio Boxes Here

Herbert Marshall, hard-hitting Brooklyn Negro heavyweight who upset Gus Dorazio in Philadelphia five weeks ago, yesterday was signed to appear on the Liberty Athletic Club's boxing show at Uline Arena next Friday night.

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn last night announced that Marshall will box the best available opponent in one of three eight-round features which otherwise are to bring together Louis (Kid) Cocoa vs. Young Kid Robinson, welterweights, and Joey Archibald vs. Carroll (Kid) Alexander, featherweights.

Ahearn last night disclosed that efforts are being made to line up an opponent for Marshall from such heavyweights as Johnny Kapovich, Nat Mitchell, Wally Sears, Freddy Fiducia and Herbie Katz, and predicted that Marshal would develop into an overnight sensation locally.

Binns Wins Junior GoldenGloves Bout

The semifinals of the annual District Junior Golden Gloves Tourney were held last night at the Georgetown Branch of the Washington Boys' Club.

The feature bout was between Binns of the Georgetown Branch and Arduini of No. 4 Police Boys' Club. Binns won. The two youngsters brought the crowd to its feet many times in a real old-fashion slug-fest.

Phillies Buy Sandlotter For Shortstop

By the Associated Press

Hershey, Pa., April 2.—The Phillies got a shortstop today with the purchase of Garton Del Savio from the Cincinnati Reds for the waiver price of $7500.

Del Savio played shortstop with Cleveland's independent Bushwick Team last year before being picked up by the Reds. Prior to joining the Bushwicks he played with Birmingham of the Southern Association, and at one time or another has gone to bat for Binghamton, Akron, Norfolk and Wheeling.

A right-hand hitter, his batting average varied from .278 to .293 during his stay with Birmingham. In '40 he batted in 76 runs. Del Savio is expected to report to the Phillies tomorrow and may see action against the Athletics in Wilmington, Del., on Sunday.

Naval Air Wins, 35-29

Naval Air Station quint last night extended the double knock-out playoff of the Potomac River Naval Command Basketball League to a third game with a 35-29 win over the Marine Barracks. Arvidson, West and Marlow were outstanding for the winners while Lombardi stood out for the Marines.

The final game will be played Monday night at Eastern High School with the victor claiming the championship. Capt. Howard Wellbrock will make presentations to the winning team at the conclusion of the tiff.

Ambassador Swimming Team Dominates A. A. U. Finals

The Ambassador Swimming Club natators will dominate the field tonight as finalists in the District of Columbia A. A. U. junior and senior swimming championships poise for the starter's gun at the Boys Club Eastern Branch pool at 8 o'clock.

The downtown organization qualified an even dozen girls last night in the preliminary heats for five women's junior championships, and the men's team is sending seven finalists in the men's senior events.

The Shoreham girls were runners-up, placing eight in the money races, while the host club's men's team finished second to Ambassador with a total of four.

Helen Poyner of Ambassador, the District's senior indoor sprint champ, led the distaff qualifiers with a total of three firsts in the junior trials. Teammate Leola Thomas, who is the women's senior grandslam breast stroke queen, also invaded the junior field to win her way to the championship heats in the century breast stroke and the 150-yard individual medley relay.

A spectacular race looms in the men's senior 150-yard backstroke between Ernie Boggs, present record holder and back stroke champ in 1937-38-39-41, and John Dilley of the Navy, a former Purdue University tankman. Both won their trial races easily.

Another close finish is in prospect in the 100-yard free style where Gene Cunney and Bob Benson are installed as favorites. Cunney recently won the junior title and Benson came within one-half second of the record in annexing the "100" crown in the same meet.
—OSCAR ELDER.

Those qualifying for the District of Columbia A. A. U. championship heats are:
Men's Senior Indoor Championships

Dorothy Kirby Wins Tourney

By International News Service

Pinehurst, N. C., April 2.—Dorothy Kirby of Atlanta, Ga., medalist this year and frequently runner-up in previous years, today won the North and South women's golf championship, defeating Jane Crum of Orangeburg, S. C., 5 and 3.

Miss Kirby took an early lead and played steady golf throughout, whereas Miss Crum's game was somewhat erratic.

Glass and Schwartz In Handball Final

Lieut. Bob Glass and defending champion Jack Schwartz advanced to the final round of the A. A. U. handball championship play last night by defeating Dave Boland and Al Houlon, respectively. Glass won convincingly 21-15, 21-8 while Schwartz was winning, 21-6, 21-7.

The final of the singles will be played next Monday and the doubles final will take place next Wednesday. Both matches will commence at 7:30 o'clock at the Y. M. C. A.

Pounds Says Post Pigeons Prove Nature Great Leveler

Pneumonia Nook, April 2.

Dear Boss:

I've done a lot of kidding lately about the pigeons who built their nest on the ledge outside the Sports Department window. Now I want to get serious for a few lines. It is amazing, Boss, the number of people who are interested in the doings of these birds and their offspring. It has been brought home to me these last three weeks that truly Nature is a great leveler.

HAIGHT

Last week I heard a pressman, with muscles bulging under his flannel shirt, boasting that he actually had seen the egg. A Navy lieutenant stops by the office several times a week to observe the happy family and asks if he can bring his little boy down for a peek.

A printer on the "lobster shift" stops on his way to the composing room, carefully pulls back the corner of the blackout curtain and remarks, "She's restless on the nest tonight."

The other afternoon the little one was poking his open mouth from under his father's wing and the gallery included a former light heavyweight boxer, our music editor, the proprietor of a nearby restaurant, a bookmaker who came up to inquire about Bay Meadows, a paper truck driver and a well-dressed old gent who said he was stopping at the Willard.

Yesterday, one of our copy girls was on watch and she yelled, "Nest is open!" Well, Boss, you would have thought the pigeons had struck oil or were selling Nilon hose at 50 cents a pair!

Everybody on the second floor rushed for the window. I haven't seen such a demand for eyespace around Pneumonia Nook since the last Inauguration parade.

Almost anybody at The Post can tell you that Papa Pete covers the nest from 10 a. m. until late afternoon. In fact, most of them have observed that Mama Pat flies in between 5:15 and 5:25 p. m. to go on the night shift. This period always finds a dozen persons on hand. You would think their ship was coming in or a rich uncle was getting off the train. When Pat flutters to a two-point landing on the ledge as punctual as if she had been watching the old post office clock, cries go up of "She's in" and "There's Pat."

The hen is getting so she expects a reception. She struts around a bit even if Papa Pete hops off the nest at the first sight of her. Junior must know his mama by now for he keeps his mouth wide open. Pat finally walks onto the nest and it is meal time (no ration points) for the young one.

Junior is a week old today and he really has grown. He's three times the size he was when hatched. The yellow fuzz is wearing off and his skin is making ready to sprout those important feathers. Right now he's far from a beauty.

I got a scare this afternoon. A copy girl yelled excitedly, "Come here quick, Mr. Haight!" I ran to the window and she said, "Look, that little pigeon has a hole in the side of his head."

I looked and she was right. I was pondering what to do about it when Warren Van Sciver, who has a loft of racing pigeons, arrived. I told him about our discovery.

"That's O. K.," laughed Van. "He's got another hole in his head just like that on the other side. Those are his ears." As ever, POUNDS HAIGHT.

Brooklyn Loans Army Two Hurlers And Pounds Them; Eight Errors in Fray

By the Associated Press

West Point, N. Y., April 2.—Billy Herman and Roberto Ortiz hit home runs today as the Brooklyn Dodgers of the National League defeated the Cadet baseball team of the United States Military Academy, 12 to 8, in a game cut to eight innings by agreement.

Cadet hurlers pitched for Brooklyn while Manager Leo Durocher loaned the collegians two of his rookie moundsmen, Sanner and Chipman. The two were touched for 16 hits by the National Leaguers.

Although each team made four errors, the play was good considering weather conditions.

Indians' Edwards 3-A

Norwalk, Ohio, April 2.—The Cleveland Indians' desperate outfield situation was relieved somewhat today when Selective Service Board No. 1 announced that Hank Edwards, hard-hitting 23-year-old rookie, was being retained in Class 3-A because of dependency.

The unmarried outfielder was one of the only three gardeners left in the Tribe's spring training camp at Lafayette, Ind., after Gaffke decided to give up the game. Holdout Jeff Heath is the only other outfielder on the Cleveland roster.

Board No. 1 recently ordered Edwards to take a physical examination, leading to fears the Indians would be left with only two outfielders, but resurveyed the case last night and decided, a board member said, to continue the deferment because of unusual dependency conditions.

Edwards is understood to be the sole support of his family—father, mother, and three school children—and two brothers are in service. The board member asked that he not be quoted by name.

DeSautels Gets Call

Lafayette, Ind., April 2 (AP).—Although the Cleveland Indians went out of their way to acquire Buddy Rosar from the New York Yankees, Gene DeSautels remains the Tribe's No. 1 catcher, Manager Lou Boudreau said today.

"Gene deserves the No. 1 rating if only on account of his greater experience," declared Boudreau. "If the future proves that Rosar is more valuable than DeSautels, he'll be on the job, of course. But right now Gene is No. 1."

The Indians broke up their spring training camp here today after a morning workout, and left for Muncie, Ind., for their first major league competition of the season—a week-end series with the Pittsburgh Pirates. The Tribe works out next week at the Indianapolis ball park.

Pirates' Drill Shortened

Muncie, Ind., April 2 (AP).—For the thirteenth consecutive day in the 16 since training started, the Pittsburgh Pirates hustled through an outdoor drill today which Manager Frankie Frisch cut short with the observation, "A little rest will do no harm now."

Frisch took time out to praise his training quarters, the people of Muncie and Mayor John C. Hampton in particular.

"The mayor personally directs the men who keep the city-owned ball park in the best possible shape," said Frisch. "He has shown himself to be a live wire and almost every day he puts on a fielding glove and exercises with the squad."

Derringer to Start

French Lick, Ind., April 2 (AP).—Big Paul Derringer, the Cubs' newcomer who has pleasant memories of his last brush with Detroit (back in 1940 when he pitched the World Series winner for the Cincinnati Reds) will be Chicago's starting pitcher tomorrow when the National Leaguers play their first road game of the training season against the Tigers at Evansville.

Al Simmons, at 40, Serious About Comeback With Bosox

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

HE ASKED FOR IT—Al Simmons, former Nat star outfielder, went on a diet in order to get in shape for a major league "comeback" and each morning he is greeted by an apple, orange and pear as he charges the breakfast table. Judging from the picture, Al is a bit tired of the diet. However, he has lost 17 pounds and threatens to play a great season for the Boston Red Sox

By Judson Bailey

Associated Press Sports Writer

Medford, Mass., April 2.—To the fans who saw Al Simmons faltering downhill in the National League a couple of years ago it may sound like an April Fool gag to say that the once great slugger is hoping to play a lot of outfield for the Boston Red Sox this year.

But Simmons is deadly serious about making a comeback and his quiet determination is so contagious that he may convince Manager Joe Cronin he deserves to be in left field or opening day.

The big fellow, who was one of the galaxy of stars Connie Mack chaperoned 15 years ago—Grove, Foxx, Cochrane, Dykes and company—served as a coach of the Philadelphia Athletics last season and probably could have been one of the pensioners there again this year. However, he chose to try a playing comeback at the age of 40.

During the winter he contacted General Manager Eddie Collins, and was hired quicker than you can say the Red Sox have lost Ted Williams, Dominic Di Maggio and Lou Finney from their outfield. Simmons said then that he was not fooling about planning a comeback and his actions since that time have proved he wasn't.

In the middle of February he went to Hot Springs, Ark., and began a rigorous training program along with Whitlow Wyatt of the Brooklyn Dodgers and Al Lopez, the veteran catcher of the Pittsburgh Pirates. He ran and ran and ran at Hot Springs, took the baths and above all placed himself on a diet.

"This diet," he explained today, "is one Al Schacht used a couple of years ago when he had stomach trouble, but I really got it from Waite Hoyt a long time before, when Hoyt settled down for a big comeback year.

"For breakfast I have nothing but fruit, milk and coffee. At lunch I eat starches — baked beans, boiled or baked potato, spaghetti, etc. At night I can eat any kind of meat except pork, but no fried food of any kind.

"I weighed 217 pounds when I started work at Hot Springs," he continued, "and now I am down to 200. I haven't had a drink in months and I feel fine. I should have done this long ago.

"I don't know how many games I can play. Maybe 154, maybe 10. But I'm going to get ready to play just as many as possible."

Baseball Scribes Barred by Army For Giants' Game

By International News Service

Lakewood, N. J., April 2.—Tomorrow will be a day off for New York Giants' spring training.

The Giants will meet their Jersey City farm club in an exhibition game for the entertainment of soldiers at Jersey City and Col. Arthur Mann, commanding officer, has ruled that only the players and a telegrapher will be admitted to the reservation.

Charlie Petro Fights Davis At Turner's

Monday night's boxing show at Turner's Arena featuring Al Hart, the Army War College colored soldier, and Wallace Cross, Newark heavyweight contender, was rounded out yesterday, with the supporting card offering a combination of new and favorite talent.

Charlie Petro, the slam-bang Southeast welterweight, brother of the feathe.weight, Danny, was signed to box Eddie Davis, Chester (Pa.) youngster, in an eight-round added attraction.

Previously closed out was an eight-rounder between John Garner, Georgie Parks' stablemate, and Nick Kirsh, Wilmington (Del.) middleweight.

Oakie Greer of Baltimore, and Bobby Brown, Fort Belvoir soldier, will clash in a six-rounder, while Jimmy Jerico, Washington, and Joe August, Baltimore, will box in a four.

Gerald Walker Signs Contract

Orlando, Fla., April 2 (AP).—Gerald Walker today signed his 1943 contract with the Cincinnati Reds and boarded a train for Bloomington, Ind., where the Reds are now in spring training.

The 35-year-old fielder has been a holdout since March 1. Departing today, Walker said "they met me half way." He is entering his thirteenth year in the major leagues.

Wilson Routs Western Track Team in Debut

Woodrow Wilson High School track team opened its season yesterday by swamping a Western squad, 81-35.

The Tigers, led by Capt. Buddy Brewton, who scored three firsts to annex individual honors, took first in all events except the 220-yard dash and the discus. In the mile run and the pole vault Wilson took all three places. To show the deciveness of the victory, the Tigers walked off with first and third places in five events and three times had the winning and runner-up spots.

Brewton had 5-pointers in the 100-yard dash, the broad jump, and the high jump. Several other Tigers looked very good. Johnny Colvin won the pole vault, took second in the high jump, and tied third in the broad for a total of 8½ markers. Paul Cramer and Phil Funk contributed 8 points for Wilson while Randy Bishop sparked the losers with a like number.

The results:

220-YARD DASH—First, Davis (W.); second, Kasuis (W.); third, Spandaw (W. W.). Time, 0:25.7.

G.W. Intramurals Win Seesaw Game In Vikings' Debut

With several former high school stars in the line-up, the George Washington University intra-mural baseball team defeated the Central High tossers, 9-8, yesterday on the Viking diamond.

Charley Hines, former Western High pitcher, scattered nine hits over the seven innings to win. Hines aided his own cause with a trio of hits. Chew, Jacobsen and Whalen all added long blows.

The game was a see-saw affair, with the Colonials jumping into a 30 advantage in the first, only to have Central come back with a pair in its half and another in the second to knot the count. G. W. tallied twice more in the third, but the Vikings went ahead with three. Central made it 7-5 with another run in the fourth. A brace of tallies in the sixth and seventh clinched the game.

Strangler Lewis On Turner's Card

Ed (Strangler) Lewis, five-time former world heavyweight wrestling champion, and regarded as one of the greatest titleholders of all time, was signed yesterday to show at Turner's Arena.

Lewis recently made his 1943 bow at the Arena, winning a slugfest from Nanjo Singh, the "Cobra Clutch" king, before a record crowd of some 2600 fans.

National Trainers Held to Two Hits As Red Devils Win

The Red Devils of Briarley Military Academy opened their 1943 baseball season with an impressive victory over the National Training School nine yesterday.

Russ Cordua limited the Washingtonians to a brace of hits, both coming in the third stanza. Other than this brief lapse he had the situation well in hand at all times as he fanned 10. National Training jumped into a 2-0 lead in the third, but the Red Devils came back with a trio in their half of the inning and added three more in the seventh for security.

Underwriters Nominate Six To Board Here

By S. Oliver Goodman

Nominations for the board of directors of the District Life Underwriters Association were made at a luncheon meeting in the Willard Hotel. Three of the six nominations will be elected at the May meeting.

The nominees are William B. Rumple, Metropolitan Life; Leon Katz, State Mutual Life; John L. McElfresh, Connecticut Mutual Life; J. Donald Sutherland, Northwestern Mutual Life; Leroy Myers, Mutual Life of New York, and W. J. McCausland, Acacia Mutual Life.

Hampton H. Irwin, guest speaker, pointed out that higher living costs mean that the man whose life insurance estate was arranged more than six years ago should take stock to see how much less that estate is today. Mr. Irwin is educational director of Massachusetts Mutual Life.

Local insurance men will do their part in the coming War Loan Drive, according to Fred A. Holderman, chairman of the Underwriters' War Bond Committee. The underwriters committee includes the following members:

George A. Hatzes, Fidelity; Roger L. Baldwin, vice chairman, Northwestern; Albert L. Neveux, James A. Barbeau, Acacia; Fidelity; Charles W. O'Donnell, Guardian Life; Arthur W. Defenderfer, John Hancock Life; Leon Katz, State Mutual; Charles F. Suter, Berkshire Life; John F. Cremen, Massachusetts Mutual; Earl D. Krewson, New York Life; Frank R. Strunk, Columbian National; Edward H. Von Deck, National of Vermont, and Raymond A. Du Four, Pacific Mutual.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Attention, D. C. Grocers

The Maryland Office of Price Administration announced yesterday that millions of food rationing stamps have been deposited incorrectly by Baltimore grocers operating under the ration banking system and, as a result, the dealers may be hampered in replenishing their stocks of processed foods.

The OPA said a number of shopkeepers mixed together blue and red stamps for the first and second rationing periods, instead of depositing them separately as required.

Banking institutions refused to accept the stamps for ration banking credit until they could be properly sorted and correctly deposited, the Government agency explained.

Meanwhile, grocers who made the mistake will not be able to draw checks on their deposits and some may find their shelves bare of processed foods until the tangle is straightened out, J. Allison Ballenger, State rationing banking officer, said.

New High in Mail Revenues

Washington mail revenues in March and the first quarter this year set new all-time highs, Postmaster Vincent C. Burke of the City Postoffice reported yesterday.

Mail revenues in March totaled $1,154,001, against $917,030 in the same 1942 month. The total for the first three months was $3,199,079, against $2,741,106 in the corresponding period last year.

Sperry Corp. Reports Billion-Dollar Backlog

New York, April 2 (AP).—The Sperry Corp., manufacturers of precision instruments, today reported a backlog of orders aggregating a billion dollars at the end of last year despite record 1942 production and even though shipments equaled "those of the nine previous years combined."

Thomas A. Morgan, president, in preliminary comment on the concern's annual report soon to be mailed to stockholders, said sales "approximated 250 million dollars, or two and a half times the dollar volume of 1941."

"Peak production will not be reached until several new plants are fuly equipped and manned," Morgan said. "As we approach these goals, production is steadily increasing with the result that 1943 shipments are expected to more than double those of 1942."

Chicago Grain

Chicago, April 2 (AP).—Grain prices weakened today in response to a presidential veto of the Bankhead bill, but extreme losses of about a cent in wheat were reduced in later trading when news of the veto failed to create much selling pressure. Oats and rye were depressed with wheat, while corn held at ceilings.

Although grains had advanced yesterday on unconfirmed rumors that the Bankhead bill would receive presidential approval, actual news of the veto was not a great surprise. The news came out about an hour after the market opened, but grain men had sold earlier on reports that a veto was forthcoming.

At the close wheat was ½-⅝ lower, May 1.45⅝@1.45½; July 1.45¾@1.45⅝. Corn remained unchanged at ceilings, May 1.01. Oats dropped ¾-1, and rye was off ½-¾.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

'The Hard Way,' at Earle, Is Taut, Somber and Gay

Ida Lupino, Joan Leslie and Able Cast Score Heavily in Drama of Odd Diversity; Jack Marshall Headlines the Stage Revue

"THE HARD WAY." Warner Brothers' picturization of a screen play by Daniel Fuchs and Peter Viertel, costarring Ida Lupino, Joan Leslie and Dennis Morgan, with Jack Carson, Gladys George, Faye Emerson, Paul Cavanagh, Leona Maricle, Roman Bohnen, Ray Montgomery, Julie Bishop, Nestor Paiva, Joan Woodbury, Ann Doran, Thurston Hall, Charles Judels, Lou Lubin and Jody Gilbert. Directed by Vincent Sherman. At the Earle Theater.

BEGINNING with the homicidal spectacle of a distraught young woman hurling herself off the dock, and ending with her death, without having given the harbor police any clue as to her motive, "The Hard Way," the new picture at the Earle, by every right should be a grim and forbidding exhibit of emotional stresses not usually associated with palatable entertainment. Quite to the contrary, "The Hard Way," although often stretching the nerves to a pretty high tension, by the variety of its content and the skill of its performance is an engrossing and moving picture.

This is primarily due to the fact that the audience, unlike the cops hovering over her beside, is not kept in the dark as to why Helen Chernen found a violent end the only way out. As she lies on her hospital cot, the salient events of her life and her younger sister's are unfolded by the familiar flashback method, which here, for once, does not seem too hackneyed to do justice to an unhappy, sometimes bitter and frequently amusing recital of frustrated love and blasted ambition.

If a quick analogy were needed, "The Hard Way," for much of its length, might perhaps best be described as a companion-piece to "For Me and My Gal," with the element of patriotic service left out. Both concern themselves chiefly with the rivalries, triumphs, defeats and unending struggle of the theater.

It all has its genesis in a dingy little mining town, where Mrs. Chernen and her sister, Katherine, are living a life of penury in the home of a laborer who cannot see his way clear to provide a white graduation dress for his youthful sister-in-law. Embittered and enraged, his wife decides that sis shall have the best of everything, no matter what devices have to be resorted to, to get it. The first step is to marry the youngster to a small-time vaudeville actor, who falls genuinely and hopelessly in love with her, flee the town and then see to it that Katherine reaches stardom by any possible route. The route turns out to be one of Lady Macbethan heartlessness, duplicity and repeated stabbings in the back. The husband kills himself before the final hollow goal is achieved, his partner rescues Katherine from the malevolent clutches of her sister and scoffs at the hapless Helen's ill-concealed love for him. By the logic of the cumulative developments, the cold waters of the bay, or the river or whatever it was, offered Mrs. Cherner about all she was justly entitled to.

Not All Bitterness and Conflict

Malignant as the play's central character and most of its motivation are, "The Hard Way" is by no means continuously somber. Its action is enlivened by much of the color, the "corniness" and the humor of "show business," from the stages of the "sticks" to the glittering prosceniums of Broadway's gaudiest musical comedies and revues. The scene is constantly varied and the movement of the plot as diversified, but always with the sinister presence of the indomitable Mrs. Cherner casting a shadow over even the gayest of the drama's lighter and more enlivening moments. Not the least of the credit for the film's over-all effect of superior quality is due Daniel Fuchs and Peter Viertel for the soundness of their script. It is a nicely variegated and forceful job that has the courage to make tragic overtones one of its major factors and most conspicuous virtues.

Fairly sharing honors with the authors are the members of an especially well-chosen cast. Ida Lupino, in one of her most forceful and most distasteful roles, contributes a malicious and immensely valuable portrayal of the Cherner woman, hoist eventually by her own petard. No less effective is the equally skillful assumption of the part of the unhappy younger sister by Joan Leslie, who has opportunity in this assignment to display a greater range of talents than ever before in her comparatively brief and brilliant career. This time out, she supplements her ample endowments as an actress with nice abilities as singer, dancer and comedienne. In the two principal male roles Jack Carson and Dennis Morgan are at their respective peaks, Mr. Morgan finally singing on the screen and making it doubly a matter of curiosity why he never has been permitted to before. Among the others, Paul Cavanagh, Gladys George, Roman Bohnen, Thurston Hall and Charles Judels do most on the side of the picture's impressiveness.

Preceded by "The Greatest Mother in the World," the Earle's salute to the Red Cross, with Lee Vickers, of WJSV, and Doris McWhirt Drake featured in the miniature pageant, the new stage bill stars Jack Marshall, a monologist new to the Capitol, in an ebullient interval of humor and character impressions. Mr. Marshall possesses a contagious good nature that imparted itself to the those out front almost before he got started on his way to a rousing hit. The clever dogs and ponies of Gautier's Steeplechase put things in motion and the Roxyettes fill in the chinks in their most colorful manner to complete a pretty bang-up bill.

Runs the Gamut in Her Latest Role

who touches all the moods and most of the emotions as costar with Ida Lupino in the Warner Brothers production of "The Hard Way," which yesterday opened its first Washington engagement on the screen at the Earle Theater. The story is one of a case-hardened, ambitious woman who determines that her younger sister shall have an illustrious stage career, by fair means or foul. Dennis Morgan and Jack Carson appear in the principal male roles in a drama of highlights and deep shadows.

HEDDA HOPPER

After Twenty Years!

Hollywood, Calif., April 2.—When Michael Arlen met the Russian Consul at the Edward Robinsons' home, he got the surprise of his life when the Consul told him how much he'd enjoyed reading "The Green Hat" in Russia 20 years ago. Michael said, "In English?" "No," said he. "In Russian. It was our best seller. Believe me, when you go to Russia, you'll have lots of friends there." And that was the first Mike had heard of it. . . . Robinson's off for Washington in a couple of days; to be near the White House. . . . I'm taking nothing away from Maj. Sy Bartlett, whose story of bombing Germany thrilled every one, but Maj. Willie Wyler has bombed Germany several times, and we kept the story secret because we thought it was giving out war information. . . . Gene Markey expected home any day. Gene's grown quite gray, which adds much distinction.

MICHAEL ARLEN

Popular Guy

George Raft has a great story called "Meanest Man in Heaven"—all about a suave gent who's pretty much bought his way into everything, wants to join the Marines, thinks he can do the same thing there but soon finds out the difference, becomes a regular guy. Three studios want to produce it. "But," says George, "this is the best story I've ever had, and I might produce it myself." . . . Nice to know Luise Rainer was so good in "Hostages" that Paramount signed her for two more pictures. What do you bet Metro will now try to borrow her?

It's almost a foregone conclusion that Hedy Lamarr will play "Heavenly Body." She doesn't want to miss it. She's still asking for the impossible from Metro-Goldwyn—shoes, silk stockings, etc., which the studio cannot supply. But I have a feeling all will be sweetness and love within the week . . . Joe Mankiewicz thrilled right back to his wisdom teeth over getting "The Pirate," which he'll write and produce. Instead of having the Lunts, he hopes to get Cary Grant, Charles Laughton and Vivien Leigh for the three leads . . . Now that Mervyn Leroy is directing "Madame Curie," he can't do "Quo Vadis," so I hear Metro's making overtures to Sam Wood to take over that job. He'd be wonderful.

Different Now

When Lana Turner and Pvt. Steve Crane showed up at the Mocambo in another of those reconciliations I heard a major comment, "She'd better be careful how she treats him now. He's one of our boys and we expect only the best for a soldier" . . . The red carpet's being rolled out for the Gilbert Millers, who're in town. He's taking bids for "Harriet." I hope it will be a dual deal, so that Helen Hayes plays it on the screen, as well as on the stage . . . Marjorie Main's signed by the Cagneys to play Gas House Mary, the dance-hall queen, in "McLeod's Follies" . . . Don't miss reading Col. Darryl Zanuck's "Tunis Expedition." It's thrilling, exciting and true. We're very proud of the little colonel.

Too Bad

It's things like this that give Hollywood a bad name. Columnist comments that Olivia De Havilland wouldn't play in "Animal Kingdom" because she was away somewhere with her fiance, Lieut. John Huston. Yet the Hustons aren't yet divorced, and I doubt if they will be. . . . Nice that Julie Bishop has been upped to star rating. She's a good actress and a nice girl. . . . Ralina Zarova, Metro's Russian actress who's playing in Greg Ratoff's "Russia," did a song on "Command Performance" that will wow the boys. Tells me the picture is filled with princes, duchesses, and lesser titles. Greg is working the pants off them.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Wish Prodigal Back for 'Prodigal!'

Hollywood, April 2 (INS).—Joan Fontaine, who won her Academy Award for an R. K. O. picture, "Suspicion," is being paged to return to that studio for a mighty interesting assignment. Charlie Koerner and David Hempstead have offered Joan the lead in "The Prodigal Women," the current best seller by Nancy Hale. Borrowing Joan may not be as difficult as it sounds for David O. Selznick, who has La Fontaine's contract, has always been very friendly toward R. K. O., the studio he was once reported to be interested in buying.

JOAN FONTAINE

Sarah Y. Mason and Victor Heerman are preparing the script of the $50,000 novel. Yep! That's what Charlie paid for it. And oh, yes, I almost forgot to say that Nancy Hale will probably give the finished adaptation the once-over.

At the time I printed that Betty Grable was all set for the starring role in "Something For the Boys" and that William Goetz had bought it for her, you could have heard the cries from New York—"Taint so, 'taint so"—around the world. Billy said nothing then but today he said something and that was that our story, printed at least two months ago, is now true and that Cole Porter's tuneful musical is still intended for Betty. Twentieth Century-Fox set a precedent in price, paying $395,000, the most money, according to my figuring, that has yet been paid for any film property. But those Porter tunes are worth a pretty penny.

Louise Allbritton's rich banker pappy, down in Texas, may not want her to continue in the movies, but that isn't stopping Universal from going to town on a beeg buildup for their tall, beautiful blonde. Louise belongs to the new order of willowy charmers—and don't say I said it, but I hear her new role in "Fired Wife" has nearly as much footage as Diana Barrymore, officially the costar, with Bob Cummings. This begins to line up as quite a cast because from Paramount "U" has borrowed Walter Abel for the fourth important role in this comedy that has nary a war angle.

Chatter in Hollywood: When somebody told me that Belita, the honey of the ice skates, was putting on an exhibition tennis match with Bill Tilden at Camp Haan this week, I thought I was in the wrong sports department. But honest—that's the line-up. For months now Big Bill has been coaching the British skater in her tennis game and I'll say she must be good if Bill thinks she's a worthy opponent for him in a match before the boys. The Army is anxious to promote interest in athletic sports and, whether or not the exhibition inspires the kids to run out and take up tennis, it is a cinch they will be pulenty interested in watching Belita.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Lois James is expected to wed William Tracy sometime soon; Pat Dane returns from a two weeks' visit to San Francisco. Wonder if Tommy Dorsey's two-week engagement at Oakland had anything to do with Pat's vacationing in the Bay City?

Al Jolson made a beeline for the home of his former wife, Mrs. John Lowe (Ruby Keeler) as soon as he landed in town. He called for Sonny, the apple of his eye; George Raft and Mona Maris tried to forget their troubles Saturday night by stepping out together. George is carrying a torch for Betty Grable and Mona for a New Yorker.

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway Glossary

New York, April 2.

TRUTH: In Fairbanks, Alaska, lives the aged Gahagan, greatest of all linguists. He once taught Gaelic, in Japanese, when he was a professor at the University of Tokyo . . . Last month a Government representative flew to Fairbanks, to enlist Gahagan's talents. He went to the cabin where the linguist lives on $10 a week. The large room was piled high with ancient, precious Chinese documents. The Government representative spoke of his mission, then showed the venerable man a Jap leaflet. "Read it, and let us know if that material is subversive," said the Government man . . . Gahagan, who is 83, read it, and shrugged: "What is subversive today may be patriotic tomorrow. What is patriotic today may be subversive tomorrow. Who knows?" . . . The Government man left.

LEONARD LYONS

YOUTH: Diana Hopkins, 10-year-old daughter of Harry Hopkins, will tend the Victory Garden which is being prepared for her on the White House lawn. This month she'll start planting radishes and turnips there . . . Diana, incidentally, phoned her best friend, Katie Soong, daughter of T. V. Soong, and said: "I just heard a wonderful piece of news" . . . "Tell me, tell me," Miss Soong urged, eager for the momentous news which the young lady of the White House may have heard . . . "You know what?" said Diana. "Glen Echo Park, the amusement park, will open this year."

DEBATE: Sinclair Lewis, whose new book, "Gideon Planish," will be released shortly, will embark on a cross-country debating tour with Lewis Browne. Browne is writing a new novel, "See What I Mean?" the fictitious autobiography of a jailed Fascist gangster . . . The subject of their debate will be "Is Living in the Country Better Than Living in the City?" . . . Browne, whose home is in Uplifters Ranch, Calif., will debate in favor of city life. Lewis, whose home in on Central Park West in Manhattan, will argue in favor of country life.

ENTERPRISE: Sergt. "Soupy" Campbell, the former Broadway actor now with the U. S. Marine Corps, flew to Guadalcanal while the Marines were there, and went looking for some of his Great Neck neighbors with whom he had enlisted. He found one of them, a corporal, wearing a strange necklace . . . "What's that?" Soupy asked . . . "Gold teeth," he was told . . . "Whose?" Soupy asked . . . "Japs'," the corporal replied . . . "What are you doing with them?" Campbell continued . . . "I'm saving up," the corporal explained, "for a Buick coupe."

ART: When Henri Bernstein, the French playwright, was in California, he had his portrait painted by a young lady artist. One of his friends asked him: "How's that portrait coming along? . . . "The portrait is poor," said the 65-year-old romancer, "but the friendship is beautiful."

CHATTER: Thomas Hart Benton and 20 other noted American artists will receive citations from Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., on April 9 for their contributions to the war program through their poster paintings . . . Because the March of Time's new Crossley rating has reached a high of 27, the producers now described their program as "We, the Better People" . . . Come what may, in the forthcoming mayoralty election, the A. L. P., which holds the balance of power in New York, will not, as it has done since its birth, indorse the Republican candidate.

Natural Pool at Actor's Front Door

Hollywood.—Gary Cooper had his own swimming pool at his front door at the High Sierra location camp where the star was living during the filming of Paramount's Technicolor production of Ernest Hemingway's classic, "For Whom the Bell Tolls."

It was the Stanislaus River which flows in front of his cabin. But in order to use the swimming "hole" where the water temperature is 42 degrees and the current is swift, it was necessary to throw a cable from bank to bank across the river. The system is to dive in from the bank, then grab the cable and haul yourself out before you are frozen stiff or carried off to Stockton, down the river.

MOVE OVER!

Ever-memorable pictures, that have made the great tradition of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer!—there is a newcomer to your select small company. Its name is "THE HUMAN COMEDY". Its big surprise star is Mickey Rooney, who turns out to be — not only the utterly delightful, lovable actor you've always known, but an intense, heart-breaking, mature performer. William Saroyan's "THE HUMAN COMEDY" is deep as a quiet river, fresh as spring flowers, human as your own heart. It will get to you, and you will love it.

This important motion picture, in the M-G-M tradition of "Mrs. Miniver", "Captains Courageous", "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" and other outstanding films will soon be seen in this city...at the What's All The Gab About GABARDINES?

It's Gabardine for Spring . . . Gabardine for Summer . . . Gabardine for Fall!! And Gabardine for All. It's the one suit that looks well on practically every man. That's why it's on the tip of the tongues of better dressed men . . . and on their backs, as well. A Gabardine goes with any shirt, with any tie, for business wear, for casual wear, for sports, for any hour of the day or night. And it's plenty versatile, too. You can blend the coat and trousers with any others in your wardrobe, plain shades or patterns, and you have two more complete ensembles with no added expense. It's the suit that bats a cool 1000 in any man's league . . . and if you're a baseball fan, you know that's the tops. Gabardines may be purchased in practically every place but the corner drug store, but ONLY at The Hecht Co. Modern Man's Store in Washington will you find those famous makes over at the right. And they're all 100% virgin wool. E Street Building, Second Floor, The Hecht Co.

*X SATURDAY, APRIL 3, 1943 1B

Long Trip for Santa—

Boise, Idaho.—Lieut. William Carrithers is looking forward eagerly to last Christmas.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred B Carrithers of Manitou Springs, Colo., mailed his 1941 gift of fruit cake and cookies to him in Manila November 17, 1941.

It caught up with him at Gowen Field yesterday.

Fourth Term Asked

Annapolis, Md. (A.P.).—A resolution urging President Roosevelt to announce his candidacy for reelection to a fourth term was introduced in the Maryland House.

The resolution requested the President to "apply his talent and energy to winning of the war, winning of the peace, and to postwar creation of a better country and better world to live in."

The Federal Diary

Editor's note: Today and every Saturday the Federal employes present their views and comments in this column. Send yours to Jerry Kluttz, editor.

I am one of five girls who left our comfortable homes back in Ohio to come here to help win the war. After next week I'll be left alone as three of the girls already have gone back and the fourth is quitting the Government in a few days. Each of these girls have gotten much better jobs in war industries at home than they can get in Washington.

I, too, could go back home and get a job with more money than I now receive from the Government. I would be nearer my family and my friends but I have chosen Government as a career and I expect to stay. I can't blame my friends for getting better jobs. Yet I can't help from feeling they are "running out" at a time when the Government really needs them. Unlike others who have written to the Federal Diary, I have all the work I can possibly do in my office and I feel I'm making a worthwhile contribution to the war effort. It makes me blue to see my friends quit when there is so much work to be done.

We civilian employes of the Federal service are really soldiers on the homefront and I don't believe we should be permitted to resign for better jobs. We've got an important work to do right here in Washington and all of us should roll up our sleeves and get it done. Our brothers and sweethearts in the Army can't quit to take better jobs and we on the homefront shouldn't be allowed to jump from one job to another in quest of higher salaries.

I think Congress could ease some of our minds if it would give us salaries in line with salaries in the private war industries. We won't be paid for the overtime we work unless Congress enacts a new bill before the end of this month.

M. E. L.

The Treasury Department is bogged down trying to write a tax bill. I'm no fiscal expert, but I have an idea for a simple tax bill. Here it is: Forgive all 1942 income taxes, but make the taxpayer count his normal 1942 tax as income for 1943. For example, if you owe $100 in 1942 taxes, this $100 would be counted as income for 1943. This plan would take care of the war millionaires, as they'd have to pay a substantial amount of tax this year on their 1942 incomes.

TAX AMATEUR.

In April of 1942 the Air Transport Command began to employ civilian (girls) for cryptography with the understanding (at least to the girls) that when a Women's Army Auxiliary Corps was organized their group would be incorporated in the new organization. The WAACS came into being but did not absorb us. (We were told that Mrs. Hobby would commission no one who did not take the training at Fort Des Moines . . . and that General George, our chief, would not hold up the growth of his organization long enough for that to happen.) We were told that we would form an independent organization, a separate auxiliary with status equal to that of the WAAC. Believing that, we voted to go into uniform and had a uniform specially designed for us.

These uniforms were delivered February of this year. In the meantime our organization has grown from 50 girls in Washington to about 250 in various field stations all over the United States. I might point out that every girl employed meant the immediate release of an enlisted man for foreign service, for cryptography was previously done by enlisted men. Also in these months General George authorized the WAFS. In January, when the uniforms were on their way to us, we learned that General George was not going to authorize our organization. He permitted us to go into uniform if we liked, but ATC was to have but one auxiliary and that was the WAFS.

So we're in uniform. You've probably seen some of us on the streets . . . our dark brown uniforms make you think of the WAACS, but the garrison cap with gold wings is distinctive. We are not very proud of these uniforms though . . . because they mean nothing. Among WAACS, WAVES and SPARS we're the illegitimate children.

And we should be very proud . . . because we were the first women admitted as a unit to Army work . . . and the most hush hush at that. I'm still optimistic enough to believe that we can secure recognition.

ONE OF THEM.

I thought you might be able to help out an unpleasant situation which has been brought about by the attempt of a minor official to make his job much more important than it really is.

The circumstances are these: (1) Employes in the Pentagon Building who attend school in the evening are continually subjected to annoyance by the guards who are under the orders of the Security Officer. They are required to stop and open brief cases in which they carry their school books. This is in addition to being forced to obtain a property pass in order to be able to carry their own property out of the building. (2) The above practice is not completely uniform, however; after the individual arrives at the exalted grades of CAF-12 or P-5, he may be admitted to have become a loyal, honest American and be given a "Gold" badge, which badge all but entitles him to a salute from the guards and which badge is a permit for anything (within reason) which the holder of the badge wishes to carry out.

My suggestion is that the immediate chiefs of those employes attending night school be authorized to certify the employe for a "Gold" badge, regardless of the employe's rank. It would certainly seem that a supervisor should know his employes well enough to do this. Another solution which occurs to me would be a special sort of pass for those attending school.

Roosevelt Names Young To New Term

Commissioner's Tenure Expiring; Gets Appointment As Birthday Gift

The President yesterday gave as birthday present to affable John Russell Young nomination for reappointment as member of the Board of District Commissioners.

Young's three-year term expires Monday, but the President, good friend of the Commissioner since the days when Young was dean of the White House press corps, sent his nomination to the Senate yesterday to brighten his sixty-first birthday.

The principal accomplishment of Young's career as President of the Board, to which post he succeeded on the death of Commissioner Melvin Hazen at the District Building in July, 1941, is regarded by many to be the reorganization of the Police Department. While instituting the District civilian defense corps was a larger task required of the wartime Commissioner, the shake-up in the police force following the 1941 summer's siege of sex crimes is viewed as having been of far-reaching importance.

A native Washingtonian, Young started his newspaper career in Philadelphia in 1901, but came to Washington in 1905. For the 20 years previous to his appointment as District Commissioner in 1939 to succeed George Allen, Young was White House correspondent for the Evening Star. While president of the White House Correspondents Association, Young founded the John Russell Young School of Expression.

Besides the Police and Civilian Defense departments, the branches of the District government which are Young's special charges are the Fire Department, the auditor's and disbursing offices, the Board of Tax Appeals, the corporation counsel's office, the tax collector's office, the Department of Vehicles and Traffic, the Department of Weights and Measures and the recorder of deeds.

Also, as president of the Board of Commissioners, Young is president of the Commission on Licensure of the Healing Arts, chairman of the District Unemployment Compensation Board and chairman of the Alley Dwelling Authority.

Young lives with his wife at 1834 Jefferson Street Northwest. He has two children, a daughter and a son, Capt. Russell Young, jr., who left the State Department last summer to enter the Army.

Jury Selecting Murals for New Deeds Building

Several hundred designs, from which seven mural decorations for the lobby and library of the new Recorder of Deeds Building will be chosen, are being studied by a jury of Washington artists and connoisseurs in the Washington Auditorium, 1900 E Street Northwest.

The designs, submitted anonymously by 167 artists from all parts of the country, depict phases of the military and scientific contributions of American Negroes, from Revolutionary days to the present. Final judging will be completed in a few days, Edward B. Rowan, chief of the fine arts section of the Federal Works Agency, said yesterday.

The judges are Mrs. Nan Watson, painter; Capt. Henry Billings, mural painter; Kindred McLeary, mural painter; James V. Herring, head of the Howard University Art Department; Dr. William J. Thompkins, recorder of deeds, and Edward B. Rowan, of the Federal Work Agency.

Two Sons Flying, Widow Keeps Up War Bond Buying

With two sons in the Army Air Corps, Mrs. Margaret Poston is taking a real "power dive" into the business of buying war bonds.

MRS. POSTON

A control clerk of the Procurement Division, Treasury Department, she has the example of her fellow workers before her, almost 95 per cent of whom are investing 11.4 per cent of their pay in war bonds through the Government's payroll savings plan. The Procurement Division has 2595 employes.

Mrs. Poston, a widow, lives at 1229 Fifteenth Street Northwest, and is putting her 18-year-old daughter, Rosalie, through college. Her son Richard is a lieutenant in the air forces. Thomas, the younger one, is an aviation cadet.

Captured Pygmy Sub Reaps Bond Harvest

COSTS HIGH TO LOOK—This two-man submarine, taken from the Japanese by our Navy, arrived in Alexandria yesterday, and the first man to peek inside paid $16,000 for the privilege. He bought war bonds. In 20 minutes, $40,000 worth of the bonds were sold talion, George Washington High School cadets with their band and members of the Virginia Protective Force. And, for the first time in these parts, a company of WAACS marched past, looking very smart and efficient.

Immediately after the 35 tons of Japanese futility was parked in place, the ceremonies were opened by O. A. Reardon, chairman of the bond committee. He introduced Mrs. Evelyn Howard Sheridan, who sang the National Anthem, and James B. Hwakins took over as auctioneer.

After Herring and Burke and the other high-bracket bidders had completed inspecting the submarine through windows let into its side, Mayor W. T. Wilkins was introduced by Reardon, spoke briefly and turned the meeting over to F. L. Flynn, master of ceremonies.

Trade Is Brisk

By this time trade had become brisk among the high-turnover customers and youngsters, clutching 25-cent war stamps in their grimy fists, swarmed onto the platform and gazed into the vitals of this metal monster out of the wars. They saw hard steel walls enclosing a confusing mass of machinery tended by two sleepy looking effigies of Japanese officers.

The originals of these dummies, said Capt. R. B. Simons, United States Navy, made a present of the submarine and its two 18-inch torpedoes and themselves to the Navy when their navigation went wrong. They grounded on a sandbar off Diamond Head, Captain Simons explained, instead of penetrating into Pearl Harbor and were captured, much chagrined.

"I have failed in my mission," he said the Jap commander wailed as he was led off to prison.

Many Presentations

Captain Simons was followed by Robert G. Whitton, who introduced J. Randall Caton, next master of ceremonies and after brief talks, music and presentation of guests, Irving Diener, third master of ceremonies, was introduced by Glenn U. Richard. Final master of ceremonies was Elliott F. Hoffman, introduced by D. C. Book.

Among those scheduled to make brief talks during the four hours the submarine remained on display were Armistead Boothe, Judge W. P. Woolls, the Rev. Norman Roberts, Henry T. Moncure, Mrs. Doris Rhea, Emmett Davidson, Richard L. Ruffner, Leroy Bendheim, Frank H. Fannon, Norman Davis, Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, H. B. Cooke, W. E. Wood, George E. Warfield, George Hutto, Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black, Mrs. F. M. Dillard, T. C. Williams, Representative Howard W. Smith, C. H. Edwards and Mrs. Dorothy Hoge.

Symphony's Girl Member Ex-Prodigy

MARGUERITE KUEHNE

(Editor's note: This is the second in a series of articles on personalities in the National Symphony Orchestra.)

Marguerite Kuehne is not only the solitary woman assistant concert master with a symphony orchestra in America but is a former child prodigy as well.

Marguerite, who has been with the National Symphony Orchestra for one season as assistant concert master and first violinist, performed with the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra on the violin when she was 11, four years after her first lesson.

But Marguerite is satisfactorily normal in all particular. She likes "a little bit of everything in addition to music."

Born in Minneapolis, of German ancestry, she began her musical education under her father's tutelage, and later studied eight years with Alexander Roman in Minneapolis. Next came a scholarship from the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, which included working with Efrem Zimbalist.

Many times Marguerite performed with the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra during her stay at the Curtis Institute. She was appearing with various orchestras before coming to Washington last year.

Life in general is a pretty smooth and enjoyable business as far as she is concerned; only one thing upsets her.

"I would like to live in New York," she said, "but there are great crowds always in New York, and crowds smother me."

At present her home is in Philadelphia.

2 D. C. Women Made WAAC Third Officers

Two Washington women have been commissioned third officers in the women's Army Auxiliary Corps at Fort Des Moines, Iowa. They are Selma M. Burstein, 4015 Kansas Avenue Northwest, and Mary L. Devereux, 1801 Calvert Street Northwest.

They were selected for officer training on the basis of their ability and record of work as auxiliaries in the WAAC. Third officer is the WAAC equivalent of second lieutenant.

Plasma Credited With Saving 3993 of 4000 Wounded Men

The lives of all but seven of 4000 seriously wounded and ill men on the hospital ship Solace during the first five months of the Solomons campaign were saved because of Red Cross blood plasma and sulfa drugs, Lieut. Grace B. Lally, chief nurse on the vessel, told reporters yesterday in New York.

Lieutenant Lally, now attached to the Naval Medical Center in Bethesda, Md., as assistant chief nurse, said the heroism of the ship's personnel when Pearl Harbor was attacked was such that Admiral Chester W. Nimitz gave the Solace a blanket citation, the Associated Press reported.

During the Battle of the Solomons, the hospital ship went as far as the New Hebrides to pick up casualties and take them to New Zealand, Lieutenant Lally said. Frequently as many as 35 operations a day were scheduled.

Equipped with 418 beds, the Solace usually had 500 patients, she declared, and extra cots were placed in officers' quarters and in the crew's recreation rooms.

"The patients always were more interested in the fellow in the next bunk than in themselves," she said.

Except for Pearl Harbor, the ship was not under direct attack, although it plied submarine-infested waters, Lieutenant Lally added. The ship was painted white and was lighted at night, but the Japs respected hospital ships.

An Army nurse during World War I, Lieutenant Lally has been in the Navy for the past 20 years and spent the last 17 months in the Pacific war zone.

Mrs. Roosevelt Asks Support Of Symphony

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt declared yesterday that "The National Symphony Orchestra must not be allowed to die during wartime . . . " "because keeping the orchestra going during this war period is a great help to the morale of the people generally and to the men in the armed services when they have an opportunity to attend."

Mrs. Roosevelt made her statement in a note to Dr. Hans Kindler, director of the orchestra, relative to the current thirteenth annual sustaining fund drive for $115,000.

She added that "the arts must not be allowed to die, since the development of the arts is what we are fighting for. They give color and enjoyment to life, and inspiration to human beings in war as well as in peace."

Approximately 375 volunteer workers now are canvassing Washington for contributions to the orchestra's fund, scheduled to be reached by April 15. Anyone who wishes to contribute may send his contribution to campaign headquarters, 1727 K Street Northwest.

First report on the progress of the drive will be made at a dinner Monday evening in the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest.

D. C. Jalopy Round-up Hits Total of 177

With 17 donations Thursday and 22 yesterday, the District's "Jalopy Junking Round-Up" now has a total of 177 junkable cars on hand, exclusive of those being rounded up by the Police Department, Horace Walker, executive secretary of the District Salvage Committee announced yesterday.

The police, meanwhile, still are probing every vacant lot and questioning owners of all old cars which do not have 1943 license tabs, and with encouraging results, Walker said.

Capt. C. H. Lutz of the Tenth Precinct reported that Herman I. Miller, who owns a lot at 3106 Sherman Avenue Northwest, where many old cars are parked has obtained clearance on 12 of them from finance companies and will turn them over to the drive today. He expects to add even more next week, Lutz said.

Capt. J. R. Jefferies of the Fifth Precinct reported five more cars; Capt. W. T. Storm of No. 12 reported five more available; Capt. A. J. Bullock of No. 11 reported five additional; Capt. C. J. Weber of No. 13 announced receipt of four.

Bethesda police, although outside the District, called salvage headquarters to ask whether they could turn over a car from that area. They can.

Seventy-five District Boy Scouts will turn to the aid of the Salvage Committee on another front today, Walker said, when they tackle some 25,000 pounds of large tin cans damaged by fire at the Coca Cola Bottling Co. recently. The Scouts were rounded up by Lynn C. Drake, area councilman. They will be given lunch and a war stamp apiece by the committee.

Jury Trial Asked On Mule Charge

Arrested Thursday night on charges of mistreating a mule, Said Haddod of 3539 A Street Southeast pleaded not guilty in Municipal Court yesterday, asked for trial by jury and was granted continuance of the case until April 15.

Haddod was arrested after Mrs. Robert Watson of the Washington Animal Rescue League had informed police Haddod allowed his mule, named Charles, to haul wood in Rock Creek Park with a sore shoulder and three ankles bandaged. It was also charged that Haddod left Charles and a horse named George, out in February cold without proper shelter.

High School Enrollment Off 16% Here

979 District Youths Take Examinations For Army and Navy College Training

By Anne Hagner

Post Staff Writer

While 979 youths in District public schools took examinations yesterday to determine their fitness to receive college training at Army or Navy expense, school officals told The Post that high school enrollment has decreased 16 per cent during the past year.

Figures released by the statistics office of the board showed that there are 13,757 pupils in the secondary school system this year, in contrast to 16,117 a year ago.

Dr. Chester W. Holmes, first assistant superintendent in charge of high schools, said, "The chief reason for the drop in enrollment is that boys are going into the services and that there are heavy demands both from the Government and private business organizations for young men and women. In the case of girls, the need primarily is for shorthand, typing and office work, and for all kinds of skilled and semiskilled work for boys.

"Never before in the history of the attendance department has there been such a heavy demand on the part of young students for work permits. The extremely high salaries offered by the Government and private business for the services of comparatively young workers is a drawing card that cannot be gainsaid.

"It is not to be wondered that young people see only the gains of immediate attainment of money instead of the gains of education, which in the long run are the best. Consideration should be given to the fact that there will be those who may not care to return to school and thus will fail to complete high school courses. Thereby they will be handicapped by their lack of educational pursuit when industry and business in general go back to normal."

Meanwhile, seven local preparatory schools reported that a total of 240 youths took the Army and Navy screening tests, given simultaneously all over the Nation. Of these, 60 were at Randles School, 40 at Bullis School, 29 at Bevitt, 17 at Georgetown Prep, 11 at Landon, 20 at St. Albans, and 64 at St. John's College. Nearly 100 young men also took the examinations at American University, most of them drawn from the student body there.

The tests were held from 9 to 11 a. m., conducted by the College Entrance Examination Board. Those chosen will go either into the Army or Navy, wear uniforms, receive enlisted men's pay and be subject to service discipline. Before they go on active duty in the Army, they will take the regulation 13 weeks of basic training. Those who chose the Navy will be able to assume their duties immediately upon graduation.

Young men selected who will become 18 before the end of school terms, will be called into uniform at the end of terms, except those in specialized training.

At the same time National Interfraternity Conference headquarters here announced that permission has been obtained from both branches of the service to permit enlisted men in the new program to become members of Greek letter fraternities and live in fraternity houses, a point of dissension during World War I.

Reynolds Recites 'Dry' Jingles to Amused Senators

Senator Reynolds (Democrat) of North Carolina entertained his colleagues—and the gallery—yesterday with the recital of some prohibition jingles.

Defying the grins, and occasional chuckles of fellow Senators, Reynolds recited such verses as "Drink less or drink none, at least until the war is won."

Another ran: "Curtail drinks, save money and health, that guns and strength may be our wealth."

Reynolds explained that the verses were taken from a booklet entitled "War Victory Through Self-Conrtol," issued by a "group of patriotic women" headed by Mrs. Thomas A. Wadden of 2601 Calvert Street Northwest.

The Senator, asking to have the booklet printed in the Congressional Record, said the organization sponsoring it was launched by Mrs. Wadden, daughter of the late Representative Edward William Pou of North Carolina, at Smithfield, N. C., in 1942.

Kaufman to Play At Soviet Embassy

Louis Kaufman, American violinist, who has made recordings for many motion pictures, will give a special request performance at the Soviet Embassy Monday.

The violinist, called a pioneer in the field of modern American music, has recently completed a cross-country tour. At the Embassy, he will include on his program several new American compositions, as well as a group of Russian selections, accompanied by his wife, Mrs. Annette Kaufman, at the piano.

Memories

Romberg's Wife Former D. C. Resident

MRS. SIGMUND ROMBERG

Blossom time in Washington is packed with memories for Mrs. Sigmund Romberg, wife of the famous Hungarian-American composer who is to appear at his eighty-eighth concert Tuesday in Constitution Hall.

Met at Union Station by her sister, Mrs. Phillip King of the Broadmoor Apartments, Mrs. Romberg returned to her native city late yesterday. They stopped briefly at the Raleigh Hotel, where the composer's attractive wife explained that she was her husband's "most outspoken critic."

"But apparently Sigmund likes to have it that way," she said. "He generally likes for me to pass on his compositions before they are presented to the public. In fact, I am his first public."

Delayed Observance

She explained that her husband's arrival will be both a reunion and a slightly delayed anniversary observance. A month ago while on tour Mrs. Romberg became ill with a severe cold and her husband sent her home to New York; March 27 was their eighteenth wedding anniversary and there was to be appropriate observance.

"That will now take place in Washington," she explained.

"No, it was not music that brought us together. I'm not a musician, although I love it.

"I met Sigmund in the Adirondacks and have been with him practically all of the time since then," she said.

Her father, Reuben Harris, dead many years, established the Harris Jewelry Co., one of the older business firms in the Capital.

The musician who composed the music for "The Student Prince," "Blossom Time," "Desert Song" and "New Moon" likes best to compose on the organ, Mrs. Romberg stated.

5000 Scores in Library

His wife yesterday also announced that more than 5000 scores in Romberg's private library upon his death will be presented to the Library of Congress here.

The concert at Constitution Hall Tuesday will be presented by 47 musicians and three vocalists, she said.

Thus the wife of a famous composer who with all his recognition once carried the score of a song ("Lover Come Back to Me") in his pocket several days before he gathered enough courage to play it for his prima donna, visits her home town again.

City News In Brief

Michael Marchyshyn, 34, a cab driver of 230 Longfellow Street Northwest, died early yesterday in Emergency Hospital of burns received Thursday night when a pan of gasoline exploded in back of his home while he was repairing the engine of his taxi.

According to police the blast occurred when an electric light extention cord short circuited and threw sparks into the liquid, setting it afire and igniting his oil-soaked clothing. Neighbors smothered the flames and removed him to the hospital.

Two Admit Check Charges

Andrew LeBolo, 31, and Mrs. Sylvia Bowlby, 23, described by FBI agents as one of the slickest bad check teams ever to operate in the District, were sentenced yesterday by Justice James W. Morris in District Court to from two to six years on their pleas of guilty. Mrs. Bowlby was immediately placed on probation.

The pair, arrested January 16, are said to have operated here a year, victimizing department stores and banks for at least $18,000 by passing forged checks. The original indictment against LeBolo charged him with 11 counts of forgery and false pretenses. Mrs. Bowlby was named in six of the counts.

Public Probe Of Insanitary Places Set

Senate District Group To Start Hearings Next Saturday; Witnesses Called

By Mary Spargo

Post Staff Writer

A public inquiry into insanitary conditions in Washington will be launched a week from today by the Senate District Committee, Chairman Pat McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada announced yesterday.

Hearings will start at 11 a. m. April 10, in the District of Columbia committee room at the Capitol, and interested members of the public who wish to be heard on the subject are specifically asked to communicate with the counsel, Julian G. Sourwine.

Witnesses who have been invited to appear are John Ihlder, executive officer of the Alley Dwelling Authority, Maj. J. B. Gordon, director of sanitary engineering, Dr. George C. Ruhland, city health officer, Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech, and a representative of the Washington Housing Association. Also invited are a number of physicians with large slum practices, who can discuss the relation of slum housing to disease in the city.

Follows House Inquiry

The Senate investigation follows in the wake of a similar inquiry now being made by the Public Health subcommittee of the House District Committee, of which Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat) of Maryland is chairman.

Both inquiries were launched following a series of articles in The Post which led to a blistering attack upon the "negligence" of public officials by Representative Plumley (Republican) of Vermont on the floor of the House a couple of weeks ago.

Meanwhile the House subcommittee which started its investigation with a first-hand tour of the slums here has been pressing forward rapidly to complete its investigation and make definite recommendations to the District Commissioners.

Members of the House were startled when the rents of dwellings they visited were disclosed, and yesterday Chairman D'Alesandro revealed that figures submitted to him showed that revenues as high as $135 a month were being received from homes without inside toilets or baths.

To Submit List of Properties

D'Alesandro said he was submitting a list of these properties to the District Rent Control Commission with a request for the names of the owners.

A few days ago McCarran warned that the reports of insanitary conditions here "could not be brushed off with the statement that there had been no epidemics here and none were expected."

McCarran asserted that there were conditions in Washington conducive to epidemics and said these conditions should be remedied.

The veteran District Committee chairman pointed out the difficulty of securing priorities from the War Production Board, but expressed the hope that methods of improvement which would not take too great a supply of critical materials could be found.

To Discuss Priorities

The question of priorities in regard to securing fire escapes for District rooming houses so that they may comply with the law will be discussed next Tuesday by Senator McCarran with Maury Maverick, chief of the governmental division of WPB, and various District officials. In a recent survey it was disclosed that although nearly one-half the lodging houses in the city were violating fire laws by having no fire escapes. Owners explained that they were unable to get priorities.

Another development on the sanitation front occurred in Municipal Court yesterday when Judge George D. Neilson fined an aged Negro woman $35 on a charge of molesting a District health officer inspecting an alley. It was revealed that this was the first time in many years that any such charge had been heard in Municipal Court.

Court Vacates Zoning Order for Apartment House

An order issued in 1941 by the District Zoning Commission rezoning property at Sixteenth and Shepherd Streets Northwest permitting only construction of single-family detached houses was vacated yesterday by Justice Jennings Bailey in District Court in answer to a complaint of Harry Poretsky, 4512 Iowa Avenue Northwest, who proposes to build a five-story apartment house on the site.

In the court action Justice Bailey termed the rezoning order "unreasonable, arbitrary and capritious." Poretsky in his complaint had said that he had spent $87,000 for property adjoining Rock Creek Park on which to build a 240-unit apartment house. The complaint said the rezoning order had been in conflict with a 1933 zoning order allowing construction of the apartment house.

Women's Club News

By Genevieve Reynolds

Concrete and all encompassing is the General Federation of Women's Clubs' proposed "Food for Freedom" campaign. In launching the project, Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, federation president, requested the 2,500,000 members to keep club houses open and continue meetings during the summer.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

"The lack of certain food elements will have a deleterious effect on the health and thinking of fighting men and people at home," said Mrs. Whitehurst, "therefore the food campaign must be facilitated by the millions of women who are not yet utilizing their greatest effort for the war program."

Seven major points are to be the focal points of the campaign. To initiate the program the federation president suggested the following procedure:

1. Appoint an agriculture recruitment committee—to recruit women and young people for farm duty and victory garden activities.

2. Appoint a child welfare chairman—to recruit women to take care of children during the day while younger women work on farms.

3. Sponsor a club victory garden—where members may work at least one day each week.

4. Appoint an agriculture or food chairman—unless one is already serving.

5. Start food canning classes in every club — using clubhouses and meeting places for such classes, securing teachers from nearby universities and inviting nonmembers to attend.

6. Do their personal canning in the club center as a club project and can surplus food for distribution where needed next winter.

7. Keep their clubhouses open and continue club meetings during the summer months.

D. C. Women to Attend

Several Washington women will participate in an eight-member panel discussion at the Pan American Day conference to be held in New York on April 14. The conference, which will be held under auspices of the National Council of Women of the United States, the Pan American Womens' Association and the New York Times, will discuss postwar issues.

Those appearing on the program will be Miss Minerva Bernardino, vice chairman of the Inter-American Commission of Women; Miss Mary Winslowe, United States delegate to the Inter-American Commission of Women; Carmen de Lozada, secretary and Bolivian delegate to the commission.

Also Rosa Maria Oliver and Muna Lee, Division of Cultural Relations, Department of State.

Commenting on the conference, Miss Bernardino said: "Civil and political rights of women in Latin America will be granted without a struggle when the democracies have won the war," but warned that all United States women's activities had repercussions throughout Latin America and greatly affected the status of the women there.

Did You Know That . . .

Mrs. Hewitt Griggs Robertson of Chevy Chase, Md., was elected unanimously State regent, Maryland State Society, DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN COLONISTS, at the organization's annual conference held in Baltimore this week. Furthermore, she is the first in ten years to hold the office from her section of the county. The late Mrs. William Talbot, who was an organizing regent, serving from 1921 to 1924, is the only other from Chevy Chase to be honored with the office.

Mrs. Robertson has served as regent of the Maryland D. A. R. and also in the Janet Montgomery Chapter. In addition she is the former State chairman of Americanism Committee of Ellis Island. You'll find her active in Red Cross and in the various Chevy Chase Clubs.

It's slated to be a colorful and gala affair. The second in a series of "MEET THE WORLD IN WASHINGTON" program sponsored by the Recreation, Education and Hospitality Committee, Civilian Mobilization, Dupont Circle Area, will be held Monday night, 8 o'clock at Scott's Hotel, 2131 O Street Northwest, Miss Anne Darlington, chairman, has arranged a Greek program.

Dr. Stephen G. Xydis of the Greek Office of Information of the Embassy, honored guest and speaker will discuss "The Present and Future of a Country With a Past." Members of the Greek Embassy staff will be among the invited guests.

Other highlights of the program will be Greek pictures, folk songs and dances. Singing the folk songs will be Mary De Vakos, Helen Fochalis, Helen Geralis. George Manis is the accompanist. Dancers include: Mrs. Foula Euripias, Electra Mousmoules, Sophia Theophilus, Amelice Peremza, Elizabeth Gillespie, Helen Kouretas and Mary Kouretas.

Mrs. William J. Sholar, recently was named assistant to Miss Mabel Cook, director of the USO CLUB operated by the local Y. W. C. A. Mrs. Sholar will operate at the new USO clubs soon to be opened in Bethesda, Maryland.

A native of Cleveland, Ohio, Mrs. Sholar studied dance theory and technique at the Chalif Normal School of Dance in New York City. Later she attended the National Catholic School of Social Sciences in Washington. Since then she has held several positions as recreational director.

Doings of the Day

Dr. W. M. Gewher, professor of history, University of Maryland, is guest speaker at tea meeting of Chevy Chase Branch, NATIONAL LEAGUE OF AMERICAN PEN WOMEN, 2:30 p. m. at the apartment of Mrs. J. Emmette Sebree, 1621 Crescent Place Northwest. Miss Mary Elizabeth Downey, league president, introduces speaker . . . Mrs. Margaret Scully Zimmele is hostess to members of the D. C. BRANCH and national board of the National League of American Pen Women, 3 to 5 p. m. at her home, 104 Sunset Lane, Kenwood, Md. Miss Mary Williamson is guest speaker. All visiting Pen Women in the Capital are invited . . . DOLLOGY CLUB meets 2 p. m. with Mrs. Mear at Dorchester House. James Waldo Fawcett is guest speaker. His topic is "The Antiquity of Dolls." Mrs. Kathryn Shale Rodgers, club president, shows a wax doll made in 1810, in Paris and Mrs. J. W. Fawcett, exhibits many rare dolls

C. D. A. Vesper Service

Tomorrow's calendar is chocked full of interesting places to go and things to do. Court D. C., No. 212, CATHOLIC DAUGHTERS OF AMERICA, holds annual vesper service, 3:30 p. m. at the Franciscan Monastery, 1400 Quincy Street Northeast . . . WASHINGTON STATE AND ALASKA SOCIETY honors congressional delegation and their wives at annual reception, 4 to 7 p. m., at the Statler Hotel.

Raising Your Own Ration Points

New Brunswick, N. J., April 2 (AP).—A 25-by-50-foot garden plot, properly managed, can produced food which would require 2772 ration points to buy at current rates, Professor F. G. Helyar of Rutgers University said today.

The chairman of the State Victory Garden and Food Conservation Committee said such a plot could provide:

Three bushels of tomatoes, or 54 quart jars, 1481 points; snap beans, 1 bushel, 16 quarts, 358 points; carrots, 1 bushel, 18 quarts, 256 points; beets, 1 bushel, or 16 quarts, 25 points; lima beans, 1 bushel, 9 quarts, 274 points.

THE CITY HOME GARDEN

By W. R. Beattie

Formerly senior horticulturist, Division of Fruit and Vegetable Crops and Diseases, Bureau of Plant Industry, United States Department of Agriculture.

Cabbage Group

The cabbage group includes both the early and the late types of cabbage, cauliflower, broccoli, kale, collards, Brussels sprouts, and kohlrabi. The general cultivation of each member of this group is practically the same, and they may be grown in almost any locality; in fact, cabbage is one of the most universally grown of our garden crops. The important consideration is to have plenty of plant food in the soil so that they will make a quick, tender growth.

Owing to the widespread distribution of the cabbage yellows disease, only the resistant strains should be planted.

Early Cabbage

Only a few heads of early cabbage should be grown in a small city garden. The plants should be started indoors, but may be set in the garden quite early if hardened off a little before setting them. In certain sections of the South the Early Jersey Wakefield and Charleston Wakefield varieties of cabbage may be planted in the fall and matured the following spring. The Golden Acre and Copenhagen Market are the leading early varieties. Glory of Enkhuizen is a good second-early sort. They may be set in rows 24 to 30 inches apart and 15 inches apart in the row.

Late Cabbage

Late cabbage can be planted between the rows of early potatoes or after early snap beans, so that double service may be obtained from the soil. Wisconsin All Seasons and Wisconsin Ballhead are among the best late varieties. They should be planted in rows 30 inches apart and 18 inches apart in the row. Cabbage may be stored in a cool, dry, well-ventilated cellar or buried in an outdoor pit in the garden.

Cauliflower

Cauliflower is much more difficult to grow than cabbage and is only adapted to certain soil and climatic conditions which are to be found near the seacoast and in limited inland areas. The important consideration in growing a spring crop of cauliflower is to have it so early that the heads will be formed before extremely hot weather begins. The methods of starting the plants and general culture are the same as for early cabbage. When the heads begin to form, the leaves should be brought together above the heads and fastened by means of a string, so as to shut out the sunlight and retain the snowy whiteness of the heads. A fall crop of cauliflower can be grown in the same manner as late cabbage. Cauliflower cannot be stored to advantage, but should be used within a few days after it is gathered.

Kale can be grown either as a spring or a fall crop. Kale is not stored, but is left growing until wanted for use.

Brussels Sprouts

Brussels sprouts are a kind of cabbage that forms a large number of buttons or small heads along its stem where the leaves are attached. The culture of Brussels sprouts is the same as that of cabbage except that the leaves are removed from the lower part of the stem to give the buttons more room to develop.

Imitation Marriage

CHAPTER XXII

Scott said: "And now we can hope—nothing else. If the U-boat surfaces in the right place and then moves along the water it will snub the rope and draw the mine in toward itself. The only condition is that the rowboat will have to be loosened at the right time."

Naar asked quietly: "And you will do that?" Her voice was curiously flat and thoroughly matter-of-fact.

"Sure—who else?"

Naar lifted frankly puzzled eyes. "I wouldn't know," she murmured, holding her voice low.

When Scott Hayden came downstairs after changing into his slacks, Naar was standing on the plaza, looking out toward the sea. He came through the door and he noticed at once that her usually serene face was troubled. He did not speak other than to say, "Coming?"

They headed down the stairs toward his automobile. When Scott had turned around and headed up and over the hill he looked sideward at Naar. She was rubbing her chin with the back of her hand.

Scott asked: "What's the trouble?"

Naar had her answer ready. "The mine," she said levelly.

"What about it?" Scott's voice was flat, disarming.

"Suppose a boat comes along?"

"It isn't likely. I haven't seen a boat since I've been here. But we'll have to take that chance."

Naar was silent for a long, dampening moment. Then she spoke softly: "You are going to loosen that bow rope and allow the boat to be drawn out when the U-boat snags the line?"

"That's the idea I had. The mine, if we are lucky, may strike the submarine's hull. That is why I placed it about a quarter way out."

"But won't that be dangerous—I mean, the explosion will be close, won't it?"

"Perhaps." Scott's tone was dry.

Scott forced his thoughts away from what her words meant. He asked: "Why not? And, incidentally, haven't you forgotten that agreement of ours?"

Naar ignored Scott's second question. Instead she said: "The explosion—you might be killed!"

Scott grinned mirthlessly. "You have been telling me that I should do my part—now I have a chance. You aren't very consistent."

Naar made an impatient gesture. "But I don't mean that you should kill yourself."

Scott grunted. "I won't if I can help it." He was remembering Naar's anxiety when he had plunged over the side of the boat. That, added to her words now, shook him completely. He added: "Perhaps we won't have to worry about that."

Naar looked away from him. They were silent as Scott sawed the wheel sharply around a blind corner. He eased his foot from the accelerator. Then they were around the bend and fully on an automobile that was broadside across the road, completely blocking the way.

Scott snapped his foot to the brake pedal, hitting it hard. The automobile skidded and stopped, a heavy cloud of dust rising into the air.

Scott murmured tightly: "Did I say we wouldn't have to worry about the boat? This it is!" He was halfway through the door when he froze. His hard eyes came up and leveled upon the black automatic that was pointed toward his chest.

The man stepped from the thick bushes. He was big and bulky and familiar. His hard voice rasped threateningly: "Don't move!"

Scott knew then what had happened. The two thugs had really followed Naar. They were the ones to whom the submarine had signaled. Where they had hidden last night, Scott could not decide. The man before him was the larger of the duo. Scott wondered where the other, smaller man was. His question was answered by a hard, steely voice from the other side of the automobile.

"Step out, Miss O'Neil." There was a pause. "Around to the other side."

"Paul," the big man said softly, meaningly, "These two know too much about what we do. We must not waste time with them." His laugh came out brittle and harsh. "It is their lives or ours, is it not? And it will not be ours."

To Remove Chewing Gum

Messy chewing gum can be removed by one of the following methods:

Ice—If the material will not water-spot, rub the gum stain with ice. Then scrape and rub the hardened gum out of the cloth. This method is particularly good for rugs and other materials.

Egg White—If the material is washable, soften the gum stain with egg white and then wash.

Carbon Tetrachloride, Kerosene, or Turpentine—Soak the stain in carbon tetrachloride, kerosene, or turpentine. If kerosene is used, wash in warm soapy water afterward.

WHAT'S NEW

By Claire Royal

Hairpin shortage, plus women who haven't time to devote to complicated coiffures, plus small forward tilted hats, or military caps—have resulted in a trend toward shorter haircuts.

The feather cut of some time back put many of us in the mood for the neat appearance of a close clipped hairline and the upswept longer locks of others has helped the idea along. Now New York's Antoine produces a coiffure which he calls "Alert" which may well be the forerunner of a new and neater wartime hair-do. In Antoine's version, the hair is cut from 1 and 1½ to 2½ inches in length and may be changed by simple brushing from the natural look of daytime to the more formal appearance for evening. Toughest convert will be the girl with the long glamour bob, although many of these have already changed over to the chignon.

THE BEAUTY COUNTER: Since this is always the season that demands something new in the way of a lipstick, take a look around you when you go to buy it. You will see that the beauty counters have fewer colors than usual, but that they have kept the ones most in demand. You will see fewer of the fancy packages that used to grace the showcases but the products remain much the same. Substitutes have been found for war essential alcohol and glycerine in beauty products and there is no real shortage.

Some metal containers are still in the stores, but the newer ones are of plastic or wood. Best policy is to buy a refill if you still have a case in good condition. Plastic and wood, too, for compacts and cigarette cases.

COSTUME JEWELRY: The lapel ornament or the pin-that-made-the-dress have branched off in two widely separated directions. A far cry from the prewar junk jewelry is the gold-plated sterling silver of today. It costs more than the other used to and it also boasts better workmanship. It is combined often with enamel or plastic. In the other direction, wood, leather, plastic and fur have been given a lift into the important field as dress decoration. Glass, too, has been used effectively in pins, earrings and even bracelets. Me on seeds, corn kernels and shells have become popular.

Unusual designs and good workmanship have done their share to popularize these less expensive pieces of jewelry and they bid almost to run away with the field. Here, again, is the case of an industry faced with a metal shortage and coming up with something as good or better than the products of a couple of years ago.

The designs of this new jewelry range from frogs on a lily pad to the most delicate ceramic flowers. Main trend of such decorations seems to follow nature with a few frills added. Consider the case of the starfish of amethyst and gold simulated jewels on a gold-plated cut-out background, or a natural branch of coral combined with sea shells, brilliants and pearl beads, morning glory clusters, sheafs of wheat with yellow jewels representing the wheat heads; pansies, roses, four-leaf clovers, and so on and on. Animals also come in for their share of attention, but spring somehow means flowers.

The artificial flower counters are a source of pure joy these days. They look like bright pushcarts in the midst of a swirl of humanity and their wares can be turned into anything, from a hat to a shoulder decoration.

SPRING CHECK-UP

By Jeanne Contini

For a wardrobe suffering from spring fever, we suggest a bright new pinafore (style version of sulphur and molasses). Especially recommended is this one in black and white checked taffeta. It will change the pace and lift the face of the most winter weary black basic dress in your closet. Just button it on like an apron and in two seconds you'll look as crisp and fresh as a bunch of rain-washed violets.

It is the joker in the hand of a business girl, who may find herself with a very small span of time to shower and make the big shift after 6 from work to fun. It is as versatile as a gilet and almost as easy to put on. The fabric is not prone to show soil. The style is delightfully young and exceptionally becoming to small figures. Try it over a simple round necked white pique blouse or a sheer white shirt with long full sleeves and wear a black velvet ribbon in your hair.

Yours for less than six dollars.

THE GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay

The Egg Walkers

I

Here's to all those who go tiptoeing through life,
Who never upset the applecart,
Or pull the lion's tail,
Or knock chips off of shoulders,
Or step on toes that are constantly protruding;
Who must always thread their way carefully,
Among the moody, the pouty, the choleric and the easily offended,
In order that life about them may flow smoothly,
Warmed by the divine breath of human harmony.

II

Here's to those who must always be walking on eggs,
So as not to do the wrong things,
Or to fail to do the right ones,
Or not to say or think something they shouldn't,
Around those whose egos are sensitive and inflated;
Who must possess a sixth sense of clairyvoyance,
To recognize hovering thunder storms of temperament,
And detour them; to keep smooth the road of conversation,
And clear discordant thought waves of their rumblings.

III

Here's to those who must go through life,
Never being completely themselves,
Because of the quivering nearness
Of the pocupine quills,
Of those who adjoin them;
who must constantly think ahead
Before they give utterance;
who must measure each action,
Who must secretly and tenderly nourish,
Within their own hearts, the fragile and tenuous flower
Of self, lest it be trampled or wither.

IV

I hope that in the hereafter all of the egg walkers,
Will find a special corner of Heaven
Set aside for their use,
And free of all difficult people;
A place where they can speak out loudly and boldly
All in their hearts; and where in the celestial sunlight
They can spread their wings, or walk surefootedly and firmly
Without balance or caution, where they can relax in blessed security,
To enjoy a readymade peace, complete and unending.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Show your patriotism and good planning of meals by making a supper from the left-overs of other meals. This Salvage Supper consists of curried rice with veal, vegetable salad, beets, toasted bread and cake with raisin sauce

Scraps of foods once spurned are now the pride of the thrifty cook. In fact, left-overs are the white hope of the economy food program. If every cook will make the most of all the food she has and converts every tidbit into dishes, our vital food supplies can be stretched just that much farther.

The best way to handle left-overs is to plan for them. Left-overs do not just have to happen. Plan to have them and to use them advantageously. When you go to do food shopping, buy enough to assure the makings of another meal. Cook carefully without waste, so food will stand up well.

Left-overs do not have to be served the next day. Skip a day before you present them. If you will try to utilize the food in some new way there will be more pleasure in the eating.

Salvage Supper Menu

Curry of Rice With Veal
Harvard Beets Tossed Vegetable Salad
Toasted Vienna Bread
Raisin Caramello Pudding
Tea Milk

Why not have a salvage supper some time? At one of those times when you are lucky enough to have a veal roast, you have a good start for a salvage supper. Vegetables also have a way of being left over if only in small dabs. Bread, too, will grow stale in the bread box. Perhaps there is a left-over part of a cake.

Augment such left-overs with other basic foods and you will have a splendid meal. The following may serve as a basic pattern from which you can assemble a meal.

Wash 1 cup rice thoroughly. Place 2 tablespoons fat and 1 teaspoon chopped onion in a stew pan and cook them until the onion is yellow. Add the rice and stir the whole over a hot fire for 5 minutes. Take the pan from heat and season with 1 or 2 tablespoons curry powder, 2 teaspoons salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Stir all well and add 2½ cups boiling water. Cover the pan and boil rapidly for 10 minutes, then cook very slowly for 40 minutes. Pour rice onto heated dish and then add the cubed veal that has been heated in the gravy. Makes 8 servings.

RAISIN CARAMELLO PUDDING

Rinse and drain 1 cup raisins. Combine 2-3 cup sugar with ¼ cup water in a deep saucepan and boil until a golden brown color. Remove from heat. Add 1 cup cream, return to heat, and boil and stir until sugar is dissolved. Add raisins and few grains of salt and bring to a boil. Add 1 tablespoon cornstarch. Serve sauce on left-over cake cut into squares.

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

I wonder if all parents agree that one should be imposed upon by neighbors in the interests of keeping peace? This interesting letter implies that conclusion.

Experienced Mother: "I am not young enough to benefit by your column but today I read about the mother of six who, because the neighbor's children bothered her, wrote to applaud the mother who threw a 3-year-old over a fence into his own yard where his mother should have kept him.

"I agree with her 100 per cent and did not like the soft pedalling you exhibited in your comments. You said neighbors should handle their own neighborhood problems and that this neighbor was fortunate to have no companionship problem because she had a large family and plenty of space for them to play.

"Aren't 60 per cent of families one-child families? If you compare these statistics with those of the past you are gullible indeed if you do not believe that the mother of an "only" child is one because of selfish choice. I see no reason for pitying her any more than you pity a mother for buying one dress instead of another. If she wants one child she should make the sacrifices necessary instead of throwing her one and only on her braver and more capable neighbors. (The "thrown" child was a member of a large family.)

"I had two children and poor health. Yet, despite the agony my children's noise caused me, I would not find release by letting the neighbors bear my burdens. Relatives who came, asked me if I had adopted a certain child, he was here so constantly. My neighbors ran over me. I stood for it because we owned our home and expected to remain here. No matter what you say you cannot stand up for yourself without making enemies.

"Once the worm turned and I telephoned a mother to detour her children around my house, as the cat tired of being swung by the tail and the baby tired of being hit by rocks before she could even say hello. That mother hasn't spoken to me since.

"So I think you are off the beam when you put the responsibility on the mother who is imposed upon. The mother who benefits most by the relationship should take the hard part herself."

Yet, when she doesn't, you are 100 per cent for the mother who took things in her own hands. This seems inconsistent with the rest of your letter.

Our leaflet, "Children's Quarrels," may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Learn Solvents To Remove Fingernail Polish

If you are unfortunate in spilling nail polish, you need not despair. It can be removed with the following fluids:

Acetone or Nail Polish Removers—On any material except acetate rayon or vinyon, sponge the stain with acetone or a commercial nail polish remover.

Grease Solvent and Banana Oil (amyl acetate)—Use this treatment on any material including acetate rayon and vinyon. First wet the stain well with carbon tetrachloride or gasoline; then apply a drop of banana oil to the stain. Brush lightly with a soft cloth, using an upward motion to pick up the dissolved polish.

Bleaches—To remove any color remaining after the polish itself has been dissolved, apply a bleach. Test the cloth for change in color first.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

In these days of food shortages and point rationing, the homemaker is eager to have practical nutrition at her finger tips. If you are the menu planner in your home, these concentrated bits of information will come in handy in helping your family to keep fit on the right food.

News note: Sunlight destroys vitamin G (riboflavin). What does that mean to you? It means that milk, one of our most important sources of this vitamin, must not be allowed to stand in the sun for an hour or so every day or the family's health will be adversely affected. Try to meet the milkman. If he comes too early for you, have him leave the milk in a box in a spot of shade, then take it in and put it on ice as soon as you are up and about.

Vitamin G is the one that helps you to keep younger longer. You should insure plenty of it in the menus not only by getting all you can from the milk, but by serving meat organs frequently and a green leafy vegetable every day.

Vitamin C makes a difference in health: Nineteen out of a group of 21 children attending a school were found to have soft, spongy and bleeding gums. They were given a diet high in Vitamin C—tomato juice, citrus fruits and vegetables—and within 10 days every one of the cases cleared up.

Vitamin C is necessary not only for a healthy condition of the mouth but for the maintenance of a high level of positive health, and for increased resistance to infection. Where to get vitamin C? Buy fresh grapefruit, tangerines and oranges when they are in season and within reason as to price. And serve the whole fruit rather than the juice. One large orange, one-half grapefruit, or two tangerines supply three-fourths of the day's requirement of vitamin C.

Forms of Dyspepsia Due To Stomach Condition

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Dyspepsia, or indigestion, may be divided into three groups. Yesterday we discussed gaseous dyspepsia. The other two groups are secretory and nervous indigestion.

All of these disturbances can be the symptoms of an organic or a functional change in the digestive apparatus. By organic, I mean a structural change, such as ulcer of the stomach, gallstones, appendicitis, etc. By functional, I mean a condition of the nervous system which interferes with either the sensation or the secretion or the movement of the digestive tract. Today allow me to discuss the secretory form of dyspepsia.

The stomach juice is made up of hydrochloric acid and pepsin. It may be secreted in excess or it may be diminished. Since the pepsin plays little part in digestive disturbance, it is the hydrochloric acid which causes the trouble. So we speak of forms of this kind of indigestion as being those of increased acidity and decreased acidity.

Any form of acid indigestion can be treated very readily by the use of such alkalis as baking soda, aluminum hydroxide and milk of magnesia. A bland diet in which meats and milk and eggs predominate also brings relief.

Lack of acidity is frequently an indication of anemia. However, it occurs in a great many cases of functional indigestion. The hydrochloric acid can be replaced. Diluted hydrochloric acid is a medicinal preparation which is frequently used by physicians.

Since the chances of regeneration of the stomach to the extent that it will resume the secretion of acid is slight, the food should be such as can be easily digested—fruit juices, toast, soft boiled eggs, tender lean meat, mashed potatoes, pureed vegetables.

Women's Club News

By Genevieve Reynolds

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

Concrete and all encompassing is the General Federation of Women's Clubs' proposed "Food for Freedom" campaign. In launching the project, Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, federation president, requested the 2,500,000 members to keep club houses open and continue meetings during the summer.

"The lack of certain food elements will have a deleterious effect on the health and thinking of fighting men and people at home," said Mrs. Whitehurst, "therefore the food campaign must be facilitated by the millions of women who are not yet utilizing their greatest effort for the war program."

Seven major points are to be the focal points of the campaign. To initiate the program the federation president suggested the following procedure:

1. Appoint an agriculture recruitment committee—to recruit women and young people for farm duty and victory garden activities.

2. Appoint a child welfare chairman—to recruit women to take care of children during the day while younger women work on farms.

3. Sponsor a club victory garden—where members may work at least one day each week.

4. Appoint an agriculture or food chairman—unless one is already serving.

5. Start food canning classes in every club — using clubhouses and meeting places for such classes, securing teachers from nearby universities and inviting nonmembers to attend.

6. Do their personal canning in the club center as a club project and can surplus food for distribution where needed next winter.

7. Keep their clubhouses open and continue club meetings during the summer months.

D. C. Women to Attend

Several Washington women will participate in an eight-member panel discussion at the Pan American Day conference to be held in New York on April 14. The conference, which will be held under auspices of the National Council of Women of the United States, the Pan American Womens' Association and the New York Times, will discuss postwar issues.

Those appearing on the program will be Miss Minerva Bernardino, vice chairman of the Inter-American Commission of Women; Miss Mary Winslowe, United States delegate to the Inter-American Commission of Women; Carmen de Lozada, secretary and Bolivian delegate to the commission.

Also Rosa Maria Oliver and Muna Lee, Division of Cultural Relations, Department of State.

Commenting on the conference, Miss Bernardino said: "Civil and political rights of women in Latin America will be granted without a struggle when the democracies have won the war," but warned that all United States women's activities had repercussions throughout Latin America and greatly affected the status of the women there.

Did You Know That . . .

Mrs. Hewitt Griggs Robertson of Chevy Chase, Md., was elected unanimously State regent, Maryland State Society, DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN COLONISTS, at the organization's annual conference held in Baltimore this week. Furthermore, she is the first in ten years to hold the office from her section of the county. The late Mrs. William Talbot, who was an organizing regent, serving from 1921 to 1924, is the only other from Chevy Chase to be honored with the office.

Mrs. Robertson has served as regent of the Maryland D. A. R. and also in the Janet Montgomery Chapter. In addition she is the former State chairman of Americanism Committee of Ellis Island. You'll find her active in Red Cross and in the various Chevy Chase Clubs.

It's slated to be a colorful and gala affair. The second in a series of "MEET THE WORLD IN WASHINGTON" program sponsored by the Recreation, Education and Hospitality Committee, Civilian Mobilization, Dupont Circle Area, will be held Monday night, 8 o'clock at Scott's Hotel, 2131 O Street Northwest, Miss Anne Darlington, chairman, has arranged a Greek program.

Dr. Stephen G. Xydis of the Greek Office of Information of the Embassy, honored guest and speaker will discuss "The Present and Future of a Country With a Past." Members of the Greek Embassy staff will be among the invited guests.

Other highlights of the program will be Greek pictures, folk songs and dances. Singing the folk songs will be Mary De Vakos, Helen Fochalis, Helen Geralis. George Manis is the accompanist. Dancers include: Mrs. Foula Euripias, Electra Mousmoules, Sophia Theophilus, Amelice Peremza, Elizabeth Gilleapie, Helen Kouretas and Mary Kouretas.

Mrs. William J. Sholar, recently was named assistant to Miss Mabel Cook, director of the USO CLUB operated by the local Y. W. C. A. Mrs. Sholar will operate at the new USO clubs soon to be opened in Bethesda, Maryland.

A native of Cleveland, Ohio, Mrs. Sholar studied dance theory and technique at the Chalif Normal School of Dance in New York City. Later she attended the National Catholic School of Social Sciences in Washington. Since then she has held several positions as recreational director.

Doings of the Day

Dr. W. M. Gewher, professor of history, University of Maryland, is guest speaker at tea meeting of Chevy Chase Branch, NATIONAL LEAGUE OF AMERICAN PEN WOMEN, 2:30 p. m. at the apartment of Mrs. J. Emmette Sebree, 1621 Crescent Place Northwest. Miss Mary Elizabeth Downey, league president, introduces speaker . . . Mrs. Margaret Scully Zimmele is hostess to members of the D. C. BRANCH and national board of the National League of American Pen Women, 3 to 5 p. m. at her home, 104 Sunset Lane, Kenwood, Md. Miss Mary Williamson is guest speaker. All visiting Pen Women in the Capital are invited . . . DOLLOGY CLUB meets 2 p. m. with Mrs. Mear at Dorchester House. James Waldo Fawcett is guest speaker. His topic is "The Antiquity of Dolls." Mrs. Kathryn Shale Rodgers, club president, shows a wax doll made in 1810, in Paris and Mrs. J. W. Fawcett, exhibits many rare dolls.

C. D. A. Vesper Service

Tomorrow's calendar is chocked full of interesting places to go and things to do. Court D. C., No. 212, CATHOLIC DAUGHTERS OF AMERICA, holds annual vesper service, 3:30 p. m. at the Franciscan Monastery, 1400 Quincy Street Northeast . . . WASHINGTON STATE AND ALASKA SOCIETY honors congressional delegation and their wives at annual reception, 4 to 7 p. m., at the Statler Hotel.

Raising Your Own Ration Points

New Brunswick, N. J., April 2 (AP).—A 25-by-50-foot garden plot, properly managed, can produced food which would require 2772 ration points to buy at current rates, Professor F. G. Helyar of Rutgers University said today.

The chairman of the State Victory Garden and Food Conservation Committee said such a plot could provide:

Three bushels of tomatoes, or 54 quart jars, 1481 points; snap beans, 1 bushel, 16 quarts, 358 points; carrots, 1 bushel, 18 quarts, 256 points; beets, 1 bushel, or 16 quarts, 25 points; lima beans, 1 bushel, 9 quarts, 274 points.

THE CITY HOME GARDEN

By W. R. Beattie

Cabbage Group

The cabbage group includes both the early and the late types of cabbage, cauliflower, broccoli, kale, collards, Brussels sprouts, and kohlrabi. The general cultivation of each member of this group is practically the same, and they may be grown in almost any locality; in fact, cabbage is one of the most universally grown of our garden crops. The important consideration is to have plenty of plant food in the soil so that they will make a quick, tender growth.

Owing to the widespread distribution of the cabbage yellows disease, only the resistant strains should be planted.

Early Cabbage

Only a few heads of early cabbage should be grown in a small city garden. The plants should be started indoors, but may be set in the garden quite early if hardened off a little before setting them. In certain sections of the South the Early Jersey Wakefield and Charleston Wakefield varieties of cabbage may be planted in the fall and matured the following spring. The Golden Acre and Copenhagen Market are the leading early varieties. Glory of Enkhuizen is a good second-early sort. They may be set in rows 24 to 30 inches apart and 15 inches apart in the row.

Late Cabbage

Late cabbage can be planted between the rows of early potatoes or after early snap beans, so that double service may be obtained from the soil. Wisconsin All Seasons and Wisconsin Ballhead are among the best late varieties. They should be planted in rows 30 inches apart and 18 inches apart in the row. Cabbage may be stored in a cool, dry, well-ventilated cellar or buried in an outdoor pit in the garden.

Cauliflower

Cauliflower is much more difficult to grow than cabbage and is only adapted to certain soil and climatic conditions which are to be found near the seacoast and in limited inland areas. The important consideration in growing a spring crop of cauliflower is to have it so early that the heads will be formed before extremely hot weather begins. The methods of starting the plants and general culture are the same as for early cabbage. When the heads begin to form, the leaves should be brought together above the heads and fastened by means of a string, so as to shut out the sunlight and retain the snowy whiteness of the heads. A fall crop of cauliflower can be grown in the same manner as late cabbage. Cauliflower cannot be stored to advantage, but should be used within a few days after it is gathered.

Kale can be grown either as a spring or a fall crop. Kale is not stored, but is left growing until wanted for use.

Brussels Sprouts

Brussels sprouts are a kind of cabbage that forms a large number of buttons or small heads along its stem where the leaves are attached. The culture of Brussels sprouts is the same as that of cabbage except that the leaves are removed from the lower part of the stem to give the buttons more room to develop.

Imitation Marriage

CHAPTER XXII

Scott said: "And now we can hope—nothing else. If the U-boat surfaces in the right place and then moves along the water it will snub the rope and draw the mine in toward itself. The only condition is that the rowboat will have to be loosened at the right time."

Naar asked quietly: "And you will do that?" Her voice was curiously flat and thoroughly matter-of-fact.

"Sure—who else?"

Naar lifted frankly puzzled eyes. "I wouldn't know," she murmured, holding her voice low.

When Scott Hayden came downstairs after changing into his slacks, Naar was standing on the plaza, looking out toward the sea. He came through the door and he noticed at once that her usually serene face was troubled. He did not speak other than to say, "Coming?"

They headed down the stairs toward his automobile. When Scott had turned around and headed up and over the hill he looked sideward at Naar. She was rubbing her chin with the back of her hand.

Scott asked: "What's the trouble?"

Naar had her answer ready. "The mine," she said levelly.

"What about it?" Scott's voice was flat, disarming.

"Suppose a boat comes along?"

"It isn't likely. I haven't seen a boat since I've been here. But we'll have to take that chance."

Naar was silent for a long, dampening moment. Then she spoke softly: "You are going to loosen that bow rope and allow the boat to be drawn out when the U-boat snags the line?"

"That's the idea I had. The mine, if we are lucky, may strike the submarine's hull. That is why I placed it about a quarter way out."

"But won't that be dangerous—I mean, the explosion will be close, won't it?"

"Perhaps." Scott's tone was dry.

Scott forced his thoughts away from what her words meant. He asked: "Why not? And, incidentally, haven't you forgotten that agreement of ours?"

Naar ignored Scott's second question. Instead she said: "The explosion—you might be killed!"

Scott grinned mirthlessly. "You have been telling me that I should do my part—now I have a chance. You aren't very consistent."

Naar made an impatient gesture. "But I don't mean that you should kill yourself."

Scott grunted. "I won't if I can help it." He was remembering Naar's anxiety when he had plunged over the side of the boat. That, added to her words now, shook him completely. He added: "Perhaps we won't have to worry about that."

Naar looked away from him. They were silent as Scott sawed the wheel sharply around a blind corner. He eased his foot from the accelerator. Then they were around the bend and fully on an automobile that was broadside across the road, completely blocking the way.

Scott snapped his foot to the brake pedal, hitting it hard. The automobile skidded and stopped, a heavy cloud of dust rising into the air.

Scott murmured tightly: "Did I say we wouldn't have to worry about the boat? This it is!" He was halfway through the door when he froze. His hard eyes came up and leveled upon the black automatic that was pointed toward his chest.

The man stepped from the thick bushes. He was big and bulky and familiar. His hard voice rasped threateningly: "Don't move!"

Scott knew then what had happened. The two thugs had really followed Naar. They were the ones to whom the submarine had signaled. Where they had hidden last night, Scott could not decide. The man before him was the larger of the duo. Scott wondered where the other, smaller man was. His question was answered by a hard, steely voice from the other side of the automobile.

"Step out, Miss O'Neil." There was a pause. "Around to the other side."

"Paul," the big man said softly, meaningly, "These two know too much about what we do. We must not waste time with them." His laugh came out brittle and harsh. "It is their lives or ours, is it not? And it will not be ours."

To Remove Chewing Gum

Messy chewing gum can be removed by one of the following methods:

Ice—If the material will not water-spot, rub the gum stain with ice. Then scrape and rub the hardened gum out of the cloth. This method is particularly good for rugs and other materials.

Egg White—If the material is washable, soften the gum stain with egg white and then wash.

Carbon Tetrachloride, Kerosene, or Turpentine—Soak the stain in carbon tetrachloride, kerosene, or turpentine. If kerosene is used, wash in warm soapy water afterward.

It's About Time

By Dolores Boland

IT'S ABOUT TIME to use small remnants from your small daughter's pinafore to make a matching pinafore for her favorite doll. Have her help with the sewing of the doll's copy. A good way to stimulate the child's interest in this practical art.

Carbon Paper

If you happen to get the smudges of carbon paper upon your clothes they can usually be removed by washing in a heavy suds of soap and water. Sponge unwashable materials with a liquid of 1 cup alcohol and 2 cups water; then sponge with cold water.

WHAT'S NEW

By Claire Royal

Hairpin shortage, plus women who haven't time to devote to complicated coiffures, plus small forward tilted hats, or military caps—have resulted in a trend toward shorter haircuts.

The feather cut of some time back put many of us in the mood for the neat appearance of a close clipped hairline and the upswept longer locks of others has helped the idea along. Now New York's Antoine produces a coiffure which he calls "Alert" which may well be the forerunner of a new and neater wartime hair-do. In Antoine's version, the hair is cut from 1 and 1½ to 2½ inches in length and may be changed by simple brushing from the natural look of daytime to the more formal appearance for evening. Toughest convert will be the girl with the long glamour bob, although many of these have already changed over to the chignon.

THE BEAUTY COUNTER: Since this is always the season that demands something new in the way of a lipstick, take a look around you when you go to buy it. You will see that the beauty counters have fewer colors than usual, but that they have kept the ones most in demand. You will see fewer of the fancy packages that used to grace the showcases but the products remain much the same. Substitutes have been found for war essential alcohol and glycerine in beauty products and there is no real shortage.

Some metal containers are still in the stores, but the newer ones are of plastic or wood. Best policy is to buy a refill if you still have a case in good condition. Plastic and wood, too, for compacts and cigarette cases.

COSTUME JEWELRY: The lapel ornament or the pin-that-made-the-dress have branched off in two widely separated directions. A far cry from the prewar junk jewelry is the gold-plated sterling silver of today. It costs more than the other used to and it also boasts better workmanship. It is combined often with enamel or plastic. In the other direction, wood, leather, plastic and fur have been given a lift into the important field as dress decoration. Glass, too, has been used effectively in pins, earrings and even bracelets. Me on seeds, corn kernels and shells have become popular.

Unusual designs and good workmanship have done their share to popularize these less expensive pieces of jewelry and they bid almost to run away with the field. Here, again, is the case of an industry faced with a metal shortage and coming up with something as good or better than the products of a couple of years ago.

The designs of this new jewelry range from frogs on a lily pad to the most delicate ceramic flowers. Main trend of such decorations seems to follow nature with a few frills added. Consider the case of the starfish of amethyst and gold simulated jewels on a gold-plated cut-out background, or a natural branch of coral combined with sea shells, brilliants and pearl beads, morning glory clusters, sheafs of wheat with yellow jewels representing the wheat heads; pansies, roses, four-leaf clovers, and so on and on. Animals also come in for their share of attention, but spring somehow means flowers.

The artificial flower counters are a source of pure joy these days. They look like bright pushcarts in the midst of a swirl of humanity and their wares can be turned into anything, from a hat to a shoulder decoration.

SPRING CHECK-UP

By Jeanne Contini

For a wardrobe suffering from spring fever, we suggest a bright new pinafore (style version of sulphur and molasses). Especially recommended is this one in black and white checked taffeta. It will change the pace and lift the face of the most winter weary black basic dress in your closet. Just button it on like an apron and in two seconds you'll look as crisp and fresh as a bunch of rain-washed violets.

It is the joker in the hand of a business girl, who may find herself with a very small span of time to shower and make the big shift after 6 from work to fun. It is as versatile as a gilet and almost as easy to put on. The fabric is not prone to show soil. The style is delightfully young and exceptionally becoming to small figures. Try it over a simple round necked white pique blouse or a sheer white shirt with long full sleeves and wear a black velvet ribbon in your hair.

Yours for less than six dollars.

THE GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay

The Egg Walkers

I

Here's to all those who go tiptoeing through life,
Who never upset the applecart,
Or pull the lion's tail,
Or knock chips off of shoulders,
Or step on toes that are constantly protruding;
Who must always thread their way carefully,
Among the moody, the pouty, the choleric and the easily offended,
In order that life about them may flow smoothly,
Warmed by the divine breath of human harmony.

II

Here's to those who must always be walking on eggs,
So as not to do the wrong things,
Or to fail to do the right ones,
Or not to say or think something they shouldn't,
Around those whose egos are sensitive and inflated;
Who must possess a sixth sense of clairvoyance,
To recognize hovering thunder storms of temperament,
And detour them; to keep smooth the road of conversation,
And clear discordant thought waves of their rumblings.

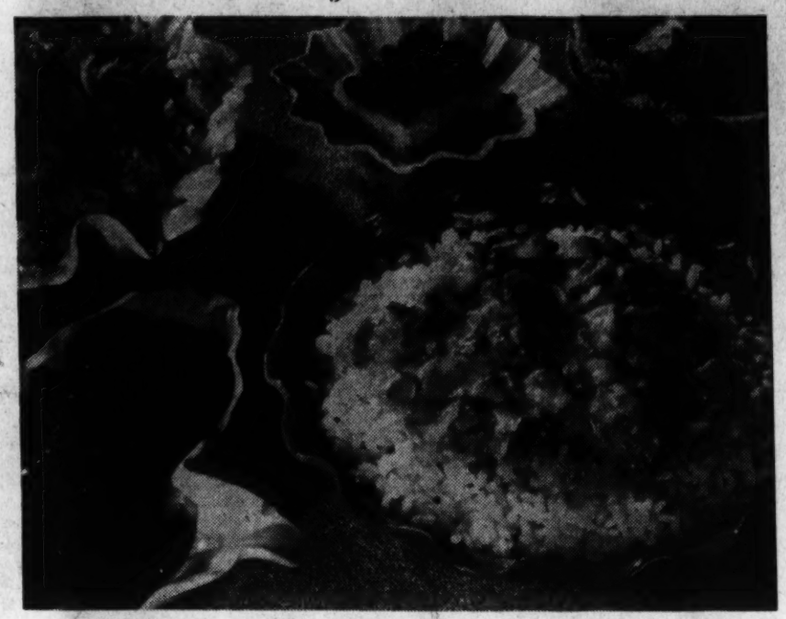
III

Here's to those who must go through life,
Never being completely themselves,
Because of the quivering nearness
Of the pocupine quills,
Of those who adjoin them;
who must constantly think ahead
Before they give utterance;
who must measure each action,
Who must secretly and tenderly nourish,
Within their own hearts, the fragile and tenuous flower
Of self, lest it be trampled or wither.

IV

I hope that in the hereafter all of the egg walkers,
Will find a special corner of Heaven
Set aside for their use,
And free of all difficult people;
A place where they can speak out loudly and boldly
All in their hearts; and where in the celestial sunlight
They can spread their wings, or walk surefootedly and firmly
Without balance or caution, where they can relax in blessed security,
To enjoy a readymade peace, complete and unending.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter



Show your patriotism and good planning of meals by making a supper from the left-overs of other meals. This Salvage Supper consists of curried rice with veal, vegetable salad, beets, toasted bread and cake with raisin sauce

Scraps of foods once spurned are now the pride of the thrifty cook. In fact, left-overs are the white hope of the economy food program. If every cook will make the most of all the food she has and converts every tidbit into dishes, our vital food supplies can be stretched just that much farther.

The best way to handle left-overs is to plan for them. Left-overs do not just have to happen. Plan to have them and to use them advantageously. When you go to do food shopping, buy enough to assure the makings of another meal. Cook carefully without waste, so food will stand up well.

Left-overs do not have to be served the next day. Skip a day before you present them. If you will try to utilize the food in some new way there will be more pleasure in the eating.

Salvage Supper Menu

Curry of Rice With Veal
Harvard Beets Tossed Vegetable Salad
Toasted Vienna Bread
Raisin Caramello Pudding
Tea Milk

Why not have a salvage supper some time? At one of those times when you are lucky enough to have a veal roast, you have a good start for a salvage supper. Vegetables also have a way of being left over if only in small dabs. Bread, too, will grow stale in the bread box. Perhaps there is a left-over part of a cake.

Augment such left-overs with other basic foods and you will have a splendid meal. The following may serve as a basic pattern from which you can assemble a meal.

Wash 1 cup rice thoroughly. Place 2 tablespoons fat and 1 teaspoon chopped onion in a stew pan and cook them until the onion is yellow. Add the rice and stir the whole over a hot fire for 5 minutes. Take the pan from heat and season with 1 or 2 tablespoons curry powder, 2 teaspoons salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Stir all well and add 2½ cups boiling water. Cover the pan and boil rapidly for 10 minutes, then cook very slowly for 40 minutes. Pour rice onto heated dish and then add the cubed veal that has been heated in the gravy. Makes 8 servings.

RAISIN CARAMELLO PUDDING

Rinse and drain 1 cup raisins. Combine 2-3 cup sugar with ¼ cup water in a deep saucepan and boil until a golden brown color. Remove from heat. Add 1 cup cream, return to heat, and boil and stir until sugar is dissolved. Add raisins and few grains of salt and bring to a boil. Add 1 tablespoon cornstarch. Serve sauce on left-over cake cut into squares.

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

I wonder if all parents agree that one should be imposed upon by neighbors in the interests of keeping peace? This interesting letter implies that conclusion.

Experienced Mother: "I am not young enough to benefit by your column but today I read about the mother of six who, because the neighbor's children bothered her, wrote to applaud the mother who threw a 3-year-old over a fence into his own yard where his mother should have kept him.

"I agree with her 100 per cent and did not like the soft pedalling you exhibited in your comments. You said neighbors should handle their own neighborhood problems and that this neighbor was fortunate to have no companionship problem because she had a large family and plenty of space for them to play.

"Aren't 60 per cent of families one-child families? If you compare these statistics with those of the past you are gullible indeed if you do not believe that the mother of an "only" child is one because of selfish choice. I see no reason for pitying her any more than you pity a mother for buying one dress instead of another. If she wants one child she should make the sacrifices necessary instead of throwing her one and only on her braver and more capable neighbors. (The "thrown" child was a member of a large family.)

"I had two children and poor health. Yet, despite the agony my children's noise caused me, I would not find release by letting the neighbors bear my burdens. Relatives who came, asked me if I had adopted a certain child, he was here so constantly. My neighbors ran over me. I stood for it because we owned our home and expected to remain here. No matter what you say you cannot stand up for yourself without making enemies.

"Once the worm turned and I telephoned a mother to detour her children around my house, as the cat tired of being swung by the tail and the baby tired of being hit by rocks before she could even say hello. That mother hasn't spoken to me since.

"So I think you are off the beam when you put the responsibility on the mother who is imposed upon. The mother who benefits most by the relationship should take the hard part herself."

Yet, when she doesn't, you are 100 per cent for the mother who took things in her own hands. This seems inconsistent with the rest of your letter.

Our leaflet, "Children's Quarrels," may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Learn Solvents To Remove Fingernail Polish

If you are unfortunate in spilling nail polish, you need not despair. It can be removed with the following fluids:

Acetone or Nail Polish Removers—On any material except acetate rayon or vinyon, sponge the stain with acetone or a commercial nail polish remover.

Grease Solvent and Banana Oil (amyl acetate)—Use this treatment on any material including acetate rayon and vinyon. First wet the stain well with carbon tetrachloride or gasoline; then apply a drop of banana oil to the stain. Brush lightly with a soft cloth, using an upward motion to pick up the dissolved polish.

Bleaches—To remove any color remaining after the polish itself has been dissolved, apply a bleach. Test the cloth for change in color first.

Forms of Dyspepsia Due To Stomach Condition

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Dyspepsia, or indigestion, may be divided into three groups. Yesterday we discussed gaseous dyspepsia. The other two groups are secretory and nervous indigestion.

All of these disturbances can be the symptoms of an organic or a functional change in the digestive apparatus. By organic, I mean a structural change, such as ulcer of the stomach, gallstones, appendicitis, etc. By functional, I mean a condition of the nervous system which interferes with either the sensation or the secretion or the movement of the digestive tract. Today allow me to discuss the secretory form of dyspepsia.

The stomach juice is made up of hydrochloric acid and pepsin. It may be secreted in excess or it may be diminished. Since the pepsin plays little part in digestive disturbance, it is the hydrochloric acid which causes the trouble. So we speak of forms of this kind of indigestion as being those of increased acidity and decreased acidity.

Any form of acid indigestion can be treated very readily by the use of such alkalis as baking soda, aluminum hydroxide and milk of magnesia. A bland diet in which meats and milk and eggs predominate also brings relief.

Lack of acidity is frequently an indication of anemia. However, it occurs in a great many cases of functional indigestion. The hydrochloric acid can be replaced. Diluted hydrochloric acid is a medicinal preparation which is frequently used by physicians.

Since the chances of regeneration of the stomach to the extent that it will resume the secretion of acid is slight, the food should be such as can be easily digested—fruit juices, toast, soft boiled eggs, tender lean meat, mashed potatoes, pureed vegetables.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

In these days of food shortages and point rationing, the homemaker is eager to have practical nutrition at her finger tips. If you are the menu planner in your home, these concentrated bits of information will come in handy in helping your family to keep fit on the right food.

News note: Sunlight destroys vitamin G (riboflavin). What does that mean to you? It means that milk, one of our most important sources of this vitamin, must not be allowed to stand in the sun for an hour or so every day or the family's health will be adversely affected. Try to meet the milkman. If he comes too early for you, have him leave the milk in a box in a spot of shade, then take it in and put it on ice as soon as you are up and about.

Vitamin G is the one that helps you to keep younger longer. You should insure plenty of it in the menus not only by getting all you can from the milk, but by serving meat organs frequently and a green leafy vegetable every day.

Vitamin C makes a difference in health: Nineteen out of a group of 21 children attending a school were found to have soft, spongy and bleeding gums. They were given a diet high in Vitamin C—tomato juice, citrus fruits and vegetables—and within 10 days every one of the cases cleared up.

Vitamin C is necessary not only for a healthy condition of the mouth but for the maintenance of a high level of positive health, and for increased resistance to infection. Where to get vitamin C? Buy fresh grapefruit, tangerines and oranges when they are in season and within reason as to price. And serve the whole fruit rather than the juice. One large orange, one-half grapefruit, or two tangerines supply three-fourths of the day's requirement of vitamin C.

'Always Some Way to Manage,' Say Capital Hostesses

Habitual Party-Givers Show Little Concern Over Rationing Problems

By Marie McNair

Rationing may come and rationing may go, but dinner parties in Washington will go on forever.

"We are rationed just like anybody else," she says, "but there is always something you can do about it. At first I was a bit bewildered, but then after thinking things out I found that it's not such a big problem, after all. We will have to plan a little more, and I have found there is always a substitute for the things which we will have to do without. For instance, the essential foods, like eggs, bread, milk, are not rationed. There is fish and chicken, and I never use canned food, anyway. I think perhaps there will be fewer parties, however, but right now I am not worried a bit."

Another answer to the question, "What to serve," may be found in rice. There are many ways to serve this dish as Mme. Hassan, wife of the Egyptian Minister, has learned. She offers platters of it topped with mounds of fricasee chicken.

Has Fun Trying To Work It Out

"It's fun working out the use of unrationed foods," says Mrs. Claude Pepper, wife of Senator Pepper, who knows the real meaning of "Southern hospitality." "You can make sport out of everything, and it's interesting to see just what ingenuity you have to call upon in these times."

Not given to large and elaborate parties at any time, Mildred Pepper nevertheless does like to gather in her friends now and then at the cocktail hour, and she and the Senator often entertain at informal buffet suppers. For instance Wednesday she invited a group to meet her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Snyder, who are visiting here from Deland Fla., and Lieut. and Mrs. Rainey Cawthon of Tallahassee, Fla. Lieutenant Cawthon is stationed in Washington and his wife has come up to be with him for a few days' stay.

What was served with the cocktails? Well, there were trays of delicious crisp, fresh vegetables—iced carrots cut pencil slim and snowy white cauliflower flowerlets to be dipped in Russian dressing. There were bowls of fluffy cottage cheese seasoned with a bit of onion and nonrationed potato chips on the side to spoon it up with. And there were tiny sandwiches of cream cheese, with an added spicy flavor. So—the food was plentiful and healthful and no precious little red or blue stamps had to be used.

Spaghetti Will Help Ration Problem

"Use more spaghetti and fish and chicken," says Mrs. William P. MacCracken, who loves nothing better than to have her friends in for a Sunday luncheon or a cocktail. "I think we will have to get along as best we can with nonrationed foods and there are all sorts of ways to manage." You know, a pound of round steak ground will go a long way in spaghetti and should serve about 15 guests. There is more planning to be done, to be sure, but I went a week without butter, without even any shortening. We ate gravy and put jam on our toast. I may not be very good in the kitchen myself, but I know how things can be done and I'm awfully good at telling others how to do them. And—just wait till I get my garden planted. It's all laid off now and we're waiting for the fertilizer before we can go ahead."

And speaking of gardens, Mrs. William S. Culbertson's rationing problems are solved by her farm at Charmian in the Blue Ridge Mountains, which she can call upon for a steady supply of fresh vegetables, new-laid eggs and much of her meat.

And—so the rationing question is perhaps best summed up by Ridgewell, who looks like an ambassador and who caters for ambassadors. "We will be eating fish and chicken and paying more for them."

Mrs. D. W. Clark Off to Tulsa On Brief Visit

Mrs. D. Worth Clark, wife of Senator Clark of Idaho, will leave today for Tulsa, Okla., where she will visit her mother, Mrs. N. E. Irwin, for a couple of weeks.

Accompanying Mrs. Clark will be her 6-year-old daughter, Dorothy. En route to Oklahoma, Mrs. Clark will stop off in St. Louis, Mo., where she will join Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, and together they will go on to Columbia, Mo., where Mrs. Bennett Clark will visit her son, Champ, at the University of Missouri, and Mrs. Worth Clark will visit he. niece, Miss Betty Jean Daily, daughter of R. B. Daily of Muldrow, Okla.

On her way bac from Tulsa, Mrs. D. Worth Clark will stop in Woodward, Okla., for a visit with Mrs. Philip Ferguson, whose husband, a former representative from Oklahoma, is now a captain in the Marine Corps. At present Captain Ferguson is on duty in the Southwest Pacific area.

Plans Complete For Tour of Georgetown

Rare tapestries, historic paintings, old silver, family heirlooms, museum pieces and collections from the four corners of the world are among the treasures to be seen in the 26 old Georgetown houses to be open for the annual tour on Friday and Saturday, April 16 and 17, from 2 to 7 p. m. Sponsored by St. John's Episcopal Church in Georgetown, proceeds will go to its social welfare department.

With an eye to gas and tire problems, Mrs. Oliver McKee, jr., tour chairman, has arranged for houses in the same neighborhoods to be shown on each day, most of them within walking distance of each other.

On Friday the following houses will be open: Dumbarton Oaks, 3101 R Street, through the courtesy of Harvard University, and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, its former chatelaine, will be one of the hostesses there; Capt. and Mrs. Walter Gubelman, 3210 R Street; Mr. and Mrs. William B. Poland, 1675 Thirty-first Street; Mr. and Mrs. Slocum Kingsbury, 1530 Thirtieth Street; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Feis, 1529 Twenty-ninth Street; Mr. and Mrs. Peter Belin, 1607 Twenty-eighth Street; the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Dean G. Acheson, 2805 P Street; Mr. and Mrs. Ray Atherton, 3017 O Street; Miss Rose Greely, 3131 O Street; Senator and Mrs. Hery Cabot Lodge, 3130 P Street, and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dewey, 3132 P Street.

For the Saturday tour the following houses will be open:

Mr. and Mrs. Wilmarth Lewis, 2726 N Street; Capt. and Mrs. William E. Doeller, 1314 Twenty-eighth Street; Mr. and Mrs. John Walker, 2806 N Street; Mr. and Mrs. Averell Clark, 2812 N Street; Mrs. Franklin Mott Gunther, 2821 N Street; Capt. and Mrs. Charles Adams Baker, 1228 Thirtieth Street; Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Henry Leonard, 3028 N Street; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Blaisdell, 1231 Thirty-first Street; Mr. and Mrs. Francis Spalding, 3040 Dumbarton Avenue; Representative and Mrs. Richard B. Wigglesworth, 3257 N Street; Representative and Mrs. James W. Wadsworth, 3263 N Street; Mr. and Mrs. Macgill James, 3310 N Street; Mrs. John Boit, 1318 Thirty-fourth Street, and Judge and Mrs. John M. Sternhagen, 3328 O Street.

Tickets may be secured at the gate of any one of the houses on each day of the tour.

Miss Beale Elected To Phi Beta Kappa

Miss Lathrop Vickery Beale, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Beale, has been elected a member of the Randolph-Macon Woman's College chapter of Phi Beta Kappa and will be among those at the initiation ceremonies to be held April 14 at the college. The chapter at Randolph-Macon was established a quarter of a century ago, the first granted to a woman's college in the South.

Bureau of Supplies Officer Says Her Job 'Most Interesting in the Navy'

Former Buyer Finds Business Training Valuable

By Martha Rhyne

Quicker than it takes to say "United States Naval Reserve," Lieut. (j. g.) Vida Buist, senior officer of Women's Reserve in the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts of the Navy, will tell you positively that her job is the "most interesting in the Navy."

Hers is what she deems a real job, the business end of the Navy. "Here a woman can't have too much capacity," she said. "A woman with business experience can work effectively in either the purchasing or subsistence divisions or in many other phases of the vast Bureau of Supplies and Accounts. A girl with the education and experience of a research chemist works on food for the Navy. A girl with legal background reviews contracts. A girl with journalistic background works on reports and public relations."

Lieutenant Buist was graduated from the first class of officers in the Women's Reserve at Northampton, an "emergency" class which was needed immediately to organize and pioneer for women officers in the Navy. She went to Northampton in September of 1942 and was through the course and ready to go on duty around the 1st of October of that year. She came immediately to Washington to take her present job.

'Offers Women Wide Opportunity'

"The Bureau of Supplies and Accounts," she pointed out, "is one of the largest fields in the Navy where women can replace men officers for shore work. So important are these supply officers that the women officer candidates go right through the special classes which are held for supply officers at Harvard, along with the men being trained for the Supply Corps.

"The Navy offers women a wonderful opportunity to be of service at this time," she went on. "A woman with any kind of merchandising, executive, or administrative experience can find her niche in the war effort. Officers and enlisted personnel have definite 'jobs with a purpose.' Enlisted personnel keep accounts and records, work at clerical jobs, and learn, through the regular Navy 'storekeeper' training." (This has been one of the most interesting jobs of enlisted Navy personnel for some years. The girls are given the same training as men in this capacity except for the "afloat" phase.)

LIEUT. (J. g.) VIDA BUIST, U. S. N. R.

Speaking of women with business backgrounds, Lieutenant Buist mentioned the need for certain prerequisites. Of these, she has more than a normal share. Born in Milford, Pa., she attended schools there and in Morristown, N. J., and New York City. She was graduated from Simmons College in Boston with a major in secretarial science. Here she mentined that it is at nearby Radcliffe College in Boston that the women supply officers who study at Harvard are housed.

Had Ten Years In Business World

Ten years of buying for Macy's and Altman's gave her more background. Prior to entering the Navy, she was active in the British War Relief emblem drive and in 1942 she was chairman of the emblem committee of the Navy Relief Society.

Lieutenant Buist must have been just the person Mainbocher of New York had in mind when the WAVES' uniforms were designed. Tall, stately and handsome, she has a clear skin and prematurely gray hair, enhancingly framed with the Navy's own blue.

She gaily reminisced of the day she went to be interviewed for service in the Navy. On that day she went into the procurement office in New York and faced what she called one of the most "formidable" scenes of her life. Confronting her was an almost empty room with desks lined in "V" shape. There sat her interviewers, eyes and ears focused on a chair in the middle of the room, which made one feel, as Lieutenant Buist expressed it, "on the witness stand." There, she said, was the opportunity of a lifetime. They bade her "talk" of herself—and she had an audience which was bound to listen.

This Colonel Will Be Equipped—For War With Hand-Knit Items

Mrs. W. C. Strand Now Finishing Final Pair of Socks; Victory Garden Also Taking Her Time

By Elizabeth Henney

It's a one-man army she's knitting for these days—her man. And so, when Col. W. C. Strand goes off to war sometime in the near future, he's going to be fully equipped with hand-knit socks and sweaters that really fit. Mrs. Strand will see to that. At the moment she is working on two pairs of socks at once—plus a victory garden.

For the past few weeks Colonel and Mrs. Strand have been in Washington, or rather in Arlington, Va., where they have been staying at the home of Mrs. Strand's parents, Col. and Mrs. Edwin M. Sumner. Until recently Colonel Strand has been stationed at Fort Jackson, Columbia, S. C. Since he expects to be off for parts unknown in the very near future, Mrs. Strand and their son, Johnny, are busy getting settled with the family for the duration.

3-Year-Old Scorns All 'Kid-Stuff'

Johnny, incidentally, who will be 3 years old on July 18, is very much interested in the progress of the victory garden and does his share of raking and hoeing with vigor, if without much practical effect.

Hoping to save some of the garden from the devastation of a misdirected hoe, the family tried to give Johnny a plot all his own and persuade him to stick to that. He, however, scorns such "kid stuff" and insists on contributing his share to the family plot.

Colonel Strand hoped fondly for some months after Johnny's arrival in this world that he would be able to groom him some day for West Point and an Army career. But ever since Johnny turned 2, his preoccupation with pipes and wires in the household has led the family to resign themselves to raising a plumber or electrician.

Is the Former Dorothy Sumner

These days Mrs. Strand's days are especially full. For this energetic auburn-haired, blue-eyed young woman, who was most popular in Washington a few seasons ago as Miss Dorothy Sumner, is now filling the job of chatelaine of the Summer household.

Mrs. Sumner has, for the past few weeks, been in Vallejo, Calif., visiting their other daughter, Mrs. Lawrence D. Julihn, the former Sally Sumner. Lieutenant Julihn of the Navy is now on submarine duty somewhere in the Pacific. Mrs. Sumner expects to return to town about the middle of April. Colonel Sumner is editor of the Cavalry Journal here.

Farewell Fete Held For the Chalkleys

The many friends of Sir Owen Chalkley, retiring Commercial Counselor of the British Embassy, and Lady Chalkley, who have spent a number of years in Washington, said farewell to them yesterday at the tea given by his successor at the Embassy, J. H. Magowan, and Mrs. Magowan at their home on Cleveland Avenue. Sir Owen, retiring from the diplomatic service because of ill health, will leave with Lady Chalkley shortly to return to England.

Zoe McFadden, WAVE, to Wed T. C. Parrott

Announcement has been made of the engagement and approaching marriage of Miss Zoe McFadden, Ensign, U. S. N. R., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh J. McFadden, of Dayton, Ohio, to Thomas Curtis Parrott of Charlotte, N. C., and Baltimore, Md.

Miss McFadden is a graduate of George Washington University, where she also attended law school, and is a member of Delta Zeta sorority. Since becoming an officer in the WAVES, she has an assignment in the Navy Department in Washington.

Mr. Parrott received his A.B. degree from Erskine College and LL.B. from Southeastern University, and is presently a consultant with the Social Security Board.

The wedding will take place in May.

Charles Sargent, Jr., Will Marry Colonel's Daughter

Col. Leonard Sullivan, of the Army Reserve, and Mrs. Sullivan, of Cedarhurst, Long Island, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marjorie Sullivan, to Charles Sprague Sargent, jr., of New York and Cedarhurst. The wedding will take place in the chantry of St. Thomas Church on Saturday, April 10.

Miss Sullivan is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Arthur T. Sullivan, of this city, and a niece of Miss Florence S. Sullivan, of 31 East Sixty-sixth Street. She attended the Lawrence School, Rowlett, and since her debut in 1936, at the Cosmopolitan Club, she has been in the Red Cross as a nurses' aid.

Mr. Sargent is a graduate of St. Mark's School and of Harvard University, class of '35, where he was a member of both the Hasty-Pudding-Institute of 1770 and the Spee Club. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Sargent, of 60 Park Avenue, and a grandson of Mrs. James W. Markoe, of this city, and the late Prof. and Mrs. Charles S. Sargent of Brookline, Mass.

Panama Envoy Soon to Leave For Home

Ernesto Jaen Guardia, Ambassador of Panama, and Senora de Jaen Guardia will soon be saying farewell to their Washington friends and heading back to Panama. Because of the Ambassador's ill health he feels it will be impossible for him to continue with his duties here and is looking forward to a long rest at home.

Already there is talk of his probable successor and in "well-informed circles" the choice seems to rest on Belisario Porras, jr., now Panama Minister to Cuba and the Dominican Republic and onetime Minister to Portugal, Spain and Ecuador.

Should Senor Porras receive the appointment it will preserve the ties with the Jaen Guardia family here for Senora de Porras and Senora de Jaen Guardia are sisters. The third sister in the family is Senora de Boyd, wife of Augusto Boyd, former Panama Ambassador to the United States.

Senor Porras is the son of the late Dr. Belisario Porras, who was Minister to Washington on two occasions, first in 1911 and again from 1916 to 1918. He also served three terms as his country's President and was affectionately known as "the grand old man of Panamanian politics."

Porras, the younger, is an able diplomat, and has a young son about 12 years of age to follow in his father's footsteps.

Miss King and Her Sister, Mrs. Wells, Fete Recent Bride

Miss Martha King and her sister, Mrs. Stanley V. Wells, will entertain tomorrow afternoon at a tea at the former's home at 4601 Hawthorne Lane.

The event is in honor of Mrs. George A. Young, jr., whose wedding took place recently at St. Rita's Church in Alexandria. Mrs. Young is the former Miss Mary Catherine Handran, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. Handran of Watkins Glen, N. Y.

Mr. Young, who was just recently been inducted into the Army, is now in training with the Army Air Forces at Keesler Field, Miss. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Young, and for some years made his home in Georgetown with his aunts, Miss Kathryn Young and Miss Elizabeth Young.

For the duration Mrs. Young is making her home here with Major and Mrs. Maurice Hiller at 1703 Russell Road, Alexandria.

Assisting the hostesses during the afternoon will be Mrs. Joseph Thomas King, jr., Mrs. Maurice Hiller and Miss Frances Archambault.

To Live Here

Harold R. Hunt, who lived in Washington several years ago and left here to go to Huntington, W. Va., has returned to Washington. Mr. Hunt is a pioneer teacher of Baha'i, was an active member of the Huntington Humane Association and in volunteer social work.

Helen McDonald To Be June Bride

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McDonald announce the engagement of their daughter, Helen, to Midshipman Jack Elzey Tingle U. S. N., son of Lieut. Col. Jack K. Tingle, U. S. A., and Mrs. Roland F. Clark of Portland, Me.

Miss McDonald was graduated from George Washington University, where she is now an instructor in the School of Pharmacy. Midshipman Tingle will graduate from the United States Naval Academy in June. The wedding will take place shortly thereafter.

Legation Reception Fetes Minister to Nicaragua

James Stewart Is Guest of Honor at Reception Given by Minister and Senora de DeBayle

The first large party given by the Minister of Nicaragua and Senora de DeBayle since they moved into the new legation on New Hampshire Avenue several months ago, was held yesterday afternoon with James Stewart, American Minister to Nicaragua, as guest of honor. Mr. Stewart arrived in Washington a few days ago on leave and is returning soon to his post.

By coincidence, the party also served as background for an informal unveiling ceremony of Senora de DeBayle's portrait, painted by George Quaintance The painting arrived at the legation on Thursday and was the center of much favorable attention at the fete.

Senora de DeBayle, incidentally, is a subject lovely enough for any artist to yearn to paint. The Quaintance portrait shows her seated on a love seat and wearing an exquisite white lace gown which flares into graceful folds at her feet and is set off with long lace mitts.

Mrs. Henry Wallace, wife of the Vice President, was among the guests yesterday and others were Senora de Espil, wife of the Argentine Ambassador, and Senora de Espil; the Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun, the Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de Castillo Najera, Mme. Martins, wife of the Brazilian Ambassador; the Peruvian Ambassador, Don Manuel de Freyre; Senora de Michels, wife of the Chilean Ambassador; the Ambassador of Panama and Senora de Jean Guardia, the Bolivian Ambassador and Senora de Guachalla.

Also Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Yugoslav Ambassador; the Portuguese Minister and Mme de Bianchi, Mrs. Ralph W. Close, wife of the Minister of South Africa, and the Minister of El Salvador and Senora de Castro. The Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos were there, and among others were Mme. Hurban, wife of the Minister of Czechoslovakia; the Minister of Honduras and Senora de Caceres, the retiring Minister of Costa Rica and Senora de Fernandez, saying their last goodbys.

Senora de Echegaray, wife of the Agricultural Attache of the Spanish Embassy, was in the gathering, and others were Mr. and Mrs. Tom Burke, Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, the Dominican Minister and Senora de Troncoso and Dr. Nestor M. Campos Ros, First Secretary o fthe Paraguay Embassy.

Bonds Stocks To Be Minister In Anacostia

Leaders of the Anacostia Church of Christ have announced the appointment of Mr. Bonds Stocks of Baldwyn, Miss., as minister.

Mr. Stocks, who resigned his position as secretary to Representative John Rankin of Mississippi to accept the post, assumed his new duties on April 1, and will preach his initial sermons tomorrow. His first sermon will be preached at 11:20 a. m., and his topic will be "I Am Determined." At 5 p. m. he will speak on the subject "Opportunity and Opposition." Bible study classes will convene at 10:45 a. m.

The Anacostia Church of Christ, which is temporarily meeting in the Masonic Temple at Fourteenth and U Streets Southeast, was started as a mission work in October, 1941. Mr. Stocks will be the congregation's first full time minister. Leaders have announced that the church plans to purchase or build a suitable church edifice in the Southeast section of Washington in the near future.

Born at Baldwyn, Miss., June 9, 1913, Mr. Stocks was graduated from the Baldwyn High School in 1931. He attended the College of Mines and Metallurgy at El Paso, Tex., and Freed-Hardeman College at Henderson, Tenn. In 1933 and 1934 he served as editor of the Baldwyn (Miss.) Home Journal. He came to Washington in 1934 and entered the Government service. In January 1936 he was appointed as secretary to Congressman Rankin and has served in that position ever since. Under the sponsorship of various congregations of the Church of Christ in Washington he has preached at missions in the East during the nine years he has been here. In 1940 he took a leading part in the establishment of a congregation of the Church of Christ at Arlington, Va. He served as acting minister of the Arlington church from July 1, 1942, to January 1, 1943. He is a staff writer for the National Christian, a religious periodical published at Dallas, Tex.

Jett to Officiate At Confirmation

The Right Rev. Robert Carter Jett, D. D., acting for the Bishop of Washington, will administer the Apostolic Rite of Confirmation in St. John's Church, Lafayette Square, tomorrow at 11 a. m. The Holy Communion will be celebrated immediately following the confirmation service at which time the newly confirmed class will make its first communion. Bishop Jett, who is the retired Bishop of Southwestern Virginia, will be the preacher.

Other services for the day will be 8 a. m., Holy Communion; 9:30 a. m., Sunday School and Adult Bible Classes; 4 p. m., service in French, the Rev. Andre P. Liotard, preacher; and 8 p. m., Evening Prayer, the Rev. Howard A. Johnson, preacher.

Mr. McGlothlen To Talk at 8 P. M.

The Rev. Gaye L. McGlothlen, secretary of Christian Education of District of Columbia Baptist Convention, will preach at the special evangelistic service tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the Chevy Chase Baptist Church. Harold S. King, conference song leader, will direct the song service.

At the service at 11 a. m. the ordinance of The Lord's Supper will be observed. The Rev. Edward O. Clark will give the communion meditation based on Isiah 53, entitled, "He Poured Out His Life Blood." The nursery for small children is conducted during the worship service.

Transfiguration

Service Flag To Honor 78 In Forces

Members of Transfiguration Episcopal Church, 1415 Gallatin Street Northwest, will gather tomorrow at 11 a. m. to present and dedicate a service banner for their 78 men in our armed forces.

The flag has been donated by Dr. Weldon A. Price.

The Rev. J. J. Queally, rector, will preach on "Self-Dedication" at the special service. The senior choir will sing. Other services tomorrow will be at 8 a. m. and 7:30 p. m., with the junior and intermediate choirs singing.

Annual K. C. Mass Set Tomorrow

The Rev. John S. Spence will deliver the sermon at the annual Communion Mass for deceased members of the order of the Knights of Columbus and for members of the armed forces which will be said at St. Matthew's Cathedral tomorrow at 8 a. m. Sir Knights of the fourth degree of the order will act as guard of honor during the mass.

A breakfast will follow at the Mayflower Hotel at which the principal speaker will be Representative Edward Hart of New Jersey. Roy M. Perry will preside and will be introduced by Francis J. Malloy, vice chairman of the District of Columbia Chapter, Knights of Columbus.

Methodists Set Assembly for June 25 to 27

The Methodist Young Adults of the Baltimore Conference will hold their annual weekend assembly, June 25 to 27, at Westminster, Md., it was announced yesterday.

Boris Shiskin, an economist with the American Federation of Labor in Washington, D. C., will be one of the leaders of the assembly, and will have as his subject, "Labor Looks at Christianity."

The assembly will be under the direction of Walter A. Graham of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church. He has been conference director of Young Adults since their organization in the Baltimore Conference in 1940. The organization has grown steadily since that time, forming new groups in churches all through the conference. The weekend assembly at Westminster has been the highlight of each year for Young Adults.

21st Radio Rally Slated Tonight

Evangelist Delbert Grant will show colored films of the Alcan Highway and address the twenty-first Christian Youth and Servicemen's Radio Rally tonight at Almas Temple, 1315 K Street Northwest.

Free suppers again will be served to the men of the armed forces by the Christian Business Girls Association. Station WOL will carry the broadcast at 8 o'clock direct from the Temple. Glenn Wagner, president of the Washington Bible Institute, is the director of the program.

Senior Sodality Sponsors Passion Play

Members of the Senior Sodality of Holy Redeemer Catholic Church are shown in their roles in the Passion Play which they recently presented. A number of request performances are now being planned. The Rev. L. T. Conney, S. J., pastor; and the Rev. E. J. Norton, S. J., assistant, are shown on the stage with the cast. The church is at New York and New Jersey Avenues Northwest

Clergy and Laymen Indorse Good Friday Plans

Indorsement of plans for a general three hours observance of Good Friday on April 23 came yesterday from clergy and laymen of Catholic and Protestant faiths.

This movement, supported and promoted by religious, fraternal, civic, business and service organizations and prominent individuals of many denominations and in all walks of life, was inaugurated here three years ago to bring about city-wide Three Hours Observance of Good Friday in the Nation's Capital. The purpose is to secure the voluntary cooperation of Washington business firms in granting their employes from noon to 3 p. m. on Good Friday, a period for prayer and worship in commemoration of Our Lord's sacrifice on the Cross.

Nearly 50 civic groups, some represented in the Federation of Citizens Associations are among the organizations which have indorsed the movement and have offered their services in promoting the Good Friday observance.

The indorsements follow:

The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington:

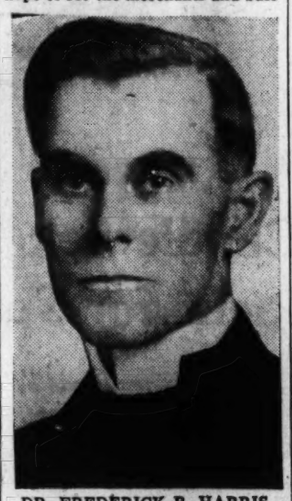
"The world needs Our Blessed Lord and Saviour today more than ever. It always needed Him, but today it needs Him more precisely because men have forgotten Him and are trying to get along without Him—hence the troubles in our war-torn world. I hope that millions of our people throughout this country will come together between the hours of 12 and 3 on Good Friday, April 23, to think of the sufferings of the Victim of Calvary and the 'why' of those sufferings. It will bring our people closer to the suffering Christ and bring our world closer to peace with justice and charity for which all of us are praying at this moment."

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopal Bishop of Washington:

"Certainly we need to turn away from the things of the world on this Holy Day and to stand reverently before the Cross with its uplifted Saviour."

Edward M. Curran, District Attorney:

"I very heartily indorse such a religious movement and I sincerely hope to see the merchants and business join in its observance. It would seem especially fitting in this time of world turmoil and distress to turn our thoughts to our Redeemer for guidance in our human affairs."



DR. FREDERICK B. HARRIS, general chairman of committee on Good Friday Three Hours' Observance

Daniel C. Roper, former Secretary of Commerce:

"I am deeply interested in the objectives of the committee. The successful defense of this Nation and its objectives depends upon the quickening of the appreciation of the spiritual forces among our people."

Leo A. Rover, former District Attorney:

"I believe that now more than at any other time during my lifetime, we owe it to our country to keep vividly before our fellow citizens the beneficial lessons to be learned from a serious study and contemplation of the life and death of Christ and certainly the observance of each Good Friday in the manner indicated will to some extent at least accomplish this highly desirable aim."

Bishop A. W. Leonard, Methodist Resident Bishop:

"I sincerely hope that this day may mean much to the Christian people of Washington and that we may all unite in an appropriate recognition of the significance of Good Friday."

William Green, president of American Federation of Labor:

"I esteem it a privilege and a pleasure to cooperate fully in the proper observance of Good Friday."

Philip Murray, president of Congress of Industrial Organizations:

"I will be most pleased to cooperate with you in the matter of Good Friday observance. I have always tried to carry this out before, and feel that this is necessary."

Southeast Churches Hear Dr. W. L. Darby

Spiritual priorities are as necessary today as material priorities, Dr. William L. Darby, president of the Washington City Bible Society, said yesterday at Southeast churches' Lenten services at the Penn Theater, 650 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast.

"We are faced constantly during these days with the necessity of observing priorities set by the Government," said the speaker. "Do we give sufficient consideration to religious priorities? They have their place and value for every Christian, and the Lenten period is the time for us to examine ourselves to see whether we really are putting first things first in our lives."

The five "spiritual priorities," he said, are:

"That the Bible is the greatest book in the world and should have first place in our reading. That Jesus Christ is the noblest personality in history and should have first place in our loyalties. That the Christian way of life is the best humanity knows, and since we have tried many others without much success this way should have first place in our planning for a better world

"That the church is man's finest fellowship and should have first place among organizations with which we are connected. That the Kingdom of God is man's worthiest ideal, and should have first place among the gods for which mankind is striving."

Lecture Tomorrow On Christian Science

A free lecture on Christian Science entitled "Christian Science: Its Revelation of the Unknown God" will be delivered in Constitution Hall, Eighteenth, C and D Streets Northwest, tomorrow at 3 p. m. by John Randall Dunn, C. S. B., of Boston, Mass. Mr. Dunn is a member of the Board of Lectureship of the Mother Church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist in Boston, Mass. The lecture is under the auspices of the five Churches of Christ, Scientist and the Christian Science Society in Washington.

Suburban Steeple

For the first time in the memory of the oldest inhabitant, the Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian and Christ Episcopal congregations of historic Alexandria, Va., will unite in daily noonday services during Holy Week at Christ Church, of which the Rev. Edward Randolph Welles is rector. Prominent Washington clergymen will be among the guest speakers.

While the services are open to all people of the community, they are being arranged especially for active businessmen and women, and will be limited to a half hour in length.

The committee in charge of the project includes Mr. Welles, the Rev. Fred V. Poag, president of the Alexandria Ministerial Association and pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church; the Rev. Ernest F. Campbell, pastor of the First Baptist Church, and the Rev. Hawes P. Clark, pastor of the Washington Street Methodist Church.

According to Mr. Welles, the Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church and Bishop of Virginia, has given his written permission, under the provisions of Canon 24 of the canon laws of the Episcopal Church, for the ministers of other communions to preach in Christ Church where George Washington was a vestryman.

The guest preachers follow:

April 19, Dr. Clarence W. Cranford of Calvary Baptist Church, Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder of Reformation Lutheran Church, and Washington Federation of Churches' president; April 21, Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church; April 22, Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church and federation vice president, and Good Friday—three hours' service—conducted by the Right Rev. Walter H. Gray, D. D., Suffragan Bishop of Connecticut.

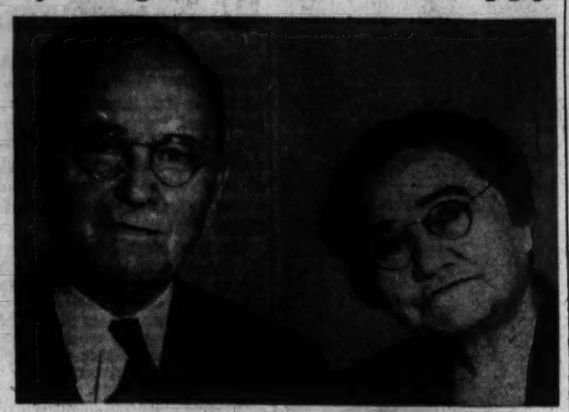
Two Couples Married 50 Years Say Religion Made Them Happy



Two church-going couples now celebrating golden wedding anniversaries thank religion for their bliss. They are (above) Mr. and Mrs. Homer Smith, 606 Longfellow Street Northwest, members of Brightwood Park Methodist Church, and (below) Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bateman of Tilden Hall, members of St. Paul's Lutheran Church

Religion is the answer to their married bliss, say two prominent church-going couples now celebrating golden wedding anniversaries.

They are Mr. and Mrs. Homer Smith of 606 Longfellow Street Northwest, members of Brightwood Park Methodist Church, Eighth and Jefferson Streets Northwest, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bateman of 3945 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, members of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Connecticut Avenue and Everett Street Northwest.

The Smiths, who were the second and third persons to join the Brightwood congregation back in 1900, have been active in church work many years, and originally came from Iowa. Their family rendered them a golden wedding anniversary dinner Thursday—the official date—at the Hayden Farm on Georgia Avenue.

The Batemans, who live at Tilden Hall, have been members of St. Paul's for 45 years, and are dyed-in-the-wool Christian Endeavorers, having been interested in that movement in their early youth in Martinsburg, W. Va. The St. Paul's congregation, led by Dr. Henry W. Snyder, will tender them a reception Tuesday at 8 p. m.

Mr. Gabler to Speak

The Rev. Edward Gabler, rector of Christ Church, will speak at the Lenten service tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the Ascension Episcopal Church There will be Holy Communion at 8 a. m. and 11 a. m. and a sermon at 11 a. m. by Canon Wolven.

Accent on Youth

Dr. Samuel Miller to Open Bible Conference Tomorrow

All Young People Of Lutheran Church Here Are Invited

A Bible Conference conducted by the Rev. Dr. Samuel Miller, dean of the Lutheran Bible Institute of Minneapolis, will begin tomorrow at the Augustana Lutheran Church and will continue until Thursday evening. It is sponsored by the Luther League and invitations have gone out to the young people of all the Lutheran churches of Washington to participate.

The Epistle to the Romans will be the basis of the various messages by Dr. Miller. At the morning worship service tomorrow he will preach on "The Power of God" and in the evening at 7:30 his sermon theme will be "What Is the Matter With the World?" These messages will be based on chapters 1 and 2. Monday evening at 8 o'clock the lecture theme will be "God's Remedy" as set forth in chapters 3 and 4; Tuesday evening, "The Results of the Remedy," chapter 5; Wednesday evening, "Walking in Newness of Life," chapter 6, and Thursday evening, "Led by the Spirit of God," chapter 8. The public is invited to all services and sessions of the conference.

Dr. Miller has been the head of the Lutheran Bible Institute of Minneapolis for 24 years, except for a four-year period during which he served as pastor of the largest Augustana Synod church in America, the First Lutheran Church of Jamestown, N. Y. He has conducted Bible conferences in all parts of the United States and Canada, and he was the specially invited Bible teachers a few years ago at a series of missionary conventions in China.

All organization meetings in the Augustana Church will be canceled next week in favor of the Bible Conference. The Fireside Hour tomorrow evening at 6 will be held as usual, however, and the public is invited.

DR. SAMUEL MILLER

The Youth Fellowship of the Asbury Methodist Church, Eleventh and K Streets Northwest, wishes to announce its round table discussion on April 4 at 6:30 p. m. The topic for discussion will be "The Negro in Business."

The leaders of the discussion will be Mr. Jesse Lewis, department of commerce and finance of Howard University, Mr. Harold Jordan, cashier of the Industrial Bank, Mrs. Charlotte Pole of the OPA, and Miss F. Pinkett of J. R. Pinkett & Co. An invitation is extended to all.

Va. Professor To Give Sermon At Cathedral

The Rev. Dr. Stanley Brown-Serman, professor of New Testament language and literature at Virginia Theological Seminary in Alexandria, will preach at the 4 o'colck evensong service in Washington Cathedral tomorrow as the third of four members of the seminary faculty scheduled to preach in the cathedral on Sunday afternoons during Lent.

A graduate of Columbia University; Keble College, Oxford, and the General Theological Seminary in New York, Dr. Brown-Serman was formerly rector at Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., and Nyack, N. Y. He also served as warden of the New York Training School for Deaconesses and is the joint author with Canon Prichard of "What Did Jesus Think?"

The canon chancellor of the cathedral, the Rev. Charles W. F. Smith, will preach at the 11 o'clock service of Holy Communion tomorrow and again at the 8 o'clock evening service in the Crossing of the cathedral. The latter will be the fourth of a special series of Lenten services featuring congregational singing led by members of the Cathedral Choral Society and the National Cathedral School for Girls.

Immediately following the 4 o'clock evensong service Corpl. Charles Henderson, former organist and choirmaster of the Church of St. Mary the Virgin in New York, will play a recital on the great organ of the cathedral. Corpl. Henderson, who is stationed at Walter Reed Hospital, will play a diversified program including the works of Du Mage, Fiocco, Martini, Langlais, Brahms and Bach.

War-Inspired Hymn to Be Sung

"Anchored by the Grace of God," a selection composed by R. Deane Shure, director of music at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, will be sung there by the Sanctuary Choir tomorrow at 11 a. m., marking the first time it has been rendered locally. It had its premiere last Sunday at the Naval Academy.

The composition was written from a story told by Chaplain William N. Thomas of the Naval Academy of an Academy officer who, commanding a destroyer during the Battle of the Solomons, steered between a double line of enemy ships, inflicting heavy damage on them. When his own battle-scarred destroyer finally reached port, he entered the following in his log: "Anchored by the Grace of God."

Dr. Hart to Give Third of Reviews

The Rev. Dr. Charles A. Hart, assistant professor of philosophy at the Catholic University of America and founder and moderator of the Washington Catholic Evidence Guild will give the third in the winter series of reviews at the Critics' Forum—Catholic Thought on the "Best Sellers" at the Mayflower Hotel on Wednesday at 8:30 p. m.

Dr. Hart will give a critical analysis of Lloyd Douglas' latest best-seller, "The Robe," an historical novel. Mr. Douglas, author of "Disputed Passage" and "The Magnificent Obsession."

Quiz Celebration on WWDC

Beginning the third year of radio's original Bible quiz, a special anniversary broadcast has been planned for tonight at 9 o'clock over Station WWDC.

Highest scoring contestants of the first quarter of 1943 will be featured in a contest which will complete the preparation for the big annual event which is scheduled for one month later, when the stars of the year will meet for a final contest to determine who will be the "best quizee" of the year.

Evangelist Dale Crowley will be master of ceremonies. Mr. Crowley is heard daily over that station at 6:45 a. m. in morning twilight devotions.

Church to Honor Three Servicemen

There will be a special service in honor of three servicemen of the West Washington Baptist Church, Thirty-first and N Streets Northwest, tomorrow at 11 a. m. Their names will be placed on the honor roll and their stars on the service flag. The Rev. Charles B. Austin will speak on "How to Live" at the morning service, and his topic at the 8 p. m. service will be "How to Be Happy."

The three men to be honored are Elsemere L. Dunn, Norris W. Musgrove, and Joe D. Rounsaville. The church now has 35 men in the service.

T. F. Woodlock Awarded Medal By Notre Dame

Thomas F. Woodlock, distinguished New York author and editor of the Wall Street Journal, was announced yesterday as recipient of the Laetare Medal, awarded annually since 1883 by the University of Notre Dame to an outstanding Catholic layman in the United States.

The Rev. Hugh O'Donnell, C. S. C., president of the university, in announcing the selection of the sixty-first medalist, said:

"Notre Dame honors Mr. Woodlock as one of the most vigorous and effective apologists among the Catholic laity of America over a long period of years. Moreover, this same ability and integrity have characterized his work with the Wall Street Journal and with the Interstate Commerce Commission, bringing high principle and excellent example into the heart of the business and economic life of this country.

"In recent years, the facile pen of Mr. Woodlock has broadened its scope and permitted the entire Nation to enjoy the fruits of his fine mind. He has attacked the problems of our day with clarity and a fortitude which have won for him preeminence as an apostle of truth."

Thomas Woodlock's most recent outstanding contribution is his book, "The Catholic Pattern," acclaimed by all Catholics as a brilliant contribution to the advancement of the church in America, for Catholics as well as for others interested. Articles in the Commonweal, Columbia and other periodicals, and addresses at various Catholic assemblies have made Mr. Woodlock a well-known champion.

Woodlock served in public life on the Interstate Commerce Commission in 1925. Most of his career has been identified with the Wall Street Journal, which he joined in 1895.

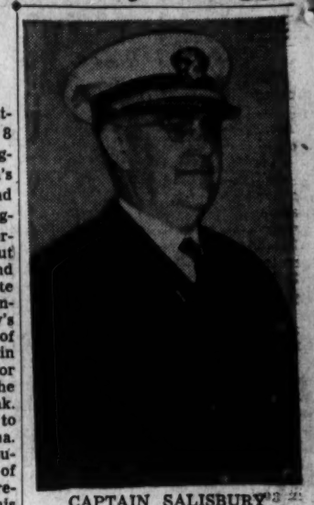
Covenant Church to Observe Resignation of Norway Clergy

Dr. Skard to Give Address at Service Sunday Evening

The service at the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church at 8 o'clock Sunday evening will recognize the anniversary of America's entrance into World War 1 and the first anniversary of the resignation of the 1100 clergy in Norway. Quisling's attempt to put the education of children and youth under the care of the state instead of the church was responsible for the Norwegian clergy's decision. Dr. Skard, a member of the Royal Academy of Sciences in Tronheim and now consultant for the Scandinavian division of the Congressional Library, will speak. Invitations have been issued to Prince Olav and Princess Martha.

Captain Gwirvy has been deputized by the assistant Secretary of War, Robert Patterson, to represent him and speak for him at this service. Chaplain Rixey, for the Army, and Chaplain Salisbury, for the Navy, also will participate. The service will be conducted by Dr. Albert J. McCartney and Chaplain John Carruthers.

Dr. McCartney will celebrate the Sacrament of Holy Communion at the morning service.



CAPTAIN SALISBURY

Rev. H. P. Strack Is Guest Speaker

The Rev. Harry P. Strack, secretary of the National Spiritualist Association, will be the guest speaker at The Church of Two Worlds tomorrow evening at the Hotel Continental. His subject will be, "Spiritualism, a Natural Religion." Franklin Dressell, tenor, will be the soloist. At the midweek meeting on Wednesday evening there will be a lecture by the minister, followed by a message service.

The minister, the Rev. H. Gordon Burroughs, is in Philadelphia for a few days in connection with his work as missionary at large for the National Spiritualist Association.

Family Quartet to Sing At Park View Church

The Anderson family quartet will sing tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Park View Christian Church, 627 Park Road Northwest, where the father—the Rev. George M. Anderson, is pastor. George O. Anderson, a son who has recently received his A. B. degree from Transylvania University and who is about to begin training as a naval officer, will give a flute solo.

Dr. Sizoo Will Preach Here Twice

The special noonday preacher at the Church of the Epiphany on Monday and Tuesday will be the Rev. Joseph R. Sizoo, D. D., pastor of the Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas, New York City, and formerly pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church of this city.

On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday the noonday preacher will be the Rev. Peter Marshall, D. D., minister of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

Dr. Sizoo, who is well known to all in Washington, is one of the outstanding preachers of the country and the author of many books on religion. In years past he has preached at the Epiphany noonday services and always has attracted hundreds of people.

Dr. Marshall succeeded Dr. Sizoo as the minister of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church and before coming to Washington he attained a prominent place in the Southern Presbyterian Church and is in demand as a special preacher throughout the country. Dr. Marshall will also preach at the 5:30 p. m. service on Wednesday afternoon.

Dr. A. J. Stirewalt Talks Tomorrow In Georgetown

Dr. Arthur J. Stirewalt, returned missionary to Japan, will be the guest preacher tomorrow at 11 a. m. in Georgetown Lutheran Church, Rev. Harold E. Beatty, pastor.

DR. STIREWALT

Lutheran Union Lenten Service is scheduled Monday at 8 p. m. in Walter Reed Chapel, Walter Reed Hospital grounds. The preacher will be Chaplain Paul Dickman.

The Church Council will meet Tuesday at 8 p. m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed P. Souder, 1633 Wisconsin Avenue Northwest.

Lenten Service in this church will be held Wednesday at 8 p. m. The guest minister will be the Rev. John T. Keister of the Lutheran Board of American Missions.

'Fatal Mistake' Bible Talk Topic

"A Fatal Mistake That Will Send Millions to Hell," is the subject of a Bible lecture to be given by John Ford at Almas Temple, 1315 K Street Northwest, tomorrow at 8 p. m.

Some of the questions that will be discussed at this lecture are: Will God save a person who sincerely tries to do right but makes a mistake in what to believe? Will a person be saved who has faith in Christ but lives in sin? Can a person be saved as a result of keeping the law? Are the people who observe the law of God under a curse? If a person is saved by grace, is there any need of his keeping the law of God?

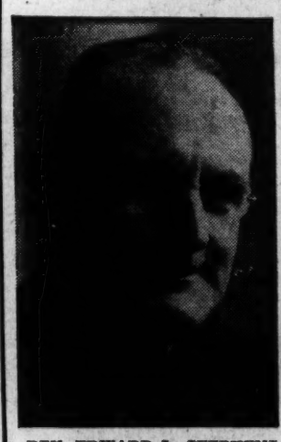
Mission in St. Mary's Church
ALEXANDRIA, VA.
OPENS SUNDAY, APRIL 4
Reverends Edward L. Stephens and Vernon J. Bowers to Conduct Special Catholic Services



REV. EDWARD L. STEPHENS

REV. VERNON J. BOWERS

The priests of St. Mary's Catholic Church, 310 S. Royal Street, Alexandria, Virginia, announce a Mission to be conducted by the Diocesan Missionary Fathers of Richmond, Virginia. Father Stephens has spent a great part of his life in Virginia parochial and missionary work, though his other duties have required his appearance in most of the cities of Eastern United States. He began his career as a lawyer before his ordination eighteen years ago in the Baltimore Cathedral by the Most Rev. Archbishop Michael J. Curley, D. D. Before he started studying for the priesthood he was for several years an attorney at law for which he prepared himself at Georgetown University. He was admitted to practice law before the bar in the State of Connecticut and the District of Columbia, and was admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court in 1934. Father Stephens completed his religious studies at Belmont Abbey, North Carolina. He was formerly Richmond diocesan director of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith and the Catholic Students Mission Crusade. He has been chairman of the diocesan commission for Religious Tolerance, director of the Rural Life Bureau of the Diocese of Richmond and was director for the Catholic boys in the CCC camps in the State of Virginia. He has filled charges in Clifton Forge, Va., and Keyser, W. Va., and while he was assistant pastor at the Blessed Sacrament Church in Norfolk, Va., was director of the Catholic Radio Hour of Norfolk and in charge of the Holy Name Society of the Tidewater District of Virginia. He has frequently broadcast on national networks, Church of the Air, Catholic Hour and Mutual Chapel Hour, and has been called upon to speak before nearly all the leading Eastern and Midwestern universities on religious and inter-faith programs. In 1937 he was named by Most Rev. Bishop Peter L. Ireton, D. D., to head the work of the Diocesan Missionary Fathers in conducting missions for religious and lay people. Another important work under his supervision is the use of the motor trailer chapel "St. Mary of the Highways," which is employed by the Fathers to make known the tenets of the Faith in rural areas.

During the mission at St. Mary's Church, Alexandria, Va., Father Stephens' associate will be the Reverend Vernon J. Bowers. Father Bowers received his early education at St. Mary's Parochial School, Phoebus, Va., and studied for the priesthood at St. Charles' College, Catonsville, Md., and St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore, Md. Father Bowers was ordained at St. Mary's, Old Point Comfort, Va., by Most Rev. Bishop Peter L. Ireton, D. D., in 1939. His immediate assignment was to assist the Diocesan Missionary Fathers in their trailer chapel work during the summer, later being temporarily assigned to St. Charles' Church, Arlington, Va. He continued to assist in the summer trailer work and in 1941 he was assigned permanently to the Diocesan Missionary Fathers. Father Bowers before his ordination enjoyed wide popularity as an athlete and is interested in training and directing boys activities in the South.

Father Stephens' and Father Bowers' topics of discussion during the mission will be: "Sin." "The Abuse of Divine Love." "Death and Judgment." "Divine Love Demands an Accounting." "The Use of Speech." "Love of God and Neighbor Expressed Vocally." "Confession of Sins." "Divine Love Reclaims the Sinner." "Marriage and the Christian Home." "Divine Love Creates and Teaches Through Mothers and Fathers." "The Holy Eucharist." "Divine Love Living Among Men." "The Blessed Virgin Mary." "The Mother of Divine Love Incarnate." The morning masses during the mission will be at 6:30 and 8:15 followed by a brief instruction. The evening services at 8 p. m. will include an instruction, sermon and Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. The general public is invited to attend these exercises.

Headed North, Circus Pays Fleeting Visit

Meat rationing threatens to bridge the gap now separating Gargantua, a strict vegetarian, and Toto, his intended bride, who dines on chicken and T-bon steaks.

For the first time since the two gorillas were introduced to each other back in 1940, they shared the same cage yesterday as the 42-car train hauling Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Combined Shows rolled into Potomac Yards en route to New York for a Madison Square Garden opening next week.

But still they were separated by chicken screen. Whether approaching inability to obtain more steaks will make Toto think more highly of Gargantua, and force her on a diet similar to his, remains to be seen. But circus people were free in expressing the opinion that some time this summer may see the two gorillas definitely together—an occurrence which will set a high mark in gorilla annals.

Toto's food problem is the only one worrying the circus officials. The 700 performers, roustabouts and musicians eat in the circus restaurant, and aren't worried unduly about rationing. The "cats" dine, as always, on unrationed horsemeat.

Alfred Court, the show's famed animal trainer, prefers horsemeat for his 20 lions, 12 tigers, 12 bears 15 leopards, 4 panthers and 2 black jaguars. Beef, he said, gives them tuberculosis if they dine on it continually.

The other animals—including 35 elephants and about 180 horses—dine on grain and hay and such.

First scheduled to arrive at 5 a. m., the circus train was delayed after leaving Richmond when a coupler went haywire, and arrived at 5:10 p. m., instead of 10 a. m.

Less than a dozen circus fans were on hand to greet the train. They included Dr. William Mann, director of the Zoo, who waited, camera in hand, for more than three hours, and Melvin D. Hildreth, local attorney and former president of the Circus Fans' Association.

But the scene was the same. The elephants looked as unconcerned as ever; the cats were in fighting trim and humor; Potomac Yards was full of cinders, and the performers were sun-tanned after a winter in Florida and in gay spirits.

The circus will be back in June.

Branzell Quits Fire-Chasing To Raise Pigs

After 30 years of fire-chasing, "Father" John W. Branzell is going to retire to the traditional farm and raise, not the usual chickens, but pigs.

Today he's scheduled to start his collection with a bang and a grunt in the form of a brood sow, which the men at No. 9 Engine House will turn over to him in the course of a farewell party. The party will be in the engine house, where Branzell has served for 25 of his 30 years with the District Fire Department. On hand will be many of the men he's worked with through the years, as well as Chief Stephen T. Porter.

Branzell's retirement was official Thursday. The 53-year-old engineer had completed 30 busy years, during which he was twice-decorated for heroism; once for his participation in the Knickerbocker Theater cavein, once for his bravery in the Kann's warehouse fire. So yesterday he was quite ready for the calm of his newly purchased farm in Laurel, Md., where the only excitement will be new sprouts in his victory garden and arrival of new litters of pigs.

"He's been talking about raising hogs ever since he came to the engine house," said A. M. Grunwell, one of the company at No. 9 who fondly referred to Branzell as "Father" yesterday. "So we decided that a sow would be the best gift we could send him off with. We're all sorry to see him go, though. He was a great guy to have around, always helped the boys when they needed help."

Branzell is father in actuality to a pair of servicemen: First Lieut. George Branzell, bombardier in North Africa, and Sergt. Frank Branzell, stationed with the Army Air Forces at Keesler Field, Miss.

Bill Sets Up Board To Examine All Lawyers for U. S.

Legislation setting up a board of legal examiners within the Civil Service Commission to supervise the employment of Federal lawyers was introduced yesterday by Senator Downey (Democrat) of California.

The bill would make the legal board virtually a miniature Civil Service Commission operating only with respect to lawyers. The board would be empowered to "determine and administer . . . regulations and procedures governing the examination, selection, appointment, promotion, transfer, reinstatement and status of attorneys in the classified service."

The measure was referred to the Civil Service Committee.

Funeral Today For Lieut. Wald

Services with military honors for Second Lieut. Charles Wald, 73, U. S. M. C., retired, will be held today at 11 a. m. at Fort Myer Chapel. Lieutenant Wald died in Bay Points, Fla. He will be buried in Arlington National Cemetery.

Lieutenant Wald, a native of Vienna, Austria, entered the Marine Corps in 1909, after he had served one term with the Army, and was retired in April, 1934, after 25 years of continuous service with the Leathernecks. He made his home at Bay Points, Fla., where his widow, Mrs. Alice A. Wald, lives.

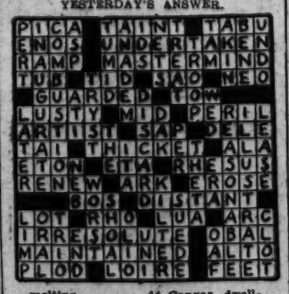
YESTERDAY'S ANSWER.



Tydings Seeks Puerto Rican Independence

By the Associated Press

Complete and absolute independence for Puerto Rico was proposed yesterday by Chairman Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, of the Senate Territories Committee.

Announcing in the Senate that he had introduced a bill to haul down the flag that has flown over the tropic sugar island since Spanish War days, Tydings asserted that "when Puerto Rico gets her independence, this Government will have exhibited modern concepts of civilization which are in line with the highest aspirations of the human race."

"There is no reason," he said, "why the independence of Puerto Rico, undertaken under concepts of modern helpfulness, should not be as successful as was independence for Cuba and the coming independence of the Philippines." The Senator was one of the authors of the bill for Philippine independence.

Like Philippine Act

The Puerto Rico bill in some respects follows the Philippine Independence Act. It demands a constitution guaranteeing freedom of religion, speech, press and assembly and safety of the rights of individuals and United States investments.

It proposes customs duties beginning one year after independence at 5 per cent of the normal rate on foreign products. The duties would increase 5 per cent each year to the collection of full tariffs in 20 years. Similar levies would be made by Puerto Rico on imports from the United States.

No definite date is set for freedom. Ultimate withdrawal of American sovereignty would occur on the Fourth of July following accomplishment of all preliminary steps. In the transition period a high commissioner appointed by the President of the United States would safeguard rights of the United States and her citizens.

Nearly Two Million Citizens

Nearly two million people, citizens of the United States by act of Congress, are crowded on this Caribbean island. About the size of the State of Connecticut, it has been made an Atlantic Gibraltar for defense of the Panama Canal. Naval, air and military bases would be retained by the United States and not transferred to the infant nation.

In the past 10 years the United States has expended nearly 300 million dollars in relief or assistance for the island. Geared to an export economy, it produces little of its own food. Virtually besieged for a time by German submarines and suffering also from the warbred shortage of ships, many Puerto Ricans have felt the pinch of hunger. Some 300,000 of the island's citizens are unemployed. A relief program now in the making calls for a congressional appropriation of 25 million dollars.

Reports of famine and suffering caused the Senate to send a special committee to the island to investigate social and economic conditions. Some members of the committee on their return said conditions there were beyond description and expressed fear of plague and starvation.

Tugwell Under Fire

The House has before it a resolution to inquire also into the political situation and into charges that Gov. Rexford Guy Tugwell has been attempting to set up a communistic state. The charges were made by Bolivar Pagan, resident commissioner of Puerto Rico, and others.

Members of the insular legislature this year unanimously adopted a resolution petitioning Congress to permit Puerto Ricans to determine their political future, after the war, if it did not appear feasible at this time.

Tydings' proposal for independence came a few weeks after President Roosevelt sent a special message to Congress asking more home rule for Puerto Rico. Governors elected by the citizens should replace appointed governors, the President said. Bills for Puerto Rican statehood and for a termination of Governor Tugwell's tenure also have been introduced at this session of Congress.

Chemical Aids Tooth Health, Doctor Says

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 2.—The conclusion that the addition of small amounts of fluorides to community drinking water can cause a marked decrease in the dental decay rate among children was reported today in the journal of the American Dental Association by Dr. Francis A. Arnold jr. of Bethesda, Md.

Dr. Arnold, an assistant dental surgeon of the United States Public Health Service, based the conclusion upon surveys in widely scattered areas of the country. They included cities where the water normally contains fluoride—a simple chemical substance, cities where the water is fluoride-free and a third group where the fluoride was added in carefully controlled amounts.

By comparison of the three groups of surveys Dr. Arnold said, "It was determined that dental caries is markedly less in children who have used throughout life a domestic water with the fluoride content or which is no higher than about one part per million," and "the addition of small amounts of fluorides (about one per million) to fluoride-free public water supplies for the purpose of partially controlling dental caries is strongly suggested on the basis of epidemiologic and experimental evidence."

Quiet Wartime Regime Prevails at White House

When the White House butler says "Dinner is served," it doesn't mean what it used to mean. Most of the time it's nothing more than a simple three-course meal for two or three persons, served not in the state dining room, or even in the family dining room on the first floor, but in the President's study on the second floor.

Except for the occasional visit of a South American President, social activity at the White House has disappeared. Roosevelt dines with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hopkins, Justice Byrnes, Judge Sam Rosenman, or perhaps with Grace Tully, his blue-eyed, white-haired private secretary. Mrs. Roosevelt is off-again, on-again, as usual.

A friend of General "Pa" Watson, aide to the President, sent him some finnan haddie the other day, and Watson passed it along to the President. "Meat," said Watson, "or anything that passes for meat, is as precious as gold these days." The President enjoyed the free finnan haddie.

If Grace Tully is there for dinner, it means work after dinner. On the average of two evenings a week, the dictation isn't finished in the daytime, and Grace stays over. For the war has not decreased the President's dictation. Jimmy Byrnes remarked the other day, "I don't see how he can handle so much paper work."

Fact is, the President is leaning heavily on letters, and cutting down interviews. His appointments run from 10:30 to lunch, with an occasional conference at 2 o'clock. But afternoons are reserved for dictating to Grace Tully. The only thing to throw this regimen out of gear is an afternoon press conference, a talk with a man like Anthony Eden—or the spring sunshine.

Sometimes the President swings around from his desk, takes a quick look at the sunshine over the south grounds, and says to his Scottie, "Let's go for a ride—what do you say, Falla?"

A Ride in the Country

This means a quiet tour into the country, without motorcycle escort, in a car which looks like anybody else's shiny limousine, and stops at the traffic lights like the car of any ordinary citizen.

Members of the President's intimate staff insist they see no change in him under the pressure of war. The war hasn't altered his mood or his methods. He still laughs heartily, eats well, and dictates methodically, with never a "'read that back to me."

Grace Tully explains it by saying the President is a psychologist, and he keeps a good temper for the sake of the people around him.

The slackened social activity doesn't shut out the house guests, however. Any day, Mrs. Roosevelt is likely to get a letter from old friends or relatives who are coming to town, and she replies, "Won't you stay with us?"

They do. They come for a day or two, sometimes for a week. But they go their ways, and see little of the President. He will dine with them once in the course of the visit, but the rest of the time, "dinner is served" for two or three in the private study.

In short, evenings are very quiet at the White House, and except for the President's own late hours at his desk, the electric light bill is the lowest in years.

Mrs. McLean on Russia

Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, owner of the Hope Diamond and mother-in-law of Senator Bob Reynolds of North Carolina, has been looking very dapper these days in her new air raid warden's uniform. She wears it, helmet and all, to dinner on all nights when an air raid alarm might be expected.

Incidentally, she also wears the Hope Diamond during air raid alerts. On these occasions, airplane spotters stomp through the ornate McLean mansion, which looks more like a museum than a residence, to take their position on the roof, while Mrs. McLean patrols the darkened streets, the Hope Diamond round her neck and two diamond bracelets, two inches wide, around her wrists.

Mrs. McLean is one of the most forthright wardens in her area. "One night," she says, "I found a light which nobody would turn off, so I just broke a window, went in and put that light out."

Mrs. McLean also has forthright views on other things, including the Russians. If Comrade Stalin could hear her, and if he believed she represented the American people, the Russians would not be overly encouraged to keep on fighting.

"These ——— Russians!" exclaims the owner of one of the largest diamonds in the world. "I tell Henry Wallace just exactly what I think of him for being so friendly to the Russians. He doesn't like it, but I tell him just the same.

"The other night he came for dinner, and I said: 'Now, Mr. Vice President, suppose you were in a barroom brawl and got rescued by a barroom bum. He might have saved your life. But would you take him home and let him share your home with your daughter and wife?'"

Nepotism on Capitol Hill

HERE is another batch of House of Representative nepotists who have billeted relatives on their payrolls:

Bob Doughton of North Carolina, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, has a cousin, J. Bain Doughton, as assistant clerk and stenographer of the House Ways and Means Committee, of which Congressman Doughton is chairman, salary, $2640 a year; Reba Doughton, daughter, clerk in Congressman Doughton's office, $800 a year.

George Sadowski of Michigan pays a daughter, Eleanor, $1340 a year for clerical work in his office.

Earle D. Willey of Delaware employs his wife, Agnes G., as his secretary at $3900 a year.

Leonard A. Allen of Louisiana has his wife, L. M. Allen, on his office payroll at $2100 a year, but also has two sons in overseas service.

Charles R. Clason of Massachusetts employs his wife, Emma P., as a clerical assistant at $2000 a year.

Merry-Go-Round

Palm Beach, Fla., might well be renamed "Rumi Beach." Tax-forgiveness is about all that lovely oasis of wealth talks about. . . . Nicest compliment Representative Warren Magnuson of Washington received on his report for the Naval Affairs Committee regarding shipbuilding bottlenecks came from the Navy Department, which Magnuson criticized for delays in submitting shipbuilding plans and specifications as well as in furnishing materials. . . . Undersecretary James V. Forrestal wrote: "I want to congratulate you both on the thoroughness with which your work was done and the restraint with which your criticism and suggestions were phrased." . . . A new sign posted in the Ellipse, favorite parking spot behind the White House for hundreds of Government workers, reads: "Park 90 degrees only." . . . Remarked one confused employee: "That's a fine sign to put up in winter weather."

Burtonsville Blaze

A barn and chicken house on the property of Edward Soper, Burtonsville, Md., were destroyed by fire yesterday. Firemen from the Sandy Spring, Hillendale and Silver Spring volunteer fire departments fought the blaze. No one was hurt and all animals were rescued.

Social Disease Rate Declines In the Navy

Social disease rates in the Navy has dropped considerably, a special subcommittee of the National Advisory Police Committee on Social Protection was told yesterday at the Statler Hotel.

Describing the Navy situation publicly for the first time, Comdr. T. J. Carter, U. S. N., in charge of preventive medicine in the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, reported that:

Sick-list admissions last year in the entire Navy, ashore and afloat, due to syphilis, gonorrhea and the lesser venereal infections totaled 36 per 1000 men, a decrease of 29 per cent from 1941 and 55 per cent since 1940.

"It is altogether possible that within the near future we shall reach the bottom of the rate curve, a point below which the number of admissions per 1000 probably will not fall," Commander Carter said. "Such an assumption is possibly on the pessimistic side, and of necessity does not take into account any now unknown control measures or medical weapons which might come into play."

"However," he warned, "even though the rate does not climb or fall significantly, when the military forces reach a level of, say, 10 million, we can expect to be required to handle about 350,000 to 400,000 cases each year."

Meeting with the Social Protection Sub-committee were officials of the Army, Navy, Selective Service, the War Manpower Commission, the United States Public Health Service, the International Association of Chiefs of Police, and law enforcement officers from all parts of the country.

Discussed at length were methods of local control of venereal disease through the repression of prostitution and closing of call houses.

Souter deplored the social taboos which in the past have forbidden open discussion of so serious a problem. "It might not have been necessary to call such a meeting today," he said.

Charles P. Taft, assistant director of the Office of Defense Health and Welfare Service, presided. A second meeting, scheduled this afternoon, will be held in Taft's offices.

Dottie Lamour And Baltimore Officer to Wed

By Louella O. Parsons,
International News Writer

Hollywood, April 2.—Dorothy Lamour, motion picture star, today disclosed her coming marriage to Capt. William Ross Howard 3d of Baltimore, former Maryland legislator and lumberman.

Over the long-distance telephone from Arrowhead Springs, where she has been on her vacation to be near her fiance, she told me of their plans.

"Bill hopes to get off Monday," she said, "so that we can get our license. We have no intention of eloping. We will be married at my mother's home in Coldwater Canyon. Because of the three days of waiting the ceremony will undoubtedly take place next weekend."

This is Dorothy's second marriage. She was married first to Herbie Kay, orchestra leader. She sang in his orchestra and came directly from night clubs to the movies.

Dotty met the handsome captain at Christmas time, and at a party at her house she confessed to me that she had fallen in love.

"But this is war, and I don't want to announce an engagement," she said.

The captain, who was once married to Louise Brooks, daughter of Mrs. Lionel Atwill, is very well connected socially. His father died some time ago and his mother, Mrs. William Ross Howard 2d, was here recently when he was gravely ill with pneumonia. She was captivated by her future daughter-in-law and gave her approval.

Captain Howard has been stationed at the San Bernardino Depot, and Dorothy has been staying at Arrowhead Springs to be near him.

The marriage will be a small one, with only Dorothy's immediate family and closest friends present. The bridegroom's mother is now in the East. Dorothy's maid of honor will be Laura Lamarr and the best man will be Lieut. John C. Bogan of Philadelphia, Captain Howard's brother-in-law now stationed in Long Beach. The bridal gown will be of blue, Captain Howard's favorite color.

Women Work at Y.M.C.A.

The manpower shortage has forced the Central branch of the Y. M. C. A. at 1736 G Street Northwest, to employe women as desk secretaries, L. W. DeCoast, general secretary announced. The two women, Mrs. Dorothy Smallwood and Miss Margaret A. Thomson, replaced two men who entered the armed services.

BIDS & PROPOSALS 6

Commissioners, D. C., Washington, March 29, 1943. Sealed proposals will be received at Room 509, District Building, until 2 o'clock p. m., E. W. T., April 19, 1943, and then publicly opened and read, for construction of 30-inch diameter prestressed concrete pipe watermain in South Capitol Street overlook and Fourth Street Southwest. Drawings and specifications may be obtained at Room 427, District Building, upon deposit of certified check for $10, payable to the Collector of Taxes, D. C. 29.30.31.1.2.3

W. P. W. PROJECT NO. D. C. 49-101. COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, WASHINGTON, D. C. Separate sealed bids for 30-inch diameter Trunk Watermain from 18th Street and Minnesota Ave. to Fifth Sterling Ave. and Stevens Rd., S.E., will be received by said Commissioners at Room 509, District Building, Washington, D. C., until 2 o'clock P. M., Apr. 19, 1943, and then publicly opened and read aloud. The Instructions to Bidders, Form of Bid, Form of Contract, Plans, Specifications and Forms of Bid Bond and Performance Bond may be examined and secured at the office of the Chief Clerk, Engineer Department, Room 427, District Building, and copies thereof obtained upon deposit of a certified check payable to Collector of Taxes, D. C., in the sum of $10.00 for each set. Upon returning such sets promptly, and in good condition, said deposits will be refunded. The Commissioners reserve the right to waive any informalities in or to reject any or all bids. Each bidder must deposit with his bid security in an amount not less than five per centum (5%) of the base bid in the form and subject to the conditions provided in the Instructions to Bidders. Time will not be a material factor in evaluating bids. (See paragraph 17 of Instructions to Bidders.) Attention of bidders is particularly called to the requirements as to conditions of employment to be observed and minimum wage rates to be paid under the contract. No bidder may withdraw his bid within sixty (60) days after the actual date of the opening thereof. G. M. THORNETT, Secretary, Board of Commissioners, D. C. March 29, 1943. 29.30.31.1.2.3

BUT YOU HAD NO BUSINESS TO BID NO-TRUMP
WHY HADN'T I? I HAD EVERYTHING GUARDED
YOU DID NOT! THAT'S WHY WE LOST GAME AND RUBBER.
I CAN TELL YOU JUST WHAT CARDS I HAD. NOW, LISTEN—
I AM NOT GOING TO LISTEN AT THIS TIME OF NIGHT
WELL, IT WAS YOU BROUGHT THE SUBJECT UP. I DIDN'T
I CAN TELL YOU EXACTLY WHAT YOU HAD. YOU HAD ACE, QUEEN OF—
I AM NOT GOING TO LISTEN AT THIS TIME OF NIGHT!

DIXIE DUGAN — Ride Home — By J. P. McEvoy and H. J. Striebel

WHY DIDN'T YOU ARREST THAT GANG TONIGHT? I HAD ALL OF THEM THERE—ALL BUT THAT BOZO WHO CALLS HIMSELF JOE DUGAN—WHAT'RE YOU WAITING FOR??
WE WERE WAITING FOR EVIDENCE—
BUT WE SURE GOT IT!
AND DON'T WORRY ABOUT JOE DUGAN—WE GOT HIM, TOO
OH—REALLY?
WE'LL TELL YOU ALL ABOUT EVERYTHING ON THE WAY HOME—WE RIDE FROM HERE
JOE!!!

OF COURSE, MY BOY, OF COURSE—
THIS IS HOT STUFF!
YOU CAN DEPEND ON A TIP FROM WALLOWAY HAWKEL—AHEM—YES INDEED!
OF COURSE I'M GOING TO TAKE THOSE 2,000 SHARES
BUT I'LL SPLIT WITH YOU YOUNGSTERS IF YOU WANT—
GOLLY, IF I JUST HAD SOME MONEY—BUT I HAVEN'T—O—
TUT-TUT, MY BOY—GO TO YOUR FRIENDS—
AFTER ALL YOU CAN MAKE A TIDY FORTUNE IN A WEEK—AND THEN PAY 'EM BACK—
OH WON'T THAT BE WONDERFUL? I MEAN REE-LY!
YEAH!

SUPERMAN — Hear Superman 5:45 P.M. Today—WOL — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

BUT HOW CAN YOU PERMIT THAT ENEMY SUB TO ESCAPE WITH THE SECRET WEAPON? I THOUGHT YOU HAD DEDICATED YOUR SUPER POWERS TO BATTLING THE AXIS?
SPEEDING ALONG FROM VESSEL TO VESSEL, SUPERMAN TIES THEIR ANCHORS TOGETHER...
GET TOGETHER!
THEN BEGINS ONE OF THE MOST ASTONISHING FEATS OF STRENGTH SINCE THE BEGINNING OF TIME! SINGLEHANDED, SUPERMAN TOWS THE LONG LINE OF VESSELS AFTER HIM AT TERRIFIC PACE....
EVEN I DON'T BELIEVE IT!
THE GREAT CONVOY REACHES ITS MURMANSK PORT IN MINUTES! HAS SUPERMAN HURTLES BACK TOWARD METROPOLIS....
I CAN'T FIGURE HIM OUT!
